Married

Mr. Francis H. Dike of Columbus, and Miss Nancy E. Stiles, of Delaware, were married last Saturday evening, at 184 South Ogden avenue, in the new home prepared for their future residence. Rev. A. F. Rogers, of Plain City, performed the ceremony, after which the newly married couple left for Niagara Falls for a couple of days. Mr. Dike is employed in the freight office of the B. & O. Railroad.

The wedding of Jessie W. Scheck and Mr. Clarence Moorehead of Norfolk, Va., took place at the Glenwood parsonage at noon Tuesday, June 22.

The marriage of Miss Myrtle A. Norris, of this city, and Arthur J. Freeze, of Dayton, Ohio, was solemnized June 20th, at 12:30 p. m., at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ada B. Norris, 1968 Floral Ave., Rev. C. F. Bowman, pastor of Glenwood M. E. Church, performing the ring ceremony. Mrs. C. F. Bowman and Miss Virginia Young, a friend of the bride, were the only guests outside of the immediate family. The bride looked lovely in her wedding gown of white georgette. She carried a beautiful bouquet of pink and white carnations. A bountiful wedding diner was served immediately after the ceremony. During the war, Mr. Freeze was stationed at the base hospital, Camp Sherman, for about 14 months, then went overseas with the Hospital Unit No. 28, spending 8 months in France. He formerly made his home with his mother in Dayton. The bride and groom left in the afternoon for Dayton and will go to housekeeping at once in a home prepared by the groom. Having deferred the wedding trip until the later part of July.

The Glenwood King's Heralds will have a picnic at Glenwood Park on Wednesday, June 30th. All members be sure and come.

The G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and their auxiliaries had their State meeting at Denison and Urichsville, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Our Hilltop attorney and real estate man, Rev. J. Berry, delivered an address on "Patriotism" before the Ladies auxiliaries of the state, after which they pinned on him one of their badges which he wore home. He also assisted in the Memorial service for the Sons of Veterans of Ohio that died in the last year, delivering a short address in memoriam in honor of the Columbus Sons of Veterans that died in the last year, and making the opening prayer and pronouncing the benediction. The services were held in the U. B. Church which was packed to the doors, many not being able to get inside. The parade was one of the largest that has been for years in the State of Ohio. The music was fine, having the old Drum Corps of Columbus and 12 or 15 of the best bands in Ohio. A lady of the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary sang two solos before that organization with a compass of voice and power with marvelous sweetness.

They adjourned to meet at Greenfield next year. There are many Sons of Veterans that are not in the organization that ought to be in to perpetuate their father's memory. It seems that a child's natural love for their father would bring them in without further invitation. X.

GROWTH MUST BE CHECKED

Nature's Wisdom in Limiting Reproduction of Any One Species of Living Organisms.

If an organism, be it cattle, fish or insects, were to increase at its normal rate without hindrance, it would in a short while cover the whole surface of the world. That form of life would eventually be the only one, and it would be all-powerful. A strong specimen of an oyster will produce 16,000,000 eggs, and may easily have a grown family of half a million! Herrings and cod, and indeed most fish, multiply very quickly. Any pair of fish may have a family of many millions. When Christopher Columbus left America at the close of his second voyage he left a few pairs of cattle at San Domingo. The descendants of these on the Argentine pampas, to say nothing of other parts of America, were supposed to number 12,000,000 at the end of the eighteenth century! During the mouse plague in South Australia some years ago, a farmer put down some poisoned wheat, and the next day found 23,000 mice lying dead round his premises. Seventy thousand were slain in another wheat yard, and it soon increased to many millions.

Victory for Tact.

Speaking of nurses, it is surprising how much a tactful nurse can accomplish with little children, when an equally learned nurse can do almost nothing. Two little children—they were very little—were about to have their temperatures taken for the first time. Mother could not be with them and the two little things were bewildered and frightened and began to scream wildly. The nurse present insisted that she take their temperature in the regular way and they kept on screaming.

Then walked in a young nurse who was still training, but who understood children. "Why not take the temperature under their arms?" she said. "See dear, I'm going to give you a little gun to carry under your arm for a minute; both of you are going to have a little gun. Now you'll be little soldiers."

The screams died out at once, they proudly smuggled "their little guns" under their arms and the nurse got their temperature.—Springfield Union.

Reward for "Hot Air."

"Just look at that rooster," remarked the duck; "since he's begun crowing he's had his statue placed on the top of the barn."—Farm and Home.

Next Sunday evening at Hill Crest Baptist special chorus numbers will be rendered by the choir, after which the choir will take a vacation for three months, it being Mr. Knox's usual custom when he had charge of the music at the First Baptist Church, for 20 years, to free himself of any responsibility on the part of the music for a period of time during the summer months.

Young people of the Hilltop will have a splendid opportunity if they wish to avail themselves to learn music, when the choir will assemble again the first of October. High-class music and oratorio music will be studied, testing of voices will commence at the present adjournment of choir and continue for the summer. A glorious opportunity for anyone with a good voice—any one with a musical talent should not let this pass. Mr. E. Ray Evans and Mr. Albert Peake both gifted members of the choir, will in turns and jointly see that solos, duets, quartets, etc., will be provided for at all services for the next three months.

MR. GOSLINGTON AIRS VIEWS

Old Gentleman's Philosophy of Life Has Something in It Very Much Worth While.

This morning I met walking along the street a man who was laughing; not at something he saw, but just laughing to himself at something he had in his mind, at a happy thought. His face was inclined downward a little and he slowed down a little in his gait, as he had become absorbed in what he was thinking about; but now, as he passed the peak of this enjoyment, he lifted his head again to its usual level and strode on again at his usual gait; his face, however, still smiling. Fortunate is the man that has in his heart a spring that bubbles happy thoughts.

Every time I give the brush boy in my barber shop a nickel I feel ashamed, for myself and for him.

For him, because he does his work in a careless, inefficient manner; for myself, because I continue to pay for such service. And he's a nice boy at that; cheerful, well-meaning, polite, but he simply doesn't know that he isn't living up to his privileges, that he isn't doing the best he could.

I don't know what I can do about it—nothing, I suppose. Having started giving, I must keep on. I would like to tell him that the one and only way for anybody, man or boy, to get on in the world is to do his work, whatever it may be, to the very best of his ability; but this is something that I can't pluck up the courage to do.—New York Sun and Herald.

Hot Off the Wire.

The angry citizen had been trying to talk to a party over the phone, but was interrupted by someone breaking in on him.

"Who the blink-blank is the dingbatted blithering idiot on the end of this line?" yelled the angry citizen.

"I'm sure I do not know who you are!" replied a sweet feminine voice.—Baltimore Sun.

Sunday night was a gala time at Burgess Avenue United Brethren Church. It was Children's Day. Despite the weather which was more than threatening, the little chapel was filled and many left for lack of room. Within, all was joy and gladness; flowers, flowers, bright-faced, happy boys and girls, even the birds were represented. Grown people were there, too, but all they were expected to do was "just sit still," and they did their part well. The first part of the evening was devoted to the tiny tots who appeared on the stage, did their stunts, spoke their "pieces" or sang their songs and did so well that if the program had closed with them, everybody would have been well pleased.

And then the pageant. The committee in charge had chosen "God's Flowerland" as the big offering of the evening; a wise choice, indeed, and wonderfully well justified by the rendition given. There is not space to name all who took part nor to call attention to the many excellencies displayed in the production. All did their parts well. And the lesson of the day still lingers; the lonely, sad wanderers, who saw the flowers and butterflies and heard their sweet songs, and breathed their essence of hope, and joy, and truth, and beauty, were constrained to go along with them to the court of the King, and learn there their lesson of service, which made their lives so joyful. There, at the court of the King, all joined in a glad, glorious burst of "Hosanna," and there we leave them. Their lesson well taught; the memory of the beautiful scene will last.

Not the least interesting among the side-lights of the occasion was the announcement that soon the chapel is to be moved, to make room for a larger, more commodious building, so that by the time another Children's Day rolls around, all may find room.

Don't Worry About the Gas Situation

We can furnish you the proper equipment for your kitchen so that you may have gas as long as there is any to burn. If they shut it off you can burn coal or wood in the same stove. We sell the greatest combination coal and gas ranges in the world.

"Moore's" and the "Estate"

These stoves are the "last word" in combination ranges, having every known improvement necessary for quick and convenient operation, and the saving of fuel, which at the present cost is quite essential.

Two complete stoves occupying the space of only one, and ready at any minute to be converted from one fuel to the other. The cost of installation is just slightly in advance of either a gas or coal range singly, and guarantees you against any fuel shortage. Come in and see these ranges now on display, and become acquainted with their many advantages.

Patsy's Perfume

By HARMONY WELLER

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"The only talent I have," sighed Patsy Van Bureon, "is my nose!"

"Nose?—a talent?" Joe Robinson exclaimed. "I'd never call mine by that name, Pat!" he laughed, examining his own too prominent nose in an opposite mirror.

"Well—'by any other name' it smells as sweet," Patsy retorted. "But I don't mean my nose, itself—I mean my sense of smell. It is surely developed to a degree that might be classed among the talents."

"Much good it'll do you, methinks," Joe consoled her. "Now if it were your sense of taste you might be a tea-taster or a judge of good liquor—if the latter weren't among the extinct professions."

"I can see plainly that I am going to get no satisfaction from struggling for an outlet for my creative ability—which I know I have in spite of all you home folks' pessimism on the subject! Something tells me to use this extraordinary sense of smell of mine—but how?"

Joe seemed perplexed. "That's all very well, but how can one make a living—or even an approach to one from it?"

"I suppose," said Patsy, "you are not far enough advanced to conceive of a girl going in for perfumes and fragrances that might appeal to the individual personality. Men and women have very distinct colors in their auras, and if colors have tones, one for each, as has been proven you know, why should not colors have perfumes? And then, to follow it up, why should not I, with my finely attuned sense of smell, be able to detect the fragrance of an individual's aura colors and try to duplicate them in extracts or powders or toilet accessories?"

Joe scratched his head, impolitely, but his eyes looked thoughtful. "Yes—I suppose it could be developed, but every one would think you were crazy and only the nutty ones would come to you, wouldn't they?" he asked, half in jest, half in earnest. He was fond of Patsy, his chum from childhood, and he did not want to seem too hard on her.

"Perhaps it would be difficult, at first, Joe. But I don't have to make an immediate living, you know, with father and mother to take care of me. And it has been my experience in watching the development of any of the arts or any phase of them, as soon as you begin to educate people in the direction that they reach, you find many who have already been interested, but for lack of some one of understanding have kept it to themselves."

"That's true, too. Human beings are afraid of being ridiculed, and they frequently smother their best selves and sit about making trivial small talk instead of opening up what might prove to be an enlightening subject."

"Why, Joe, even you are beginning to think," Patsy remarked, patting him affectionately.

"Even I," Joe admitted, nodding. "But you just go to it, Patsy, and if I can help you, I'll do it."

"Thanks—I'll probably need you, Joe," Patsy said. "But now, I am making a study of the fragrance of colors. For instance, a red rose smells quite different from a white one. I have a lot of tests I want to make today, so—so long, Joe."

Patsy almost danced off to her little third floor studio room, where, all alone, she had been working out her theory of colors, perfumes and human auras. Until now she had said almost nothing about her intentions, although it was known that she had a wonderfully esthetic development in her sense of smell.

In time, her plans took effect in the form of a diminutive shop and studio where she handled exclusive perfumes, potpourri, fragrant powders, and where she made up bowls of dried petals from gardens of individuals, preserved wedding bouquets, etc. In this way she believed she would come in contact with persons who cared for fragrance, and in finding a common meeting ground she could learn much of individual tastes and preferences.

"One thing that amuses me in my superficial observation of men is that they like red. Men and boys love red roses, red neckties, red carpets. Also I have learned that most men like a faint, a suitable perfume on the women they go about with, but, for fear of being thought effeminate, poetic or artistic, they pretend not to. The more cultivated the individual, the less easily suited he is in perfume. We are beginning to appreciate the most subtle sort of odors, odors that a generation or two ago would have been hardly perceptible to the senses at all. A person whose artistic development has been neglected is apt to need the heavy scent of a tube rose or a cinnamon flower or some equally compelling odor."

Patsy explained all these observations to Joe, who was becoming really interested in the little studio shop. He had helped her fit it up; he had tacked up curtains, painted furniture to make it harmonize with the surroundings and he found himself spending every spare moment in the pleasant environment of Patsy's shop.

"What do you know about my aura, Patsy?" he asked, suddenly, one day when he was helping her.

"More than I'd care to tell you, Joe."

Joe looked up at her. The tone of her voice had seemed strange.

"If it tunes in with the color of your blush just now it must be some aura," he remarked, half merrily, half seriously. Then he went over to her where she sat among baskets of rose petals. "Patsy, why don't you make a study of the flower of all emotions—love? I—I love you so much and I've been afraid to tell you till I heard that note in your voice just now as you spoke of—of me. Won't you promise to marry me? You do love me—and I'll help you all I can, dear."

Patsy's blush had deepened in color and her eyes had gathered a wonderful light. It—it might be interesting to—to find that perfume, Joe," she said, as he stepped close to her.

And then, for long moments, the study of the fragrance of mere rose petals from other people's gardens was forgotten.

Her Plans Took Effect in the Form of a Diminutive Shop.

Children, when teething and suffering with swollen gums, will be greatly refreshed by cool fruit juice or scraped apple. A worrying baby is often suffering for frequent drinks of pure, cool water. It is well to remember that young children and animals cannot tell us what they need, and often suffer because of the carelessness of those who should be responsible

Obituary

Regina Sparks, daughter of Dr. L. J. and Mary Sparks, of Martha, Ky., was born August 30, 1866 in Lawrence County, Kentucky and departed this life at Grant Hospital, Columbus, Ohio, June 10, 1920, following an operation, having lived 54 years, 7 months and 30 days.

The deceased was one of a family of ten children, five of whom survive: Laban of Lawrence County., Ken.; Dr. Landford Sparks of Nebraska; Sarah Bishop of Oklahoma; Dr. Wm. Sparks of Bruin, Ken. and Dr. J. L. Sparks of Huntington, W. Va.

Early in life she gave her heart to her Master and joined the United Baptist church and later removed her letter to the Nazarene church of this city. She was united in marriage to Dennis Lyon, of Elliott County, Ky., December 8th, 1888, and there spent all of their married life except the past seven years, part of which was spent on a Franklin County farm and later they come to Columbus, their present home. To this union were born six children, all of whom are living to mourn the loss of their devoted mother. They are: Mrs. Myrtle Ison, Mrs. Virgie Thompson and Mrs. Gertrude McFann, all of Columbus, Dr. O. T. Lyon of Huntington, W. Va. and William and Elisha at home.

There is left to mourn her loss a husband, six children and four grandchildren. Both father and mother preceded her to the Great Beyond. It can be truly said that she was a devoted mother and a faithful wife and daughter. Seldom is it given to anyone to be so greatly admired and loved by those of closest relationship. To know her was to feel her wonderful life as a follower of God for she experienced the new heart and new life in Christ Jesus.

She was a great sufferer even to the last and bore her sufferings calmly and patiently, feeling the uplifting and supporting hands of the Great Physician on whom she depended and always urging others to seek the same source of strength.

Greatly will she be missed and greatly will heaven be blessed by her presence there.

"Not changed, but glorified"! Oh boauteous language.
For those who weep.
Mourning the loss of some dear face departed,
Fallen asleep.
Hushed into silence, never more to comfort the hearts of men,
Gone, like the sunshine of another country,
Beyond our "ken."
In the clear morning of that other country,
In Paradise.
With the same face that we have loved and cherished,
She shall arise!
Let us be patient, we who mourn, with weeping,
Some vanished face.
The Lord has taken, but to add more beauty and a divine grace.

All Hilltop children are invited to the two Daily Vavation Bible Schools beginning Tuesday, July 6th. Good Bible stories told in a non-sectarian way by trained teachers; good songs memorized; health and habit talks; a kindergarten for the children between the ages of 3 and 7 years; sewing, raffia work, weaving, crocheting, etc., for younger and older girls in the schools; woodwork, kite-making, manual training and weaving for the younger and older boys in the schools. Ball games, picnics, swimming, playground, and kindergarten parties for all children at some time during the summer with teachers always in charge. Stereopticon pictures shown each week, only the best of pictures!

A nominal fee covering less than the expenses of each school will be charged as follows: $2.00 for the first child in the family and $1.00 for each additional child up to $5.00 which is the maximum charge for the summer.

Remember these things—Both schools open Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, July 6th. The fee of $2.00 must be paid on the opening day, except where a family sends more than one child in which case half of the total amount is due the first day and the balance the first day of the fourth week.

The little Gibson sisters will give an entertainment at the West Broad M. E. Church on Friday, June 25, 1920.

Geo. W. Shockey has secured the contract for plastering 1000 double houses at Indiana Harbor, a suburb of Chicago, the contract is with the William Evans Co. and amounts to $85,000. It will take until December 15th of this year to complete the job.

Rev. Wenrich, pastor of Hilltop English Lutheran church, was unanimously elected at the recent Synod of that denomination as treasurer for the 13th consecutive time.

Councilman M. W. Westlake, has entered the race for nomination for Congressman from this District. As Mr. Westlake's record in the City Council during the past years is well known to our citizens, we feel assured that he is deserving of the support of all his fellow townsmen, and his election will add honor to the Hilltop.

The Summer Vacation Bible School is the best method I know about for the church to serve the community during the summer weeks. Glenwood church desires to see the project succeed.

Mr. Loudenslager has sold the Harris Avenue greenhouse to Mrs. Wilson, who will conuct it in the future.

A five-pound piece of ham will make several meals. A thick slice may be parboiled, covered with a mixture of brown sugar and mustard, using a teaspoonful of mustard to four of sugar, then bake for an hour or more in a moderate oven. The ham bone may be cooked with vegetables for a boiled dinner or simply cooked with cabbage. The bits of ham may be minced and pounded, then seasoned well and used for sandwich filling.

Stuffed Dates.—Use fondant to replace the date stone removed or a blanched almond or a mixture of chopped nuts and fondant. Roll in granulated sugar and serve as a dessert.

Absent-Minded Man.

"Rather absent-minded, isn't he?"

"Extremely so! Why, the other night when he got home he knew there was something he wanted to do, but he couldn't remember what it was until he had sat up over an hour trying to think!"

"And did he finally remember it?"

"Yes—he discovered that he wanted to go to bed early!"—London Tit-Bits.

Victoria's Profession.

Since 1914 the number of factories in Victoria has, according to figures supplied by the Australian government statistician increased from 4,208 to 5,730, or about 36 per cent, while the average number of hands employed has increased 60 per cent, and now totals about 122,349. The value of the plant and machinery installed in the factories has increased to $132,789,052, or about 100 per cent more than the value fifteen years ago; and the value of the output has risen from $112,393,235 to $389,750,390, or about 247 per cent, while wages paid have increased about 194 per cent.

City Man Leads as Beef Eater.

According to figures compiled by the United States department of agriculture the man in the city eats two-thirds more beef, veal and mutton than the man in the country, but the man in the country eats two-thirds more pork than the man in the city and one-half more poultry.

refused to answer. "I'm here merely as messenger boy," he announced. "Mother and the girls want you to come up this evening for a moonlight dance on the veranda. So long!"

That evening was to Louise the most wonderful time of her life—and the most miserable. Its wonder lay in Bob's singling her out for dance after dance and begging her to sit with him on the top veranda step when the little home-made cakes and fruity punch were served. Its misery consisted in her fancy that Peggy's eyes followed her reproachfully, and in her own relentless judgment, which condemned a man who flirted with one girl when he was engaged to another.

Long she lay awake while the cool night breeze, laden with the fragrant sweetness of the pines, swept in through the window, fanning her hot cheeks.

Her last waking thought was one of determination to avoid Bob Turner in the future. Peggy should have no cause to regret giving her this wonderful month.

Louise, with a singleness of purpose, carried out her plans. When Bob called she was busy "writing letters."

Then, a few days before the breakup of the house party, Louise had an adventure which resulted very unexpectedly—to Louise. She had been trying not to feel envious as she heard the other girls telling their plans.

Despondently, she left the others at last and wandered down an overgrown path into the ravine which ran for miles, bisecting Glen mountain. Careless of distance she rambled on, never doubting her ability to retrace her steps in a place where a trail was more or less plainly evident.

Now in the mountains, when the sun sets, it sets quickly—simply drops behind some peak and is gone. Suddenly, to her bewilderment, Louise found that she was being enveloped in twilight. Hastily she turned back, and was amazed to find that, while apparently there had been only one way to come, several trails offered themselves for her return.

Startled and realizing that she was on the verge of undergoing that dreadful experience, being lost in the mountains, she sat down on a lichen covered rock to recover her thoughts.

Lost in the mountains! Well, a search party would find her ultimately. She wished she had left word that she was going down into the ravine.

Hark! What was that? Was it the wind in the trees, or did she faintly hear a voice? Trembling a little with apprehension lest she was mistaken she made a trumpet of her hands and called. Somebody answered. Again she called—again the answer, nearer. Then followed the rustle of trampled underbrush, and a dim form appeared on the edge of the precipice.

A moment later her hands were imprisoned in those of Bob. "The girls missed you and I had a hunch you were in the ravine. I've walked miles along the cliff calling."

Louise started to speak—choked—then managed to get out: "Nothing ever sounded as good as your voice!"

"It was 'a voice on the mountain top' for fair," he hummed. Then: "We must get back and relieve the anxiety of the others," he said. "But first, I am going to take advantage of this opportunity when I have you to myself to say something. I love you, Louise; I love you!"

"Why—why—but Peggy?" gasped the girl.

"Don't breathe a word," he said. "but I'm hoping Peggy will be my sister. She is as good as engaged to my brother Tom, who is coming up in August."

Louise couldn't speak for sheer happiness.

"You remember the next words of the song you sang?" went on Bob. "'Let us all unite in love.' How soon, dear, can we unite in marriage? My whole family are in love with you, as well as I, and there isn't a bit of use in wasting the rest of the summer."

So tenderly he looked at her that Louise capitulated utterly. Besides, what a choice she had to make! A furnished city room in August, or—Bob and the mountains!

"I'll marry you whenever you say!" she promised.

A Voice on the Mountain Top

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Louise Salisbury sat a little apart from the merry crowd who were gathered on the roomy veranda of the Stafford cabin this first evening of Peggy Stafford's house party.

She was wondering just how she, a sober, serious music teacher, had the good luck to be included in this happy-go lucky, carefree party. Of course, she had always known Peggy Stafford. And now Peggy had invited her to Glen Mountain cabin for the whole month of July!

Louise made up her mind to throw aside her habitual gravity and for the next few weeks imitate the light-heartedness of the other girls, who were never serious two minutes in succession, bandying jokes about their clothes, their allowances, their love affairs—often all in the same breath. Acting on this determination, she rose and pulled her low chair nearer to the group of girls.

At that instant from somewhere on the mountain above, a voice resonant as if projected through a megaphone, called down: "Hello, everybody!"

"The Turners have come!" cried Peggy. "They have the cabin above."

Moved by a sudden impulse, quite possibly the result of her recent thoughts, Louise picked up the megaphone lying on the veranda railing.

"Hark, I hear a voice,
Way up on the mountain top, tip-top
Descending down below—descending down below!"

she sang in her rich contralto voice.

The girls clapped and from above came an applauding "Bravo! Bravo! Encore!" But Louise blushing, shook her head. She had unwittingly overheard an aside spoken to Peggy by her aunt, who was acting as chaperon. "I suppose now the Turners have come, my duties will begin in earnest," she had said mischievously, and Peggy had answered quickly: "Hush, auntie, nobody knows yet."

Next morning, just as the girls were finishing breakfast, a cheerful whistle sounded from the veranda and a tall figure loomed in the doorway.

"Top of the morning!" and Louise thought to herself that never before had she seen personified the very spirit of the out-of-doors. Tall, sun-browned, radiating health and optimism Bob Turner was certainly a youth to captivate any maiden. Lucky Peggy, she thought. Money—a piquant beauty—friends galore—this wonderful mountain cabin—and now Bob Turner! To some people came everything.

Peggy was leading him in by the hand and introducing him to the others, Betty Laurel, Kit Angell, Virginia Wales, Sally Tucker and Louise Salisbury. As Louise shyly advanced a slim hand, Bob held it for a second in his. "So this is the one who serenaded me last night," he said.

"How odd! How did you know?" a babble of voices cried out the very thought in Louise's mind.

But Bob only shook his head and Superstition Protected Animals.

Europeans never eat dogs as all Asiatics do, says Andre Tridon, psycho analyst, because of a pact our prehistoric ancestors made with their feared and ferocious wild dog neighbors. It was a habit with those ancestors of ours to hold sacred and inviolate what they feared, provided the fear some thing was too powerful to be exterminated. Custom has held us to that ancient alliance through the ages since. Savage wild buffalo once ranged India, probably outnumbering the human population six to one. Propitiation, the Hindus figured was their cue. The Indians never eat buffalo or cattle, the cousins of the buffalo.

LEARNS IN HOURS OF PLAY

Childish Pastimes Really Serious Factors in the Development of the Adolescent Human.

The child has a right to play. Free "unbossed" play is the most serious business of the child. It is the way in which his faculties are best brought to their highest capabilities. A child like a kitten, is a play-formed animal. The kitten follows the string or ball because nature has implanted certain instincts which make it necessary for the kitten to learn to follow moving objects with accuracy. Practice in following moving objects, which we call play, is the serious business of a kitten. On the same principle the play of the child develops his muscles, his mentality, and in the team play of later childhood, his sense of justice and of right social relationships. Practically all the work of a child should be undertaken in the play spirit and should be the result of his inner desire to do this or that thing. To those who feel that this modern principle of education, if strongly emphasized, will result in a lack of principle on the part of a child, it may be said that the child will constantly impose upon himself harder tasks, requiring concentration and attention to detail exercise of the imagination, and constructive ability, than the severest educator of the old school would dare to impose on him.—Exchange.

Not So "Funny."

A ludicrous error in common usage is the employment of the word "funny" in the sense of odd or strange or curious, when the context shows that the occurrence to which reference is made is anything but funny. Funny means affording fun; provoking laughter; comical; ludicrous; facetious. (Standard dictionary), but frequently one hears such sentences as the following: "Isn't it funny that Robinson, who was born on Lincoln's birthday, should have died on the same day as the president?" and "It was funny that he escaped all dangers here, and was killed in another city." Certainly there was nothing "funny" in the tragedy. "It was curious that he escaped," etc., would be the proper form. Instead of the word "funny" use in such cases curious, odd, strange, peculiar, or unusual.

Calcium Chloride for Damp Cellars.

Take old preserve cans and put in them calcium chloride, one pound of this salt sufficing for a large cellar. Calcium chloride attracts the water from the air which collects in the cans. This, however, is not poured away, but is evaporated on a strong fire, whereby the salt crystallizes again. It then becomes fit for renewed use. Especially for potato cellars this process is very serviceable since the sprouting of the potatoes, though not entirely prevented, is considerably retarded thereby.

Betty Prescribes the Rest Cure

By Corona Remington

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"How many times have you asked her, Dukie?"

His strong face looked sagged and discouraged as he answered dismally: "Last night makes fourteen."

"Well, that's just what's the matter. You've shown her you're too anxious. Remember, she's awfully pretty and awfully young and awfully rich, Dukie, and she doesn't know what it is to want for anything, and she also has suitors galore," Elizabeth Austin said positively. "Now you let me try to do some matchmaking. What she needs is the rest cure. Keep away from her for awhile and let her think she's lost you for good and forever."

"But suppose some pinhead of a dub cuts in?"

"Wait until he does. In the meantime hunt the prettiest girl you can find. Take her to the theater about six times a week and to church on Sundays."

"Betty, it won't work. Won't you play the role of latest conquest? We've always been such pals and that would add to her suspicions. Let's begin this evening. Have you any other engagement?"

"Not exactly. I told him last night I'd phone at five whether I could go or not, so I'll tell him I can't. We'll give him a little rest cure too," she laughed.

That was the beginning of a whirl of excitement. Every day they went somewhere and scanned the human horizon for a glimpse of Edith. Suddenly one evening Betty leaned toward her companion.

"She's in that box party," she said; "third to the left on the other side

Betty Did Her Best.

Don't look, you goose! Talk to me as if I were the only human being in the whole building."

"Let's shadow her if we can and go to dinner at the same place," suggested her friend, eagerly.

They succeeded in getting a table directly in front of the Maynard party and Betty did her best. She was in her gayest, most sparkling mood, and Carter instinctively responded.

That night when Edith had dismissed her maid she threw herself across the bed and indulged in long-pent-up weeping.

"That's five times since last Tuesday I've seen them together, and he hasn't even phoned me once this week," she sobbed into her pillow. "I might have known she'd get him in the end; they're been chums all their lives and everybody said they'd marry eventually."

When she awoke next morning her maid was standing at her bedside holding a telegram in her hand. Languidly Edith opened it and read:

"Will arrive tonight. Expect to be in town two or three weeks.

"JACK WINTON."

She determined that Jack should see nothing of her depression; not if it killed her, so when he arrived he found her in her most vivacious mood, a dim flush of excitement in her cheeks.

"Gee, Edith, but you look fine!" he exclaimed, his eyes shining with admiration.

"And while you're here I'm going to devote my whole time to you. Just think, Jack, three years since I've seen you!"

Jack and Edith were together incessantly. They went here and there and everywhere and seemed like two happy children.

"I told you someone else would cut in," Dukie groaned to Betty, "and anybody can see she's crazy about the dub. Who is he, anyway?"

"I don't know. Why don't you go over and get introduced?"

"Thank you, I'm not dying to meet him. I might punch his little head in for him."

"He's not little, Dukie; he's as big as you are," corrected Betty.

They were interrupted by the jingling of the telephone. Betty took down the receiver mechanically.

"Someone wants to speak to you," she said after a moment, handing him the instrument.

"Is that you, Dukie?" came in dulcet tones over the wire. "I knew I'd find you there," she laughed. "Well, I'm going to give a reception Wednesday night in honor of Jack Winton, and I want you to be here. He's a perfect dear, and I'm crazy for you to meet him, so don't disappoint me, Dukie."

"May I come a little early?" asked Dukie. "I've something to say to you."

"Yes; run over at six and take dinner with us. Goodby."

"I told you so!" He looked at Betty with horrible eyes. "It was Edith; she's going to give a reception in honor of Jack Winton—wants me to come. I know she'll announce her engagement."

When the time at last approached, and Duke found himself standing at the Maynard door, his nerve deserted him entirely, and his courage oozed quickly away. When Edith saw him his face was colorless, and his breath coming in little gasps, while his hands nervously gripped his hat.

"Do tell me what's the matter," she asked, her own face turning pale.

"Is it too late," he managed at last, "or have I still the right to ask you to marry me?"

"Of course you have the right, and this time I'll say 'yes' for a change." She smiled mischievously up at him.

After he had expressed his joy in the usual and approved fashion, Edith started toward the door.

"Come," she said; "I refuse to wait another minute. You must meet my cousin, Jack Winton, from California. He's my pal cousin, you know."

PROUD OF COUNTRY'S PAST

Why Belgians Delight in Processions and Cavalcades That Recall the Land's Bygone Glories.

Asked to pluck the prettiest flowers of our Belgian folk lore, I stand blinded and hesitate. What shall I choose in this bouquet, over-rich in its mingling of brilliant colors and tender hues? Shall it be pearls of sacred mistletoe fallen beneath the druid's knife; lilies grown in the shadow of convents and monasteries; roses reddened with the blood of tourneys and the carnage of battle; or, perchance, pale daisies of the fields sprung up unheeded amid the cow pasture? All equally are precious, writes Louis Lagusse de Locht in the London Times. Daughters of a fertile land, seared in the course of ages by storms let loose from the four corners of the earth, are they not the expression, the poetry, the sap of love and hate, the very soul, in a word, of a people fashioned by martial blows and bathed in the sunshine of idealism?

Every Belgian is thrilled by the past. It is his staff and bread of life. Hence his love of cavalcades, joyous entries and processions, the ever recurring delight of most of our villages. Great taste is often displayed in the ordering of these parades, in the building of the triumph—to which Rubens and Jordaens did not scorn to devote their talent. And it is as if the figures of legend and history which pass through our streets had stepped down from the canvas of old masterpieces to be closer to the caresses of the crowds.

Sometimes the ceremony represents but an episode, a scene of chivalry or of mystery from the middle ages. In Bruges, suddenly awakened from its melancholy miracle of the holy blood, the triumphal escort of a prince consecrated to the conquest of the holy land, moves in a rolling stream of glistening steel amid the glamor of rich silks and precious broideries, the clashing of arms and the embrazen peal of trumpets.

What a Trout Brought About

By CORONA REMINGTON

© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Stop that! Stop that, I say, or I'll shake you myself!"

Charles Dawson stopped it at once and in amazement looked up into the purple face of a very pretty, very young girl who was standing at the water's edge.

"Can't you see those signs, 'Don't trespass,' all around the lake?"

"Oh, you call this a lake, do you?"

"Yes. It's my lake. Don't get flippant."

"I'm not. I assure you that I had no idea of making trouble and I most humbly apologize."

"But why are you trespassing?" she asked, still unappeased, but inwardly melted by the earnest, tanned face looking down at her.

"Well, to tell the truth—" He hesitated. "To tell the truth my one mania is fishing, and I believe I'd almost risk my life if I thought the chances were fair for a good catch. And there were so many signs not to trespass around this—er—lake that I was convinced the fishing was good. The more stringent the warnings the better the fishing—always."

"Did you catch any?" asked the girl.

At that instant she heard a vigorous flopping in the grass at her feet and, stooping, saw one of her most beautiful trout gasping its last. With a shriek she grabbed it and threw it back into the water.

"We only put those fishes in there yesterday and they have to multiply before we start fishing them out."

"Heavens! It's getting worse and worse!" the man said desperately. "I assure you my intentions were not as bad as my actions. Is there anything I can do to prove my contrition?"

His face was so serious that the girl was tempted to laugh for the first time during the interview.

"Yes," she said after a moment's thought, "but it's awfully big pay for one little trout."

"Name the price," he answered unmoved, "and if it's within human power to do it I'll do it."

"I think you're awfully nice," she said irrelevantly.

"Thank you," he smiled. "I think you're—"

"Let me tell you all about it. We'll sit down here," she interrupted, moving over to a fallen tree nearby.

It Was a Wonderful Afternoon.

"First, I'm Miss Marjorie Randall."

"What! Lawyer Randall's daughter, from Condon?"

"Yes. Do you know dad?"

"I should say I did. We've played many a game of billiards together at the club."

"But let's get down to business. This is awfully important," the girl went on. "To begin with, poor mother's had a dreadfully severe breakdown, and the doctors said she'd have to go to the country, where there'd be no noises. Sounds almost kill her, so dad bought this place, and mother and I have to live here a whole year, with no one but the servants. It's pretty dull for me, but dad comes out weekends, and he's trying to help fix things up so it'll be more interesting. This lake's one of the things he's fixed, and now I'm crazy to have a real little canoe, so I can go out on it, but I asked for it before mother, and she went into hysterics; said I'd get drowned and made dad promise not to get me one. But I just know that if some one else made it for me and showed me how to paddle it I'd be perfectly safe."

The girl paused, out of breath, and waited, her face pink with excitement and her blue eyes dancing.

"I see," said the man in a flash. "Not a word now to worry your mother but I'll guarantee you'll be safe and I'm sure your father'd be satisfied if he knew I was looking after the matter."

"How wonderful!" said Marjorie eagerly. "Will you really do it?"

"Under one condition."

"Name it."

"That you promise not to go out in it alone until I give you permission."

"I promise" she said almost solemnly as she placed her hand in his.

He held it for only a second, then

"Good! Meet me here at, say, three o'clock Friday."

"I'll be here," she answered as she capered away through the bushes, her wavy brown hair shining in the sun and her red middy tie adding a touch of color to the scene.

"Wait a minute," he called after her. "You don't know who I am yet."

"That's so," she answered, flashing him a smile. "Who are you?"

"I'm Charley," he said at last.

"All right. Good-by, Mr. Charley. Friday at two o'clock."

"Good-by, Miss Marjorie. Friday at two."

That evening Marjorie's mother tried wearily to understand the cause of her daughter's dancing eyes and suppressed excitement, but no explanation could she get out of her.

"I'm just dreadfully happy, mother," was her only reply.

"And I was afraid you'd be so lonely out here after the life you've been accustomed to," her mother answered.

At last after ages of waiting, Friday came and the two appeared punctually at the lake. On the surface of the water lay a beautiful little canoe evidently just cut out of a trunk of a huge tree. A seat was in each end and on the side a place had been smoothed and, in large green letters were painted the word, "The Marjorie."

"I just can't believe," she said, her voice thrilling with happiness, and at the sight of her joy the man felt fully repaid for his blistered hands.

"All aboard!" he said, trying to hide the pleasure in his face.

It was a wonderful afternoon they spent together, he paddling and she watching him while her fingers trailed through the cool water.

"I feel as if I'd been to heaven," she said when at last they had to get out.

"I do, too," he replied.

"Can we do it again tomorrow?" she asked timidly.

"Indeed we can, and the day after, and the day after that."

It soon became a habit for the two to meet every day at the lake and, being thrown together as they were, it was natural that they should confide in each other, and at the end of a short while they knew each other better than they would have after months of ordinary acquaintance. Once in a while he came to the house but not very often for everything had to be kept very quiet around Mrs. Randall.

As the summer waned he began to dread going back to town. The days seemed to slip through his fingers like precious stones, and once he went to town for the day and, unknown to the girl, had an interview with her father. When they met the next day his face was glowing.

"Marjorie," he said gently, "I must get back to work tomorrow, so this will be our last trip. Do you want to try it alone or shall we agree always to paddle it together"

He looked at her earnestly, but her eyes fell beneath his gaze and he felt her hands tremble in his.

"Did ever a chap have such luck!" he exclaimed blissfully; then after a few joyful minutes he said:

"I wish I could find that fish I caught. I'd put a bell on his toes and tie a ribbon around his neck."

At the Corner

By Dwight Tingle Scott

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"He's a new man, this Officer Mulvane, but he's got a head on his shoulders and a smile that never stops work. Two bad smashups in one day. There has got to be a change." So the captain sent Mulvane to Catastrophe Corner.

No mechanical director for him. He held it in contempt, as he did the inverted tub platform and the big umbrella.

At Catastrophe Corner, where the rush of the whole city met and clamored for right of way, his broad shoulders and alert, happy face bobbed confidently above the surge—a Triton of traffic holding the human flood in check by the blasts of his chiming whistle.

"Since Mulvane has had Catastrophe Corner it has quit furnishing copy," commented one of the papers a few weeks later. And hundreds of old ladies and uncertain gaited old gentlemtn had cause to love Terrence Mulvane, while scarce a motor passed but the driver acknowledged his efficient good nature with a friendly nod.

But there was one to whom every gesture of Terrence Mulvane was perfection, one to whom his smile meant more than happy good nature. For sometimes in a lull he would glance up at the third floor of the great office building at the corner and big brown eyes would laugh back down at him.

How he had done it, even the closest spectators could not tell, so swiftly he had sprung forward and swung the girl safely from under the very wheels of the truck.

"Crazy drunk," he growled. "Grady—you got his number? Good. Watch the crossing." His relief had come on. "My! You're all trembly." He looked down at Rosetta May, who was half laughing, half crying. "Where do you live? Then I am going to go with you up to your car."

Rosetta May really felt very faint and very glad of his steady hand at her arm. But the next night and the next and many an evening thereafter, Terrence Mulvane waited after relief and walked that single block with Rosetta May.

Presently he learned that her father was from County Limerick and from there had come the sparkling flow of words that kept him fascinated; and her mother from sunny Messina had given her the marvelous hair and eyes that drove him to distraction.

Rosetta May had studied mathematics at Central High and then as secretary to the chief engineer of the Marvin Construction company she had added practically to that knowledge.

"It comes pretty slow for me," Terrence confided. "You see I had to stop school two years this side of algebra."

"I'd love to help you. I wonder if I could?" So it came about that Terrence took his books often out to Rosetta's home, and the brown head and the sandy one were bowed close together under the soft evening lamp.

Then Mrs. Pilcher, joy of the Sunday editor and bane of traffic officers' existence, motored into Terrence Mulvane's life. She motored in, in a great lilac-hued car, disregarding all rules of love and the regulations laid down by the common council. At first it was: "Oh, Mr. Mulvane, I thought you meant for me to go through." And then it was a nod and a little wave of the hand, and Mrs. Pilcher began to cut corners and drive through at will.

The change from behind a packing machine in Pilcher's Cigar Factory to an upholstered seat behind fifty horse power of luxurious speed had been, in Mrs. Pilcher, more apparent than real. The brazen beauty that had hypnotized old Pilcher in his doddering age now turned its full powers against the frailty of youth.

The eyes of love are sharp. And Rosetta May could look down upon Catastrophe Corner.

Mr. Fenton signed a letter. "Don't often do this without seeing for myself. Remember, young lady, I'll hold you responsible. I hope he has the right stuff in him. Friend, did you say?"

The girl assented.

Rosetta May went and looked out on the street to hide her confusion. But what she saw on Catastrophe Corner made her clench the letter tight in a convulsive fist.

Mrs. Pilcher was at it again. Terrence had just been relieved and the woman's car was drawn up to the curbing. Even at the distance the girl caught the look in the Pilcher woman's eyes—a look of pleading cajolery. Terrence was hesitating—holding back, but, sick within her, she saw that he was yielding. Yes, he got into Mrs. Pilcher's car and they drove away.

Eight o'clock and he had not come. Tonight of all nights—not coming. In her own room the hot tears sprang out, hot to the eyes but cooling to the heart.

Then it was his laugh, clear and boyish, in the downstairs hall.

The red eyes and the timid reserve did not escape him as she came slowly down to meet him.

"Why, my little signorina-colleen, what in the world?"

"You were so late. I thought you were not coming."

"Not tonight—and you said you had a big surprise for me? It was that fool kid tonight. I just had to take her in. And then she insisted on my taking her down to the station and introducing her to the sergeant. And she kept us there arguing for half an hour. Then I had to go up home with her, because she didn't have her purse, and according to law we can't take a check."

"Oh, Terry, forgive me. I saw you ride away together, and I thought—"

"What—that woman? Forget it. Say you know all day I have been mulling over that 'trig' problem we were working on.

"In the car she asked what made me so quiet. I told her trigonometry and asked her if she had it when she went to school. She looked blank at me under all that rouge and then said she supposed so, because she took almost everything that was going round and had almost died last winter with the 'flu.' Gee, think of having to talk to that all your life. No wonder old Pilcher died right away.

"But the surprise?" Rosetta timidly handed him the letter.

"Oh, my," gasped Terry. "You wonderful little trump—how did you ever manage it? Monday next? And this last paragraph: 'The salary is only an initial one. To a man who really wants to take up engineering it offers, we believe, a fine chance. Miss May tells me you are serious about this. If so we can assure you that the opportunity will prove just as big as the man.'"

But there was another surprise—a surprise for Rosetta. And Terrence Mulvane lost his poise fumbling about searching for it. And there was a moment of tense silence, broken by Rosetta May's "Oh—h" when he found it. For he did find it at length. It was in his right-hand vest pocket in a plush-covered box.

THE LIBERTY BELL

July 8, 1776, the bell was rung for the proclamation of the Declaration of Independence.

On October 24, 1781, the bell rung out for the surrender of Cornwallis.

April 16, 1783, it rang for the proclamation of peace.

September 29, 1824, it rang to welcome Lafayette to the Hall of Independence.

July 4, 1826, it ushered in the year of jubilee, the fiftieth anniversary of the republic.

July 24, 1826, it tolled for the death of Thomas Jefferson.

July 4, 1831, is the last recorded ringing of this famous bell to commemorate the day of independence.

February 22, 1832, is its last recorded ringing to commemorate the death of Washington.

In the same year it tolled the death of the last survivor of the Declaration, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton.

July 21, 1834, it tolled once more. Lafayette was dead.

July 8, 1835, while being tolled for the death of Chief Justice John Marshall, a crack was developed, starting from the rim and inclining in a right-hand direction toward the crown.

Another attempt was made to ring it on Washington's birthday, February 22, 1843, but the fracture was so much increased that no attempt has ever been made to ring it since.

Its voice is silent, but its deeds will ring in the hearts of all patriotic people so long as the name of liberty shall last.—Selected.

Killed by Car

Merill Wells, 14, was killed instantly and his brother, Irvin Wells, 19, escaped with scratches and bruises Monday night July 5, when their motorcycle side car was upset by an Ohio Electric traction car at Hague Ave. and Olive St.

The machine was operated by the elder Wells. The youths had been attending a motion picture show on Broad St. and were on their way home.

As the elder youth turned to avoid a parked machine, the car hit the cycle from the rear, turning it over.

Merill Wells was thrown under the car wheels, his body mangled badly.

Motorman J. F. Holes, Springfield, told Officers Aikire and Earnest it was impossible for him to stop. Traffic on the interurban and Camp Chase lines was tied up for an hour.

The dead boy, whose arms and legs were crushed was taken to the Fisher morgue. His brother suffering from shock was removed in a Fisher ambulance to Mt. Carmel Hospital. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wells, were prostrate at the home 164 S. Hague Ave. a few hundred feet from where the tragedy occured and were under medical attention. At the hospital the cyclist said his generator furnishing light, was out of commission, and he didn't know he had driven so closely to the tracks

He was employed at the Fireproo Storage Co. The body was sent to Gallipolis Wednesday morning for funeral and burial.

Advertise and Keep Alive

Do you load it at the muzzle,
When you want a shot or two?
Do you wind it with a watch key,
Like your father used to do?
How'd you like to hop a horse car,
Like you did long years ago?
Don't an auto beat an ox cart?
Well, I rather reckon so.
Do you argue that an hour glass,
Beats a Waltham all to smash?
Do you use the same old system,
Keepin' books and countin' cash?
Do you trim a goose quill neatly,
When you want the ink to flow?
Tell us are you advertising
In the same old foolish way,
That your grand-dad did before you,
And persist "It doesn't pay?"
Think the whole world knows your address?
Cause it hasn't changed in years?
Wouldn't the pathos of such logic,
Drive a billy goat to tears?
Just a card is all you care for?
Hidden, lonesome, and unread,
Like the sign upon the tombstone,
Telling folks you are dead.
Wake up and take a tonic,
Bunch your hits and make a drive,
Run a page and change your copy,
ADVERTISE AND KEEP ALIVE!

Wedding

At 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, the wedding of Miss Bessie June Swaney and Rev. Arthur Russell Groves of Somerset, Pennsylvania, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Upton George Swaney, 28 Midland Avenue. The Rev. Peter H. Fry, assisted by Rev. Postle E. White of the Oakwood Methodist Church, read the nuptial service, before an altar banked with palms and ferns, and interlaced with pink roses, daisies and white hydrangeas, the couple standing under a large bell formed of pink roses, ferns and white lilies, from which smilax trailed down to the altar candles. Large baskets filled with flowers were used in decorating the home. One basket contained Flanders poppies, grown from seed sent from the famous battle field "over there."

The musical program was given by Miss Lelia White, vocalist, and Mr. Charles Wesley Walton, pianist. Miss White sang "At Dawning," "Oh Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly," before the ceremony.

As the strains of the march from Lohengrin arose, the bridal party descended from the winding stairway which was entwined with ferns and Dorothy Perkins roses, and passed through an aisle formed by the stretching of white satin ribbons from the foot of the stairway to the improvised altar. The ribbons were unwn from beneath large clusters of ferns and roses by the small ribbon bearers, Julia Isabel Felton, cousin of the bride, and Edith Gibson, the daughter of Mrs. Hope White Gibson, 42 North Ogden Avenue. Both wore dainty white frocks with pink ribbons. Master Jack Reed, son of Mr. Warner Reed of Indianola Avenue, dressed in a white satin suit, carried the wedding ring in a white lily. Norma Gibson was flower girl and carried a basket filled with pink roses. She wore a dainty frock of white silk net with pink ribbons.

The bride's maids were Miss Elva Breckenridge of Grove City and Miss Ruth Eleanor Felton of Columbus. Both are cousins of the bride. They wore white organdie and carried pink roses and pink sweet peas.

Rev. W. C. Moore of Homer City, a college friend of Rev. Mr. Groves, who was to have acted as best man was unavoidably detained at his home and Mr. Earl Breckenridge served in his absence.

The bride wore a robe of white silk georgette over white satin and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and Ophelia roses. The bridal veil was held in place by a band of pearls and caught up by orange blossoms.

Rev. Mr. Groves is a graduate of Virginia State University and Northwestern University and at present is pastor of the Somerset Methodist Episcopal Church and a member of the Pittsburgh M. E. Conference. Mrs. Groves is a graduate of the Columbus Normal School and of the class of 1919 of Ohio State University. During the past year she was an English teacher in the Columbus schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Groves will remain at the latter's home for ten days, then leave for an eastern trip, after which they will go to Somerset, Pa., where they will live at 16 N. West street.

Among the guests at the wedding were the following: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reed, Mrs. Sarah Henry, Raymond Henry, Mr. G. W. Breckenridge, Mrs. John C. Felton, Messrs. Orin, Clyde, John and Earl Breckenridge; the Misses Elva, Carrie and Nelle Breckenridge, Miss Mattie Darnell, Miss E. Can American Christianity hold this country in the years to come? Do you know that the Bolshevekists of Russia have daily schools where they teach their children their terrible doctrines? Our children are absolutely neglected. Some of them get one hour in Sunday School a week. There is little or no religious training at home. What will the next generation be? You, mother and father, must decide. The Daily Vacation Bible School wants to help you. Here they are in your midst. The price for six weeks is only $2. For just one or two lessons in music, elocution or dancing you would pay this. Why not then realize this splendid educational, entertaining feature and send your boy and girl to the Daily Vacation Bible School at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church and Hill Crest Baptist Church.

BEAVER PUT IN FULL TIME

Worked Day and Night Felling and Appropriating Tree to Its Desired Purpose.

A beaver in a park was experimentally placed at work upon a tree 12 feet long and two feet six inches thick, just as the town clock sounded the hour of noon. The beaver began by barking the tree a foot above ground. That done he attacked the wood. He worked hard, alternating his labor with dips in his bathing pond. He bathed and labored alternately; then he ate his supper of bread and carrots which the keeper brought him, and paddled about in his pond until half-past 5 o'clock. Ten minutes later, when only one inch of the tree's diameter remained intact, he bore upon his work and the tree fell. Before it fell the beaver ran as men run when they have fired a blast. Then, as the tree lay on the ground he portioned it out mentally and began to gnaw. He worked at intervals all night; cut the log into three parts, rolled two of the portions into the water and reserved the other third for his permanent shelter. The work done, he took a bath.

FOR THE SAKE OF MY FRIEND

By John Franklin Grimes

I have heard a most wonderful story,
How long ago came among men,
A-down from the infinite glory,
A kind and compassionate Friend.

His followers called He not servants,
But Himself was the servant of all;
And the dear name of "Friend" did
He give them
Who earnestly answered His call.
And now when the call sounds for service,
Where'r it may be among men,
Give me only the mind of my Master,
I'll go for the sake of my Friend.

From the Jericho road comes a heart-cry
Of a brother, bruised, bleeding and alone,
And softly the Savior's love-whisper
Says, "Help thou the suffering one."
So down in the valley of shadows
Where darkness and dangers portend,
I'll answer the clear call of duty,
I'll go for the sake of my Friend.

And just as the Savior in heaven
Found, crowding the weary world-way,
Poor sheep who knew not a shepherd,
So find we the lost sheep today.
And forth sounds the voice of the Savior,
"Bring my sheep from the hills and the glen";
To be only a good under-shepherd
I go for the sake of my Friend.

And always at morn's early dawning,
When the verdure of earth is dew-pearled,
Or the sun soars aloft to the zenith
And lights all the work-a-day world
Or the evening shades softly gather,
And a solemn hush falls among men,
And the star-beams bid me look upward,
I'll go for the sake of my Friend.

To the Master who calls me not servant,
How gladly my service I'll lend.
Looking on to the end of life's journey,
And the glory-crowned life with my Friend.

Savage Formosan Tribes.

Formosa has been peopled with wild tribes of probably Malayan and Polynesian origin who are nearest in point of resemblance to the Dyaks of Borneo. The "raw" savages, as the Chinese term them, live much as their ancestors did centuries ago, while the "ripe" savages, living on the borderland between their wild kin and Chinese settlers, have more or less assimilated Chinese ways of life.

There are eight main groups of savage tribes on the island, each group with fairly well-defined differences of dress, speech and customs, and in many cases the tribes that make up a group display minor differences among themselves.—National Geographic Magazine

Calculating Youngster.

As Tommy was leaving the hotel a favorite maid handed him a small package containing a present. "Thank her," whispered his mother. Silence followed. The mother insisted several times before thanks was given. In the motor on the way to the depot Tommy's mother reproached him for bad manners. "But, mother, why should I thank her till I saw whether I liked it?" he asked.

DRILL TOO MUCH LIKE WORK

Afghan Soldiers Make Good Fighters, but They Are Not Remarkable for Their Discipline.

The soldiers in the Afghan army would not stand for too much drilling. The colonel in command of the garrison at Jabi-us-Siraj, a cousin of the amir, got too enthusiastic about drill and the men sent word to him that if he did not let up they would kill him. Drill slackened. The officers wore smart uniforms and leather gaiters, and on full dress occasions were resplendent in gorgeous uniforms covered with gold braid and crowned with plumed helmets. There were "kiptans," "journalis," "commitants" and "generals" galore, most of whom had little or no knowledge of military tactics. There was always a brass band. They had European instruments and they blew their heads off. I have counted 144 beats to the minute on the bass drum, writes A. E. Jewett, in Asia. The members of the band were about the hardest worked of the troops. The government troops were a lazy, chillum-smoking lot. They never stood when on guard duty, except in the presence of the amir. About the hardest work they did was to sit on the sheltered side of a wall, pull their shirts over their heads and look for "shipish." It was a common sight to see them reading their shirts. They were a lazy, truculent lot, who bullied and blackmailed the people and added thieving to their soldiering profession.

COMMON DAILY FOOD.

Here is a luncheon dish which will be enjoyed and may be served with liver and bacon.

Spoon Bread.—Mix one pint of coarse cornmeal, the white variety, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and enough hot water to make a paste. Then cool and add one egg, a pint of buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda; separate the white and yolk of the egg. Pour into a hot, well-buttered baking dish and bake in a hot oven. Serve from the baking dish.

Boston Brown Bread.—Mix together one cupful each of whole wheat and graham flour, one teaspoonful of soda and one cupful of cornmeal. Add two cupfuls of sour milk, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-half cupful of molasses. Beat well and turn into well-greased, pound baking powder cans. Cover tightly and steam two hours. Remove cover and dry off fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Slice while hot with a string. Raisins and nuts may be added if desired.

Rice Soup.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of rice water, add one cupful of hot milk in which a slice of onion has been cooked. Melt a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour, salt and pepper to taste. Cook all together, adding at the last one tablespoonful of chopped parsley.

MONKS SAVED EARLY WRITING

Leisure Time in Monasteries Devoted to the Transcription of Records, Sacred and Profane.

The preservation, by the pens of monastic copyists, of the Christian Scriptures, of the writings of the early Fathers and of the great works of classical antiquity seems to be due principally to the life and labors of Magnus Aurelius Cassiodorus Senator. Through his personal influence with the barbarian rulers who invaded Rome and his devotion to the church, which was evident in the latter part of his life, he succeeded in preserving for later generations the pagan or classic literature. In the church his hopes of intellectual interest and civilization itself rested. He had exceptional executive ability, long official experience, a large measure of scholarship and an earnest zeal for literary and educational interests.

The rule of the monasteries of the fifth and sixth centuries included the novel feature of industrial occupation. Often there was wearisome leisure in the monasteries and Cassiodorus perceived that this time might be profitably spent in transcribing the accumulation of 2,000 years of literature, sacred and profane, the writings of Hebrew prophets, Greek philosophers and Latin rhetoricians.

In the course of years a class of monastic scribes transcribed and illuminated portions of the Scriptures and of the Latin texts. It was from these scribes the "copy" for the first editions of Cicero, Virgil and the other classic writers was produced by the earliest printers of Germany and Italy.

Cassiodorus established the monasteries of Vivaria, or Viviers, and Mons Castellius. It was only in monastic centers like these, where Christian influence and educational work were held to be of more importance than theological issues, that literary activity became possible, and it was only in such monasteries that labor was expended in preserving the writing of pagan authors.

Shortly after Cassiodorus' withdrawal from political life, when he was about sixty years old, he organized all of this literary work. This work served as a model for the long system of Benedictine monasteries that came into existence throughout Europe later. It was the hand of Cassiodorus which gave the literary impetus to the Benedictine order, and it was his collection of manuscripts, rescued from the ruins of the libraries of Italy after its political institutions had been shattered by the invasion of Belisarius, that supplied the material for pens of thousands of monastic scribes.

A professor from Harvard, who is somewhere down in Jamaica, wires to the University that it is snowing on Mars; but we feel sure that the snow fall up there, if there is any, and if there are any people there; will not affect them like the FROST the people of the United States are getting from the sugar trust and some of the other trusts, who control the foodstuffs, and other commodities.

We felt when we read that item in the press, somewhat like Bub Robinson did, when he went into a fashionable church in the city of Chicago, and settled down to hear a good sermon; the handsome, scholarly, aero preacher talked a few minutes on earth and then soared away to the sun and began to describe that planet, and its distance from the earth; Bud said that was too far away for him to understand or to be interested, so he said "Oh Lord help that man to talk about something nearer home."

The weather on Mars, the language of the monkeys in Africa, the Bolsheviki of Russia, the Irish Republic, or the League of Nations, are questions which may appeal to some; but we are inclined to think that the questions nearer home, that affect the Spiritual, moral or physical welfare of the masses in our good old United States, should have the unlimited and undivided atention of every self-respecting, loyal, patriotic American citizen, FIRST. | Christian Worker.

The records at the country courthouse, show during the month of May on an average of twenty marriage licenses per day, and an average of ten divorces. This looks like playing a game of chance, with too many blanks. Too much "puppy love"; the sin of the youth of America looking upon every thing in life as a "joke." They have been educated in the movies to do these things, and they are trying it out in real life.

Boncilla Massage for the face. Bob Calland's barber shop.

OUR NATIONAL PERPETUITY

"Happy is that people whose God is the Lord." Ps. 144:15.

July 4th, Independence Day, is the happiest of our national holidays. Why is this true? Because it reminds us that we are citizens of the greatest republic of the ages, and directs our gaze toward a dazzling future. But if the bright prophecy of our nation's future is to be realized we must recognize, cling to, and cultivate the essentials of the republic's perpetuity.

I. National Unity. The union has been cemented by our best blood. It must be guarded and preserved with sleepless vigilance.

II. Universal Education. Horace Mann says: "A human being is not in any proper sense a human being till he is educated." We must stand by the common schools. Nor must we despise higher education.

III. Recognition of the Dignity and Nobility of Labor. A. S. Hardy: "Work is a great blessing; after evil came into the world, it was given as an antidote, not as a punishment."

IV. Philanthropy. "Julia Ward Howe: "As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free."

V. Toleration of all sects and beliefs and parties that are not Anarchistic. Such countries as Russia and Spain have tried intolerance, and —failed. Gamaliel's advice holds good today. (Acts 5:38, 39.)

VI. National Righteousness. Nothing can take its place. No constitution, form of government, wealth, or military strength can serve as its substitute. The proof of this is written all over the pages of the history of nations.

Sacred are our trusts and bright the vision of our country's future.—Selected.

Cover with a second cupful of the same mixture and cook in a hot oven three-quarters of an hour. Remove the meat from the casserole, strain off the vegetables, add a cupful of stock to the strained liquid and return to the casserole with the meat. Over the meat spread one cupful of seeded raisins. Cover and cook for one hour and a quarter longer.

Electrically Elevated

By Ruby Douglas

(©, 1910, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Doris Greene had lived in New York for a short time only. She had been brought up in a small town in which she had seen almost none of the modern city conveniences for handling crowds, eliminating labor and making work in general less expensive and less laborious.

The first time she rode on a moving stairway, which she afterward learned was called an escalator, she was so thrilled that she repeated the journey four times.

"I think I've seen almost everything, now," she told her mother one night when she returned from her daily trip to the office where she earned a living filing letters for a big corporation. "I feel quite like a New Yorker."

"Well, daughter," her mother remarked with a touch of wistfulness in her tone, "I hope you will never be more of a typical New Yorker than you are today. Not—" she hastened to add, for Mrs. Greene did not wish to speak ill of any one—"not that they are not entirely all right, dear, but—well, I like my sweet small-town girl as she is."

"Don't worry, mother," Doris laughed. "I'm from the country still—in my heart. But the green has been washed off the outside, I think."

Perhaps Doris spoke too soon. Perhaps it was just her destiny to have it proved to her the very next Sunday that she still had something to learn.

An invitation to visit a friend who had a charming new apartment in Fifth avenue had come to Doris. She was invited to tea in the afternoon, and the thought of a party in an apartment on Fifth avenue had made Doris expectantly joyful.

She put on her prettiest little afternoon frock, her flowered hat in which her face looked as if it were trying to rival the artificial blossoms. Thus she walked forth to seek the number on the famous avenue.

At last she found it and entered a doorway which was quiet and unostentatious. She saw what she supposed was an elevator and she pushed the button, to hear, inside the shaft, something moving which she knew must be the lift.

She waited until after the noise stopped and eventually, since the door did not open and no elevator boy appeared, she peeked through the spacious hole which was where a handle would naturally be placed. There she saw a perfectly lighted small elevator.

"Oh, it's one of those electric elevators that Helen's brother makes. You just push the button and it works itself," thought Doris, remembering having heard her new-found chum speak of the manufacturing business of her big brother.

After some moments of investigation, Doris found that by inserting her fingers in the hole she could push back a lever which released the outer door. This done, the opening of the lattice-work iron door was simple.

Then she stepped inside, a bit nervous but still anxious to master the situation. She saw a list of numbers and a button for each number. Also there was one marked "Stop."

Doris closed the doors of the lift and said a short prayer as she found herself alone in the tiny boxlike room.

"I'm sure Mrs. Moore said third floor," she recalled. "I suppose I should press the button marked three." And so thinking she did push the third button. Presently she began to ascend. The elevator made some noise and did not rise very fast and Doris became so frightened before she reached the floor where it would have stopped automatically that she pushed frantically at the button marked "Stop."

The lift stopped. And Doris began to tremble and weep quietly. Here she was, in mid-air, in an electric elevator in a strange building on Fifth avenue, New York. Could anything be more terrifying to a girl from a small town? She remained for some time and finally she felt herself beginning to move and stop. Then the elevator door was flung open and a bright-looking young man, about to step in, removed his hat and said: "Oh, I beg your pardon—I did not know there was any one using the lift."

"—I'm not" said Doris, trying to regain her self-composure.

"Oh—I thought you were. I—I beg pardon again," stammered the young man.

"I was trying to get to the third floor and I got frightened and stopped the car and—everything," Doris said, tamely.

"Well, these elevators are confusing to one who isn't accustomed to using them," the young man explained politely. "And as it happens, I, too, am going to the third floor to see my aunt, Mrs. Moore."

"Mrs. Moore?" exclaimed Doris, "I'm going there, too. To tea."

"Are you Miss Doris Greene, from Keokuk, Iowa?"

Doris nodded.

"Then let me get in. I'll take you up and we'll get ourselves properly introduced. I've heard a lot about you."

On the way up the young man explained the working of the elevator to Doris, and all during tea he seemed to be greatly interested in her. When she was ready to go home he found it advisable to take her safely down in the elevator and to see that she got home without further predicament.

From that memorable Sunday he called, from time to time at the little apartment where Doris and her mother lived so quietly, and on an occasional Sunday the two went to see Mrs. Moore in her apartment on Fifth avenue.

One afternoon when Herbert Davis thought he had waited quite long enough to tell Doris that he had loved her from the very moment that he saw her, he took her to call on his aunt.

When the elevator was half way up he stopped it. "Doris, dear, I love you. I've loved you—always."

"Why—Herbert, what a place to tell me," was all the girl could say, but it was enough to give the young man courage, and he took her in his arms for a moment before sending the little lift on its way up to the third floor.

"We've—we've been electrically elevated, auntie," he remarked pointedly as his aunt greeted them. "We—we're engaged, too," he added. "Doris has just told me that she would marry me and—and that elevator of yours is the cause of it all."

"You dear sentimental children," Mrs. Moore said, hugging them both. "I have always hoped for this, but I did not know it would come about so soon."

The family of Dr. W. S. Murray have moved from Athens, Ohio, to 237 South Richardson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Lear are spending ten days with relatives in Michigan City, Ind.

"Dog days" is a name given by the ancient astronomers to the twenty days before and the twenty days after the rising of the dog star, Sirius, with the sun. It was for years the common opinion that this conjunction of the rising of the dog star with the rising of the sun was one of the causes of the extreme heat of summer. This conjunction, however, does not occur at the same time in all latitudes, nor is it constant in the same region for a long period; hence there is much variation as to the limits of dog days. It is a mere accident that this rising with the sun occurs at the hottest season of the year. In time it will take place in the depth of winter. The Egyptians began their year with the heliacal rising of the dog star, which event coincided with the flood of the Nile.

The Hilltop Reco

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, July 15, 1920

Death of Mr. Eldon Smith

Mr. Eldon F. Smith, 2488 West Broad St., died suddenly at St. Calir Hospital at 2 o'clock Wednesday A. M., July 14. Though he had not been in the best of health for the past two years, his sudden death came as a surprise to his many friends on the Hilltop. Besides his wife he is survived by his father, one sister, one son, one daughter and one grandson. He was 58 years and 7 months old and had been a prominent resident of the Hilltop since 1882. The funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at the residence. Rev. Mr. Bowman will have charge of the services. Burial in Green Lawn Cemetery by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Chautauqua's first advance man, Dallas C. Baer, reached Hilltop, Columbus, July 8th and began a preliminary outdoor advertising campaign for this seven-day program which begins July 31st. The business district has had its first touch of Chautauqua publicity, and season tickets are being placed on sale by the local committee.

The Hilltop is one of 70 on the circuit operated this season by the Redpath Company in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky. Starting in Wheeling, June 22, the big brown tents move eastward thu Pennsylvania and then swing to the southwest, thru West Virginia and Kentucky, Ohio territory is covered thoroly in late July and August.

Of many headlines events on the 1920 program, probably the most conspicuous are the three act comedy, "It Pays to Advertise" Dunbar's Royal Dragoons, a singing band of 18 members; Sir John Foster Fraser of London, England; Pamahasika's Performing Pets and the Great Lake String Quartet.

Special interest always is attached to Chautauqua's opening day. Patrons have come to expect an unusally strong program at that time and it seems that this year the Redpath policy has not deviated for the joint offering includes the College Singing Girls and Roscoe Gilmore Stott humorous writer and speaker. The tent will be pitched on North Eldon Ave. in Hill Crest addition Tolie Du Nord Ginghams, 29c, Seiller's.

The Intermediate C. E. Society of the Burgess Ave. U. B. Church will give a lawn fete at the home of Mr. H O. Kuch 465 S. Warren Ave. on the evening of July 20. All sorts of good things to eat will be furnished with the emphasis on Ice Cream and HOME-MADE CAKE. The young people have several pledges for furtherance of their work to pay and are anxious, of course, for a good crowd; and they guarantee that every one will be satisfied with service and material. Do yourself a kindness by helping them along. Everybody invited and insured value received plus a good time. Remember the place, 465 S. Warren Ave-remember the date, July 20.

Miss Gladys Houdasheit entertained her Kappa Nu sisters and their friends at a lawn party Saturday evening in honor of her guest, Miss Lois Greaser of Pomeroy. A promising young chap from the male attendance entertained the crowd with a jig to the tune of "O By Jingo." There were other features quite as interesting, but hardly as humorous.

Mrs. G. A. Henry and daughter Louise have just returned from a few days' visit with Mrs. Henry's mother at Newark and her sister at a cottage at Buckeye Lake.

Resolutions

The following resolutions of respect touching the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Millikin have been prepared by a committee appointed by the Personal Workers' Bible Class of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church:

Whereas, in the natural course of human affairs, an All-Wise Providence has seen fit to end the activities of a useful life, spent in labor of love and mercy that have endeared her to all who came to know her;

Therefore, be it resolved, that it is the desire of this class of the Sabbath school that in testimony of the appreciation of the long, useful and faithful life of this departed one that we give this tribute to her memory. The members of this class will long remember and cherish the memory of her cheerful presence and labors with them in various duties in which she was engaged. The lives she has cheered and brightened will greatly miss her and mourn their loss, but go on in life strengthened by the memory of her example, Resolved,

That a copy of this tribute be placed on the minutes of the class, one presented to the family and one printed in The Hilltop Record.

Margaret Burnside, Mrs. J. W. Dinsmore, Mrs. C. W. Chamberlin, committee.

The talk of Columbus—Seiller's Sale.

Troop No. 1, Girl Scouts, a bunch of Hilltop girls, accompanied by several girls from Troop No. 4 from the East End, left Tuesday for Camp Darby, where they will camp until Friday evening. They were in charge of Miss Irene Slagle and went for a jolly good time. They expect to go again in August.

There will be a meeting of the sixers and boosters for the Hilltop Chautauqua at Budd & Williams barber shop Friday evening, July 16, at 8 o'clock. All those that were there the last meeting be sure and come and those that have signed and have not been to any meeting show your spirit and come to the meeting.

A Good Suggestion

Mr. Henry K. Wirts, 11th Ward assessor, sent a letter to Councilman Westlake asking if something could not be done whereby the lower portion of Glenwood Park could be fixed up so as to be used by the people during the summer months, such as cleaning up and taking out the old logs, etc., then putting up lights and seats in different parts of that locality. Following is the reply:

July 6th, 1920.

Mr. Henry K. Wirts, chairman, Committee on Improvement of Glenwood Park, West Side Betterment Association, Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of June 28th, addressed to Councilman Westlake, requesting improvement of certain conditions in a part of Glenwood Park, has been referred to this Department.

We have advised the Superintendent of Parks to comply with your request insofar as his funds will permit, and believe that most of the conditions referred to can be improved.

We thank you for your interest in these matters and are pleased to have your suggestions and recommendations at all times. Yours very truly,

W. H. DUFFY,
Director of Public Service.
By K. F. Killam.

This is a splendid idea. Everybody knows what a pretty place the lower part of the park is and with a small amount of investment it could be made into one of the prettiest parks in the city. Let's help to boost it along.

With Jaundiced Eye

By LILIAN HALL CROWLEY

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Mary, now that you have promised to marry me, I won't be jealous any more."

"I'm so glad, Jim, 'cause it's an awful thing—being jealous. Why, I don't know what the feeling is. I just love you and trust you, and that's all there is to it."

"I know," answered Jim, shamefacedly, "but whenever I saw a fellow near you I thought he'd beat me to it and marry you before I got a chance."

"I see, dear."

"Let's be married soon, Mary. Just as soon as I get that job as foreman. Jack Costigan is going back to Boston, and I've been promised his place. I hate to see you working so hard in this old restaurant; on your feet from morning till night. We can buy a home on the installment plan, and then you'll have lots of time for yourself. You've worked hard here, Mary."

"Yes, Jim, but a waitress has to work hard. It isn't anybody's fault. There are three meals a day, and they have to be served."

"That'll soon be over. Of course, a switchman's wages ain't much; but I'm countin' on the foreman job."

Jim Maclean and Mary Naseby had been "keeping company" for a year or so. They had been deliriously happy except for Jim's outbursts of jealousy. He was a hard-working, ambitious young fellow, and after he had fallen in love with Mary, who was quite the sweetest girl he had ever seen, he worked harder than before, so that he would have something to offer her. Now they were engaged; he was soon to become foreman of the switchyards. He would make good wages, and Mary and he would have their cosy home and their love.

Returning to his boarding house after leaving Mary at the house where she had a furnished room, he sat on the veranda in thought. It was a lovely June night, and Jim was so happy he just wanted to sit there and think of how lucky he was.

Mary was an orphan, and had come to Missouri because it was a railroad center, and she could get good wages in the railroad eating house. She had spoken of her brother, who was a conductor, and married. Being an unusually pretty girl, she did not lack for attention, but she cared for no one except Jim.

She couldn't understand his jealousy, and was always able to explain away his suspicions with the simplest statement. Jim was full of contrition, and cursed himself for a fool.

Mary Smiled at Him.

Jim's luck followed him next day, when he was made foreman. He could hardly contain himself until he could tell Mary. They would be married right away.

Mary's usual time for leaving the restaurant was 8 o'clock. Jim went to a movie to pass the time, and then went for her. He often found her eating her dinner at one of the small tables in the rear of the room.

Tonight—could he believe his eyes? She was there at the table, and looking lovingly into the face of the best-looking man he had ever been jealous of. The stranger was big and masterful looking as he leaned over the table and imprisoned one of Mary's hands in both of his.

Mary smiled at him and then wiped away a tear. Jim was raging. How could she behave like that when she had just promised to marry him! He had been so proud of his promotion, and now—well, curse every woman that was ever born, said he. He never wanted to see another as long as he lived.

He stayed until he saw the man help Mary with her coat and hat, and then he flung homeward. He was through!

But his feet, in spite of his mind, carried him to Mary's restaurant the next night. The same big, handsome man, all devotion, was with her.

This was the night of the Switchmen's ball, and he was to have taken Mary. The grand march would begin at nine. He wouldn't go! He would go! He'd show her and her fine fellow!

He dressed himself with unusual care, as if that would help the wound in his heart.

He was there on time, and so was Mary, and so was the stranger. "Where'd he come from, I wonder?" asked Jim of himself. Jim stayed away in a corner. He could see Mary glancing around, as though looking for some one. "Afraid I'll make a fuss," thought Jim.

Mary and the stranger were partners in the grand march. When it ended in a waltz the two danced away as easily as though they were quite used to it. Jim swore.

In his retreat Jim could still see

Will and a Way

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Standing with feet far apart to maintain his balance on the swaying, jolting box car, Will Dennis waved his hat at the girl he loved, and she responded with an uplifted hand.

"Doggone it!" Will growled, when the car careened round a bend and placed a big red barn between him and the girl. "Doggone it! Why can't I figure out some way to get acquainted with her? Here's another day gone by—and I haven't met her yet."

He walked to the rear of the car and hopped across to the one following.

"Well, anyhow, day after tomorrow she'll be spading in the garden."

For six months—ever since he took the fast freight run on the Penbrook line—Will had loved the girl who lived in the blue house, close to the track, in the northern environs of the village of Lawton.

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday during those six months Will had seen the girl in the garden from the box car throne where he reigned as brakeman of the freight. The first time was Monday, and she was hanging clothes on the line in the garden. She excited only a passing interest, because a sheet blew across her face and Will did not get a good look.

The next time was the following Wednesday, and the girl was spading in the garden. She had looked up as the freight passed and the sunlight had sifted through the leaves of the big maple tree at just the right angle to illuminate the countenance attractively. It revealed a complexion stained deeply by the sun, curly light brown hair, and full red lips and dimples—very enticing dimples.

Then and there Will fell in love for the first time in his life, and on Friday, when the freight passed and he saw the girl seated at a churn, he summoned the courage to wave his hat; and to his pleasure and gratification she hailed him with her hand.

Will was a determined young man. Long ago he had selected as his motto in life the adage, "Where there is a will there's a way;" and up to the time of his falling in love he never had been balked in anything he set out to do.

Waved His Hat at the Girl.

Will's first attempt to meet the girl was a week after he first saw her in the garden hanging the clothes. He had scribbled on a note, "My name is Will Dennis. What's yours?" This note he planned to drop over the blue house garden wall when the train flashed past. The track ran almost flush with the wall, and it ought to be easy.

But Will did not reckon with the wind, which caught the note and whisked it merrily back along the freight train, delivering it into the right hand of Jeff Franklin, another member of the crew, who stood on the front platform of the caboose holding out the hand to see whether rain was falling. The note landed squarely in his hand, and without compunctions he read it.

Will, standing glum on the freight car, not suspecting the ultimate resting place of the note, was brought out of a reverie by a boisterous guffaw at his elbow, and there was Jeff Franklin flaunting the note.

When Will learned the cause of the merriment his eyes blazed and he seized the note and tore it into a multitude of fine pieces, which he scattered over the side of the train. Then he placed one hand back of Jeff's neck and drew that young man close to him and held him there, while the other hand took the form of a fist which was shaken in the other's face, keeping time with these remarks:

"Jeff Franklin, if ever you so much as breathe a word of this to any person on the earth I'll wring your neck."

Jeff Franklin was husky, but Will Dennis was huskier, and the former kept silence in regard to the note.

Will made the second attempt a week later. Before the train started on its run he pulled the waste out of a journal box on one of the box cars. He figured that by the time the train reached Lawton a hotbox would develop and he could signal for a stop at the right moment to bring the car in question to the blue house.

But the calculations miscarried. Jeff Franklin happened to be standing on that particular car when the train was seven miles south of Lawton, and the hotbox developed sooner than it should, and Jeff stopped the train and the trouble was remedied long before the blue house loomed into view.

Will did not give it up, although he decided Jeff Franklin must be his evil genius. The latter, however, had only done his duty in stopping the train on account of the hotbox, and it could not reasonably be judged a neck-wringing offense.

Next Will tried to divide the train so part of it would be stalled near the blue house, but in this he was foiled by the untimely appearance of the conductor.

These were desperate plots, but Will was desperately in love. He was not fickle; he had never cared for any girl except the one in the blue house, and he knew he never would care for another. Will was sincere in everything he undertook, and especially was he sincere in this undertaking.

Shortly after the failure of his last scheme Will sat down in his rooming house and wrote a letter to the girl, explaining how he felt. He addressed the envelope:

"The Young Lady in the Blue House at the North End of Lawton."

For the next two weeks every time he passed the blue house and waved at the girl he looked for evidence that she had received the letter. In case she had she was to throw a stone against the garden wall as the train passed. Will looked in vain, for no stone did she throw. And fifteen days after the letter was written it came back with the explanation scrawled on the envelope:

"There are thirteen blue houses in the north end of Lawton, and a young lady lives in every one of them."

By this time six months had passed and Will had given up finding a way. The fates had decreed he was not to meet the girl, he decided, and it was best that he abide by their decision. He would love her and worship her from the top of his box car, and he never would marry.

The day on which this story opened was Monday, and two days later Will knew the girl would be spading the garden.

In this he was not disappointed, for on Wednesday, as the blue house and garden loomed into view, he saw her bending over the flower beds. As was her custom she looked up and waved her hand in response to Will's salutation.

"No use," Will moaned as he replaced his hat on his head. "This is as far as it will ever get. I might—"

He was interrupted by a grinding, then a terrific jolting, and he experienced a flying sensation. His head struck something with terrible force and things became black.

When Will opened his eyes he found himself in a clean, white bed, in a large room—and over him stood the girl.

"Feel better?" she inquired, and her voice was so soothing that on the instant the throbbing pain left his head.

"Yes, much better. What happened?"

"Your train smashed into another," she explained, "and the shock threw you over the garden wall, and your head struck the maple tree."

Will felt his head with his hands. It was throbbing again—for she had ceased speaking. His suffering evidently showed on his face.

"Don't worry," she admonished, laying a cool hand on his brow and dispersing the throb once more. "You'll be all right in a couple of days. You won't have to stay here long."

This was not so reassuring as it might have been under different circumstances.

"I'll be out of here in a couple of days, you think?" he said. "I sure hope so," and under his breath he added the word "not."

She was leaving the room.

"I'll get you some food," she said, and vanished through the doorway, but thrust her head back to observe:

"Yes, I think you'll be able to leave in a couple of days. I certainly hope so." And under her breath she added the word "not."

Abyssinian Funeral Custom.

An Abyssinian funeral is a very singular affair. When a new-born infant dies it is almost immediately buried under the floor. After the demise of an adult, the body is washed in water sweetened with honey, wrapped in a shroud, sewed up in a mat of braided straw, and laid upon a litter made of boughs cut from trees.

The lamentations of the relatives resound among the cliffs, and the news is rapidly communicated to all the people of the neighborhood, who at once set out to condole with the mourners.

As soon as they catch sight of the funeral procession they begin to weep and cry aloud. When they join it, the men range themselves on one side of the bier, the women on the other, and chant. When the religious ceremony is over, the corpse is buried in the churchyard.

Mary's lovely eyes with a trace of sadness in them, looking around questioningly.

Then—he saw Mattie Vernon, a voluptuously handsome girl who had not been careful of her reputation. He recalled Mary's remark that she had never been jealous. "I'll show her," decided Jim.

Jim smiled his most fascinating smile as he walked up to the beauty. "My dances are all taken," she said, displaying a little feeling because Jim had never before paid her any attention.

"All right," answered Jim. "I'll take some anyway." He deliberately scratched out several names, putting in his own. The music started up. "Come," said Jim, taking her arm, "this is ours."

He deliberately led his partner to where Mary was sitting, and they danced past her many times, Jim never noticing Mary, but looking all devotion at the siren in his arms. Out of the corner of his eye he saw the stranger pull the resisting Mary to her feet, and they also joined the dancers.

Then came a crash. The music stopped suddenly; women screamed. One of the chandeliers had fallen, and some one was hurt. Jim, forgetting his partner, rushed to the scene. He saw some men, carrying the stranger out of the debris. Mary lay inanimate on the floor, her head in the lap of a woman friend. A doctor was hastily summoned, but before he arrived Mary had recovered. No bones were broken, but a part of the chandelier had struck her arm, which was badly bruised and swollen, and Mary had fainted from the pain.

Jim forgetting all his former hardness of heart, lifted her in his arms and carried her to a divan. Mary looked up lovingly at him; then a look of fear came into her face.

"My brother!" she moaned.

"Your brother?" stuttered Jim.

"He was with me—quick, Jim; quick, see if he is hurt!"

Just then the stranger turned up for himself. "Mary!" he cried anxiously.

"I'm all right, Jed. Are you?"

"Sure thing!"

"Jed, this is Mr. Maclean: Mr. Maclean, my brother, Jed Naseby."

"Pleased to meet you," stammered Jim, as the men shook hands. Jim called a taxi and took Mary and her brother to their rooms.

He was around bright and early at the restaurant next morning, waiting for Mary when she came in.

"Mary, I must 'fess up," said Jim contritely. He told her the story of his mistake.

"Oh, Jim, Jim, will you ever learn?" Jed came in. Mary went toward him holding Jim's hand.

"Jed, I can't go to California with you and Helen because I'm going to marry Jim!"

Keep a small bottle of carmelized sugar to color gravies. Brown sugar in a clean, smooth frying pan until a dark brown, add boiling water to dissolve the sugar and bottle the liquid. A few drops will color a bowl of gravy.

In steaming puddings like suet or plum puddings which keep for some time if small baking powder cans (one-pound cans) are used the slices are shapely and there are never any broken bits to waste. Boston brown bread steamed in baking powder cans cooks more quickly, may be reheated in the cans and it also slices in attractive-sized pieces.

To remove the small feathers from game dip the bird after picking it as well as possible in melted paraffin: the wax when cool will come off with the small pinfeathers. The paraffin may be melted and strained and used again and again

THE FUNCTIONS OF FOODS.

No housemother who reads the current news and magazines can be ignorant in regard to the importance of food study. There are a few general principles which if borne in mind when supplying the food for the family, will feed them correctly. First in importance is the point that all families differ as to needs. The man who works at hard labor out of doors can eat, digest and assimilate foods that would injure one who is an inactive indoor worker. A growing child who is very active will consume and care for as much food as the average man, because he is making a framework and is covering that frame with good, healthy muscles. Food supplies the body with what it needs for growth and for energy. There are certain elements which are required to support life; many of them in very small quantities are found in the body, but if these are lacking the health begins to break. These elements are carbon, oxygen nitogen, sulphur, phosphorus, iron, calcium, potassium, sodium and several others in small amounts. The foodstuffs which furnish these elements are:

Examples of the different classes of foods:

Proteins—which yield carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, sulphur and sometimes iron and phosphorus.

Proteins—lean meats, fish, eggs, milk, cheese and peas, beans and lentils.

Fats—fat of meat, butter, cream, vegetable oils, nuts and yolk of eggs.

Carbohydrates—rice and other cereals, potatoes, other starchy vegetables, fruits, honey and sugar.

Mineral matter—fruits, green vegetables, meat, milk, whole wheat and other grains, egg yolk, water.

Fats—which yield carbon, hydrogen and oxygen—these are the heat-producing foods. In winter we need more of such food to keep up the body heat

Obituary

Elizabeth Matilda Millikin, the daughcer of Rolland and Almira Thomas, was born November 28, 1850, near West Jefferson, Madison County, Ohio. Her early education was received in the country school in that county.

During her girlhood days she attended the Sunday School at Foster Methodist Episcopal Chapel, in Jefferson Township, Madison County.

She was united in marriage to John L. Millikin March 27, 1873, and to this happy union were born four children Charles Rolland, Wyatt Lester, Marvin Stanley, and Lena Maud, all of whom survive the mother except Lena Maud who was called home nine years ago.

Mrs. Millikin united with the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church as a charter member, March 23, 1906. She worked whole-heartedly and faithfully in the old building which had formerly been a saloon, on West Broad Street, to establish this church. She lived to serve her Lord in this congregation in many ways. She was a faithful and loyal attendant at Divine worship. She was a leading member of the Ladies Aid Society and Personal Workers Sunday School Class in which organizations she was first to help and last to shirk. Her work in the Ladies Aid will be best remembered by those who worked along side of her in the quilting and by those who, like Martha of old were with those who served. She was constantly thinking of others first and was knowu in the community as a friend to all. For twenty five years she with her surviving husband has lived on the Hilltop seeing it grow materially and spiritually. On November 20, 1895, they moved to the city from the farm and have made this their home ever since that time.

Mrs. Millikin was also noted for her cheerfulness and disposition to console. Many and oft are the times she has helped not only the members of her own household in this way, but many friends; we knew her intimately as "Mother" Millikin and Grandma. Her children rise up and call blessed.

As faithfulness is always rewarded she will receive the "well done good and faithful servant, enter in the joy of thy Lord." All who knew her will miss her

Her decease came suddenly, Monday morning, June 28, at about 11 o'clock Besides her sons and husband she leaves seven grandchildren.

She hath fought a good fight she hath kept the faith: may our union with her in the great future be happy because we too have followed her example of faithfulness. The Lord gave and Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Happy Quintet at Chautauqua

COLLEGE SINGING GIRLS.

HERE is a typical newspaper comment giving an excellent idea of the program to be enjoyed when the College Singing Girls come on Chautauqua's first day:

"No better nor more enjoyable entertainment has ever been given here than that furnished by 'The College Singing Girls.' It was something different from anything we have yet had, and was a real musical as well as artistic treat. The singing was delightful, and the long program of eighteen numbers was nearly doubled by the numerous encores. There were eight changes of costume during the evening, and as many of the selections given were from popular musical comedies the whole affair was a refreshing novelty. Many of the numbers won double encores, those especially enjoyed by the audience being 'Hello, People,' from the comic opera 'Havana;' the 'Motor Song,' from 'Miss Pocahontas;' the 'College Flag Song,' from 'Over the Garden Wall,' and the 'Drum Song,' from 'Pauline.'"

MOST FAMOUS GERMAN TRIBE

Hessian Infantry Has Been Known and Celebrated Since the Earliest Days of History.

The chief strength of the armies of the ancient Germans consisted in their infantry. For infantry no tribe was more celebrated than the Hessians, or Catti, who dwelt in the district of Catzenellenbogen, and were better trained than all others to military discipline and to the maneuvers of regular warfare. The Hessians were not only very tall, powerful and undaunted warriors, who intimidated their foes by their fierce and terrific aspect, but they also possessed secure military positions and were under a more strict obedience to their leaders than any other troops.

Among the Hessians the young men wore iron rings as a badge of servile rank until the slaughter of an enemy had proved them to be deserving of their freedom. They were accustomed to leave the beard unshaven until warlike exploits had proved their manhood. Before a battle a war song was chanted by the bards, who were the singers and philosophers of the Germans.

Among the Hessians there was a company of young men who imposed an obligation on themselves to be always the foremost in battles, for which service they were maintained by the public cost. The troops were drawn up according to clans or families, and when it was possible the wives and children of the combatants were spectators to the battle from some secure place. The mothers exulted in binding the glorious wounds which their sons had received and the warriors found their sweetest recompense in the animated praises of their wives.

In the Game of Life.

Don't imagine that in the long run you can ever "get ahead" of anyone by trying to do so. In the game of life none ever comes out winner except by forgetting the other fellow and sticking industriously to his own row.

IN MONOLOGUE AND IN STORY

ADRIAN M. NEWENS.

AS a monolog artist Mr. Newens is a standard by which others are measured. When he appears here on Chautauqua's second evening he will give either "To Him That Hath," "A Message From Mars" or "A Singular Life." He is an individual artist presenting many characters in one continuous story or play. He likes his work and makes immediate friends of his audience. Probably the strongest point in his work is the message that he brings to his audience. His entertainment is a sermon without a preacher, a lecture without a lecturer a drama without actors or stage properties.

Church Doings

The Burgess ave. U. B. church will celebrate the breaking of ground for their new building to be at corner of Sullivant and Burgess avenues, next Sunday. The morning service will be at 10:30, when Bishop Matthews will preach. At 2:30 will be the ground-breaking service with Bishop Matthews in charge. Rev. S. F. Dougherty will also give an address, and special music by the Fifth ave. U. B. Quartet. Bishop Mutthews will also speak in the evening.

This church, though one of the Hilltop's youngest churches, has made rapid strides forward, having outgrown its present structure and made a new and more commodious building necessary. Rev. E. B. White, the pastor, has worked hard and faithfully with his people for the upbuilding of this new church and well have they succeeded.

Everybody is invited to these services next Sunday and will be given a cordial welcome.

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

C. F. Bowman, Pastor

Preaching with evangelistic service at 7:30.

Regular prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30.

You will always find a hearty welcome at this church. If you are a stranger here and have no church home, come and worship with us.

HOGE MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN

10:30 a. m., Morning Worship and Sermon: "The Worship of Christ."

6:30 p. m., Senior Christian Endeavor.

7:30 p. m., Evening Worship and Sermon: "The Old, Old Story."

At the morning service a special offering will be received to help pay our share of the expense in the conduct of the Daily Vacation Bible School. The officers ask that all make a special effort to be present and to bring some offering as their part in this important work of leading the children into a knowledge of things religious. The fee the children pay is not sufficient to pay the total cost. Come and help as you feel you are able!

This will be the last preaching services in Hoge Memorial Church until September. The Sunday School will continue to hold sessions and the Senior Christian Endeavor will meet regularly. Make an effort to be present at both services on the Sabbath.

Hoge Memorial Church is backing the Hilltop Chautauqua through individual effort as well as through the work of the women of the Ladies' Aid Society. Get your season ticket now. The price advances when the Chautauqua opens. In this day of high costs the price is ridiculously reasonable. Our church will unite on Sunday evening, August 1st, with all other churches in the union meeting with the program under the big brown tent.

The "Crystal" Electric Washer

Provides quickly and easily, an abundance of clean clothes for everyone in the family, without the back breaking process of washing by hand, and with less injury to the finer garments.

You can trust embroidery and undergarments, your Georgettes and your precious table linens to the Crystal with perfect confidence. The smoothly running, one-way cylinder sends the rich, bubbling suds through and through the meshes of the cloth, quickly loosens the dirt and washing it away, leaving the clothes spotlessly clean.

Combining gentleness and thoroughness as it does, the "Crystal" is an ideal washer for the fastidious housekeeper.

Call at our store see this wonder of wonders; and a demonstration in your home will convince that the Crystal IS really best.

A Birthday Adventure

By LILY WANDEL

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Avora had put the tiny apartment in order, bathed and dressed herself, and then wondered how on earth she could kill the long day ahead.

She had been married a little more than a year, and outside a few friends of her husband, who did not interest her, she did not know any one in the city. Each day passed as the one before—a little housework, a lot of dressing and a round of shopping or reading. She was frankly tired of the department stores, and her eyes stung from too much reading. She was more than bored; she was suffering, longing for companionship; some one congenial and interesting. Today at least must be different, for it was her birthday. The frown disappeared, and a smile curved her pretty lips as a bright idea came to her. Skipping to the phone she called her husband's office number.

"This is Avora, Herbert. I'm awfully lonesome, honey; how about our having lunch together at some nice place?" Her voice vibrated with eagerness.

"Sorry," came back the answer, "but I have an appointment with a business friend at the club, dear."

She hung up the receiver slowly, her chin quivering not so much from disappointment as from the monotonous view ahead. Then quite suddenly she tossed her head pertly.

"Why not pretend," she laughed—"pretend that I'm going to meet some one for lunch and be happy in the expectation!"

She sauntered slowly along the sunlit city streets, enjoying the crowds, the early summer breeze and most of all the silly little pretense of meeting somebody for lunch.

She Was More Than Bored.

"Now let me see; where will I meet my phantom companion? Oh, I know; in the lobby of the Albermarle, where Herbert and I have met occasionally." And she walked on carelessly, happily to the hotel.

For awhile she watched with envious eyes how one woman after the other smilingly welcomed her escort, husband or friend and disappeared together in the nearby dining room. Then she was attracted by a young man entering the lobby. He had a pleasing appearance and was immaculately dressed; he interested Avora. His glance went around the lobby searchingly, then stopped and looked at her keenly, so that the blood shot into her round cheeks. He advanced, smiling confidently and Avora, confused, not sure just what to do, found herself smiling back. It flashed through her mind that here was an opportunity for a half hour's innocent amusement—a break in the run of monotonous days.

When he came near murmuring, "You remember me, don't you?" she nodded cheerfully and made room on the settee for him to sit down.

He was a most entertaining talker. Avora listened fascinated by his accounts of his travels in South America. She found herself asking questions and making laughing, witty replies.

He told her about Buenos Aires, he spoke of the wealth of the city, the wonderful public works and buildings. He spoke so convincingly that Avora, who had been always bored with anything pertaining to Latin-America, found herself keenly interested.

"This is not hearsay," he went on, "I have been there lately. It is a wonderful opportunity."

"For what?" asked Avora.

"To invest," answered the young man earnestly, though unexpectedly. His companion drew back puzzled. "The city has issued some new 6 per cent bonds; they are wonderfully secured. It is a safe investment, etc."

If he had suddenly drenched Avora in ice water he could not have chilled her more thoroughly. And under it the burning mortification. He had chosen her as a possible customer for his bonds and she had fallen for his smooth talk.

Instantly she rose to her feet, adjusting her fur. "I have an appointment," she remarked icily.

He accompanied her to the street, still talking about the bonds. "I don't ask you to decide now. Here is my card; look me up in a day or so. If there is anything I can do for you or explain—"

She ignored the proffered pasteboard and nodding courtly, disappeared in the early afternoon throng.

When she reached home panting with indignation she paced the floor filled with mortifying thoughts and threw herself, wretched with self-reproach, across the bed. Conscience began to prick, too, so that finally the only relief was to decide to tell Herbert about it. It was odd, though, she thought with just a touch of vanity, "that he would take me for a woman of wealth!" And that comforted a little. "Herbert has talked to me about investing that little legacy Aunt Harriet left me, but I never could get interested in bonds and things."

She put off telling her husband till after dinner, and then when they were seated cosily in the little living room she found it very difficult to begin. It had happened so naturally, but to tell about it made the whole thing seem very common and ridiculous.

"Herbert," finally in a faltering voice, bending low over a bit of embroidery, "a man—a young man—was telling me about Argentine bonds—"

"Oh, yes," interrupted her husband, looking up from his paper, "that's so. Well, how did you like young Rigby? Nice, smart boy? Did you remember him?"

Avora looked up open-mouthed, then "No—I mean—" stopped, feeling very foolish.

"I told him, ten to one my wife won't remember that I introduced you one day in the broker's office. I told him to try our apartment first, and if you were out to try the shopping district; also might try the lobby of the Albemarle. Where did he meet you?"

"Albemarle," answered Avora weakly. "Herbert, did you want him to sell me a bond?"

"Oh, I don't know, dear. You see, your voice sounded so lonesome over the phone, and after you had hung up I remembered that it was your birthday. Young Rigby just happened to come in and I told him to look you up and try to interest you in some investments. I thought it would help you to pass a lonely day, dear. I tried to get you on the phone, but your line was busy."

His wife rose, with face averted; there were tears in her eyes.

"I hated to think of you all alone on your birthday, dear," added the husband cheerfully. "But come over here, Avora. We'll make it up tomorrow! How about going out to the country? Might look at some little bungalows in the suburbs. I think you would get acquainted very easily there and not be so lonesome, eh?" Avora cuddled up on her husband's lap and pressed a kiss on his cheek.

Antiquity of the Smiths.

In the United States the Smiths number about a million. It has been discovered that there was a man named Smith living in Egypt in B. C. 227, and there may have been even earlier Smiths. The Smiths (remarks a writer) have always shown themselves more clannish in the United States than in other countries. They once organized a banquet at which the guests were Smiths to a man, and the president was Captain Smith, the governor of Virginia. The cooks were Smiths, the waiters also, and a Smith said grace. An ode was specially composed for the occasion by a poet Smith, and this was issued in book form by a publisher named Smith.

Folks say we do a lot of things
We hadn't ought a had;
We never mean a bit of harm,
Nor do them to be bad,
But when a chance just comes along
With fun a peekin' through,
We take it mostly just because
We've nothing else to do.

Boys are an awful problem,
All the grown-up people say,
But honest all we really want
Is just a chance to play.
And all us boys from country towns
And from the cities, too,
Will quit what you call mischief
If you showed us what to do.

Seeing Within

By CORONA REMINGTON

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Pauline Bainbridge looked up from the magazine she was reading into the eyes of Doctor Wheeling.

"I just walked in," said the young man, smiling.

"I see you did," replied the girl as she rose and extended her hand which he held a moment as though in meditation. Pauline tried to cover her embarrassment with flippancy.

"Jack, don't be so—touching," she smiled.

"Can't help it," he answered, "but I didn't come here this time to propose. I have something else serious on hand."

"What is it?" asked the girl, her manner changing at once.

"I have a pitiful case down on Oak street—a dear, little, old lady, who's pretty bad off and I can't get a nurse for her anywhere. Her husband does his best but he's so awkward and clumsy that he's worse than nothing. Couldn't you come and help us through the night? I know it's a whole lot to ask, but, somehow, I always think of turning to you first when I'm in trouble."

"Why, I'd love to go if mother'll let me," Pauline declared.

"Good! I knew you'd do it," he said warmly. "Leave your mother to me; I'll manage her—only wish you were as easily managed," he ended rather bitterly.

"Jack, please don't let's talk about that any more. I can't help it; marriage simply doesn't appeal to me—that's all."

A few minutes later the two were in the doctor's little red car headed for the patient's home on Oak street.

"Tell me all about it," asked Pauline, "and what I am to do."

"She's just a sweet, patient, little old lady who hasn't long to live."

"Dying!" said Pauline blankly, her face turning white.

"I'm afraid so. I was hoping she'd last a little longer, but she's been sinking all day though still conscious."

When they reached the house and cautiously approached the patient's room tears rushed into Pauline's eyes as she saw the bent and worn-out frame of an old man huddled in pathetic despair on his knees by the bedside.

"Martha," he sobbed, "if there were only some way I could tell you what it's meant to me to have you all these years. You've been my life, my very life; my companion through thick and thin, through good luck and bad—always my cheering companion and helpmate."

The tired, withered, little hand of the woman feebly attempted to stroke the white head beside her.

"And you," she said weakly, "you've been my wonderful lover and husband through all these years. Our bodies may be nearly worn-out, but nothing else has changed."

They both remained silent and the doctor and the girl slipped into the room.

"Ah, that's good of you to come back," said the old man, rising.

"And I brought a real helper, a veritable angel of mercy with me," smiled the doctor as he introduced Pauline, who went over and impulsively kissed the old man.

"I'm just going to call you Papa Williams," she said as she moved toward the bed and started smoothing things out.

"Doesn't that feel better?" she asked as Mrs. Williams smiled wanly up at her.

"Yes," she answered gratefully, "but my husband—my husband must be made to eat something."

Pauline hurried into the kitchen and prepared two poached eggs on toast, then coaxed the old man to come in with her and eat while the doctor watched over the patient.

"Now, Papa Williams, you'll just have to eat something, because I'm hungry and I can't eat without you," she begged.

"Child, you don't know what it is, what a wonderful thing it is—this love between a man and his wife—and each year it grows bigger and greater and more magnificent," he ended brokenly.

"But think what it's meant to you to have it all this time," she said tenderly, caressing the stooped form. "And you won't be separated so very long," she ended consolingly.

"No, I am sure of that. A thing like that must go on forever. It would be impossible to extinguish it."

When Mr. Williams had at last eaten the egg, the two went back into the sick room and took up the watch. The patient was sleeping quietly. The doctor rose and softly tiptoed out of the room, beckoning to Pauline.

"She's resting more normally than she has in a week—I wouldn't be surprised if she rallied and lasted quite a while yet, though, of course, she'll never be well."

"Is it possible!" said the girl, her voice trembling.

When at last the night was over and the two took their leave in the gray of the morning Doctor Wheeling felt justified in giving the devoted old man a crumb of encouragement as he gripped his hand.

"Shall we take a little spin into the country?" Wheeling asked the girl a minute later as he turned and stepped into the car.

"Please do," she begged.

"This is a wonderful time of day, when life is waking up," he said cheerfully, but Pauline was silent and unresponsive during the whole of the trip.

"What's the trouble, girlie?" he asked after a bit as he slipped a hand over hers.

"I was just thinking what a really wonderful thing married love is when you know it intimately," she answered simply.

"Do you mean it?" he asked, stopping the car abruptly.

"Yes," she replied as she wept out her pent-up feelings on the doctor's protecting shoulder.

DERIVATION OF CURRENT COIN

Word "Money" Easily Traced to Ancient Rome—Dollar of America Undoubtedly of German Origin.

The word money was derived from Moneta, one of the surnames of Juno; in whose temple the Romans first made coins. The word mint is supposed to be a contraction of the word Moneta through the Anglo-Saxon "mynet."

When we read that sterling has fallen in exchange value, who knows the origin of the term? Yet it is traced to the inhabitants of the Hansa towns known as Esterlings, who were invited by King John of England to come to England and reform the currency, which had become very corrupt. From that date good English money was known as sterling.

The shilling is from the Anglo-Saxon scilling, meaning a twentieth, so it takes twenty shillings to make a pound.

The English farthing meant the fourth of a penny and was actually broken from a penny in olden days, when the pennies were indented with a full cross so heavily that they could be snapped into four. This was a solution of making change, as the primitives understood it.

The franc is only another way of spelling the silver coin of the Franks and has no indication of value. Our own dollar has a German origin, having been the thaler, or more fully Joachim's thaler, the silver coin struck out of the silver found in the thal or valley of St. Joachim, France. This was extremely pure and being coined into ounces gave the real basis of the silver dollar, which weighs an ounce.

Few stop to consider what a cent is. It meant a hundredth, the French word for hundred, and is the appropriate name for the coin, which is one-hundredth of a dollar. The quarter is easy for it is one-fourth of the dollar. The nickel is so called because of the metal from which it is made, and the dime is a tenth, from the old French disme, traced to the Latin decem, ten.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Use the rich spiced sirup left from pickled peaches to baste the roast; it imparts a delightful flavor to veal, pork or lamb.

From a five-pound beef roast a small family may be served from three to five dinners and have the bones for soup stock. For the first meal the meat is roasted and basted with the drippings. For the second meal the roast is sliced and heated in the gravy, served hot with baked potatoes. For the third meal a meat pie with biscuit for the top; for the fourth, beef, creole style; for the fifth, croquettes.

Hechauffe of Beef, Creole Style.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter; add a tablespoonful each of minced onion and green pepper chopped fine; cook until tender; add three tablespoonfuls of flour, a cupful of broth, and one-half cupful of tomato puree, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and grated horseradish, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and two cupfuls of cooked diced meat. Serve in a rice border.

WASHINGTON WORE HAIR NET

Exhibit in Jumel Mansion Reveals How the Great Man's Wig Was Held in Place.

George Washington not only wore a wig, but he kept it in condition with a hair net. This was shown at an exhibition in Washington's headquarters in the old Jumel mansion on Washington Heights, New York, at annual meeting of the Washington Headquarters association. Among other exhibits was one consisting of a list of articles needed by Washington for his inauguration. It is written in ink and signed "G. Washington, 28th April, 1789." It says that Washington needed "ten shirts, ten stocks, four white and one silk handkerchief; one pair silk and one pair cotton hose, one hair net." The memoranda is in a little frame mounted with a couple of small engravings, one a portrait of Washington and the other showing the inauguration ceremonies.

An interesting French engraving is of Lafayette, showing Washington, Franklin and other Americans at one side.

Among recent acquisitions at the headquarters is a complete set of the New York Times and New Brunswick General Advertiser of 1815; an old bedspread with pattern worked in old-time lamp wicking; six hooked and braided rugs presented by Mrs. Arthur Bridge, made by her grandmother; 40 old colonial newspapers of colonial days have been purchased and a Revolutionary uniform, that of Paymaster J. J. Whitehead, has been loaned by Clarence Ladd Davis.

Madame Jumel's tall clock, taken from the house in 1887 and returned in 1910, the gift of Louis V. Bell, stands in the big main hall of the mansion.

Emperors of Japan Have Met Deaths of Violence From the Beginning of History.

There is probably no nation in the world that has ever treated its emperors so cavalierly as Japan has done to within the memory of living man, Raymond M. Weaver writes in Asia. Emperors have been deposed by dozens, emperors have been killed in generous numbers. One, Yomei, was stabbed without ado; one, Sujin, was assassinated by an emissary of the prime minister; the young Anotku was thrown into the sea to die like a rat, and it is piquant rumor, whispered in intimate circles, that Komei, father of the late Emperor Mutsuhito, died not of smallpox, as is the official report. Junnin Tenno was strangled on the island of Awaji, and one imperial personage (Daigo II) managed to escape from the distant island to which he was relegated, hidden under a load of dried fish. The number of crown princes slaughtered is too numerous to record. In the fourteenth century two rival houses defied each other for a period of 58 years, and the present emperor is descended from the branch branded by later historians as illegitimate. Ko Moranao, a worthy of the fourteenth century, is credited with having told his followers to "take the estates of the emperor if they wanted estates. A living emperor is a mere waster of the world's substance and a burden upon the people. He is not necessary, but, if we must have him, a wooden effigy would answer the purpose." For centuries the government was in the hands of the mayors of the palace, who set up one infant sovereign after the other, deposing each as he came to man's estate. From 1208 to 1304 there were actually no less than five ex-emperors living at one time.

Brains, not commonly used as food.

The above title can be truthful, with the two meanings, for if we used our brains more in the performance of our household duties we might save much labor and material; however, the subject of this article is to be the cooking and serving of brains. Brains have a delicate tissue that makes them suitable for many dishes which call for a tender meat. Remove the skin and fibers, place the brains in a dish and cover with cold water to which has been added a tablespoonful of vinegar. Let stand for two hours, changing the water once or twice. Then drain and cover with boiling water and just simmer on the back part of the stove. Drain and cool, and they are ready for use. Brains of beef, sheep, or pork are used equally well in any of these dishes:

Hilltop Chautauqua

The big tent for the Hilltop Chautauqua arrived and will be erected in Hill Crest Park at the foot of Eldon Ave., in readiness for the opening concert Saturday afternoon. The tent is water proof and will be delightfully situated in the litle park. It is expected that many people will take advantage of the location by arranging picnic suppers after the afternoon program.

There will be a meeting of all the guarantors of the Chautauqua this evening at 8 o'clock, at the Budd and Williamson barber shop. A complete check-up of the ticket campaign will be made and an organized "wind-up" is to be planned. Every one who wishes to make the Hilltop Chautauqua a success should buy their tickets without delay. An adult ticket for the entire seven days' program costs only $2.75.

A few tickets will be hidden this afternoon at 4 p. m. and all the boys and girls should be on hand at the corner of Broad street and Hague avenue to look for them. The finders will be admitted free to the Chautauqua.

Parents are urged to send their children to the Chautauqua as it will be an educational and entertaining week for them. Every day the Chautauqua "Story Girl" will tell the children stories, play games and train them for a pageant to be presented the last night of Chautauqua, entitled "The Good Fairy Thrift."

Season tickets for children under 14 may be had at $1.38.

POISON FIRST CONGO WEAPON

Native Turns to It Instinctively to Get Rid of an Enemy or an Annoyance.

To an African of the bush there is nothing remarkable about a white man killing wild creatures, but he does not sympathize with the naturalist who captures or purchases animals and seeks to bring them up by hand in order that he can take them to a land where the captives may serve to interest and instruct, R. L. Garner writes in the Century.

A native boy often tires of the task of keeping clean the cage of some animal or bird, and seeking a short way out of dilemma, poisons the pet. It never seems to occur to the boy that he may give up his job or that, if his charge is removed, his own removal follows as a matter of course. He simply obeys the native instinct to do away with a living annoyance, beast or man, by the easiest means, and to a Congo native, that is poison.

It may be stated almost as a rule that the Congo native will poison without compunction any man or beast that he wishes to get rid of. The sole exception to this rule lies in the white man, who is not to be poisoned with impunity, since a white man inspires a black with fear. But this fear does not extend to a white man's pets, and many a promising specimen for zoological parks lies buried in the bush because some native tires of caring for its cage.

POPULAR COMEDY TO BE HEARD AT CHAUTAUQUA

"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE."

THIS typical American comedy enjoyed a run of one year in New York City and another year in Chicago. It is said to create more laughs to the minute than any play in recent years. It runs over with humor and at the same time is absolutely clean and wholesome.

The company is scheduled for Chautauqua's sixth night and before they have been on the stage two minutes the play will reach out and rap you genially on the back. You will be aware of a warm, comfortable feeling that causes you to settle back contentedly with complete faith that it is going to keep you jovial and interested during the whole evening.

To a certain extent, "It Pays to Advertise" makes fun of advertising, but it is one of the best ads the advertising man can have. The central idea is an old one. It is the familiar story of the rich father and the idle son. The father makes a wager with his stenographer that she can not induce the son to go to work. She succeeds in getting him interested in a business proposition. He forms a partnership with a fellow who believes with all his heart and soul and amazing nerve that it pays to advertise. The father is a soap manufacturer, and the young fellows enter that field, flooding the territory with ads of their soap. The ad campaign is a tremendous success, but the young enthusiasts forget to make soap. The public demands the new soap, and the youngsters force the soap trust to buy them out at an enormous price.

The Midland Ave. Bible class will meet at the home of Mrs. Himebrook, 294 Midland Ave., Wednesday, Aug. 4, at 2 p. m. Mrs. Marshall will be assistant hostess.

Just Like the Peacock.

Although the American redstart is a little bird only five and a half inches long, it has one trait in common with the gorgeously plumed peacock, namely, that it seems to be very fond of its handsome plumage and is constantly spreading its tail feathers. The redstart's colors are red, orange and white, and later on it attains the black portion of its plumage on back tail and wings.

Church Doings

HILLTOP CHURCH OF CHRIST

Rev. J. N. Johnston, Pastor.

Communion, 10:30 A. M.

Sermon—"The Personal Touch of Christ."

No evening service during July and August.

The annual picnic of the Missionary Society and Cheerful Workers of the Hilltop Church of Christ will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 10, at Glenwood Park, having been postponed until this date on account of the Chautauqua. Every woman of the church is considered a member of the Cheerful Workers and is urged to attend. A committee will plan the bill of fare and consult with the ladies later as to what to bring. Every mother who attends may bring her children. Let us have a good attendance of the women of the church that day.

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

15 North Oakley avenue. Rev. J. M. Wenrich, pastor.

10:30—Public worship. Pastor's sermon topic, "A Retrospect." This will be the final service in the little building at 15 N. Oakley Ave., as we will have to vacate. We want every member present for this final service, both Sunday school and church service.

The Sunday school and church on Sunday, Aug. 8, will be held in the basement of the new church at W. Broad and Terrace Sts.

We need a piano. Is there any one who would help the mission by donating one? Perhaps you would like to get a new one for yourself. Call Bell phone, Hilltop 2896.

ST. PAUL UNITED EVANGELICAL

Public worship at 10:30 A. M.

Subject of sermon, "When the Church Fails."

Intermediate Endeavor at 6:30 P. M. Subject, "Self Improvement." (Consecration meeting.) Subject of sermon at 7:30 P. M., will be "The Converted Man."

Regular prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30 P. M. If you are a stranger here in the city, come and worship with us. You will find here a very congenial people, and a very helpful service.

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

C. F. Bowman, Pastor

Sunday School at 9:15. Subject: "David Brings the Ark to Jerusalem."

Public Worship, 10:30. Subject: "Our Holy Sabbath Day."

Epworth League meeting, 7:00. Miss Bernice Grumney is the leader. The topic for the meeting is "Cultivation of High Ideals."

There will be no worshipful service at the church on account of the union service of all the churches of the Hilltop at the Chautauqua tent. An urgent invitation is extended to all to attend this union service. This service will not require a ticket. A collection will be taken during the service which will go to the Redpath Bureau. Any regular church collection envelope placed in the collection will go to its proper church, however.

Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening at 7:00. Notice the early hour, thus arranging time to go to the Chautauqua.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will be held at the church Wednesday, Aug. 11, instead of Aug. 5, as previously announced. This meeting will be at 2:00 P. M. Ladies of the First Division will serve.

Mrs. J. A. Mitchell,
Cor. Sec'y.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30. E. Ray Evans, Superintendent.

Rev. A. E. Cowley, pastor. 47 N. Park Ave.

Preaching, 10:30, by Rev. Dr. L. S. Colborn of Linden Baptist Church. Subject: "The Name That Is Above Every Name." Be sure to hear Dr. Colborn. He is one of the leading Baptist pastors in the city and one of the few of the grand old type left.

There will be no Senior B. Y. P. U. because several of our young people will attend the Ohio Baptist Assembly at Granville.

The evening service will be held in unison with other churches at Chautauqua grounds.

The pastor, Rev. A. E. Cowley will preach at 10:30 a. m. at Linden Baptist church.

Fiddle-Dee-Dee

By A. W. PEACH

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The runner must have preceded her home, for before she found the courage to speak to her father, he came into the library where she was reading. His heavy face was set in determined lines.

"What is this your aunt writes about your falling in love with some fiddler in the city while you were visiting there?" Mr. Clyburn demanded.

The rose color in her cheeks deepened, and she smiled faintly. It was just like him. Born of a race of men who had earned their bread in hard ways and looked upon art and music as the play interests of children, he was just the type of man to be worried by her thought that his only daughter was to marry a man interested in such things. The great granite cutting works he owned were like him—immovable, firm, unbending.

Yet there was a serious side to it. She had learned to love Marr Shanlo—love him with sure assurance of the heart's first choice.

"I was interested—am interested, father, in a violinist," she began.

"Violinist or fiddler—what's the difference?" he demanded with a snort.

"His name is Marr Shanlo," she added, ignoring his question.

"A heathen name in the bargain! Marr Shanlo—sounds like a real American name, doesn't it? Now, Alice, I want you to stop this affair before it goes too far," he said grimly but with a touch of tenderness in his voice.

"I have asked him to come here for a visit," she said hesitatingly. "I was going to ask you tonight."

His mingled wrath and astonishment kept him silent for a moment. Then he exploded. "Well, let him come. But he is to make his visit brief," he went on rising. "And I want to see as little of him as I possibly can."

His broad back disappeared in the smoking room.

She sat silent, a sudden chill in her heart. Marr was coming for one purpose—to ask her father for her hand. The welcome he would get was evident. Storm clouds were gathering that might wreck her happiness and his.

Shanlo came the next day, his precious violin under his arm, while Mr. Clyburn was at the office. In the quiet friendliness of the big library Marr listened with grave, mild eyes to her as she told him the situation—of her own fears.

Then he asked the dreaded question: "Will you go with me if he refuses me?"

She looked at him with frightened eyes. "He is too dear, too good to me, and too old."

Shanlo leaned over with his tender shadowy eyes upon hers. "My dear, I, of course, would not ask it. I must win him over."

Easily said, but how was it to be done? That evening Clyburn came in, gaunt, powerful, and found himself facing a slight, dark-eyed youth. The old man tried hard to cover his scorn, but it was evident; and all through the dinner hour, Alice felt the air filled with the tenseness of natures at odds. Her own cheeks reflected the nervous tension upon her.

After the dinner, Clyburn leaned back and almost glared at the pleasant youth before him. "I have a billard table upstairs—play?" he asked almost as if ready for the answer. "No."

Shanlo nodded with a smile, and the two men went upstairs.

Alice busied herself with household interests and her sewing until they returned, a glow of victory on her father's face.

"A good game—a good game! I was 25 points behind him—caught him and beat him!"

Alice caught a twinkle in the deep brown eyes of her lover, and turned to congratulate her father, who, she knew, was proud of his ability as a player. Then she hoped her father would go, leaving her for a happy hour with Marr and his tender wooing.

Her father sat down instead and his face grew stern. He turned to Shanlo, and his suddenness left the young couple breathless.

"Shanlo, I know why you are here. Now, don't ask me! I cannot—will not, consent to your marrying Alice: It is settled now. Stay and make us a visit, but nothing more. I ask it of you as a guest in my house that there be nothing more between you."

Alice, shivering with the shock, saw the hidden lines of strength emerge through the mildness of her lover's face. "I will respect your wishes, sir," he answered quietly, his words carrying far more than their dictionary meaning.

Without a word, her father rose and went out.

In pain-filled silence, the two chatted, but the ache in the heart of each broke through their lips at last.

"It is wrong—unreasonable, dear," she cried at last in tearful anger and despair.

"Sweetheart, I know, but we must hope and pray to change his mind. Now, we must part—good night."

She lingered, swaying. "Not even ——"

"Not even a good night kiss. Sweet dreams."

Shanlo did not go the next day, because she could not bear to have him. Instead, he went to a dance given at the country club pavilion. Her father went, too.

Her father, one of the gayest in the old set, took a whim to have the old people dance one of the old dances, by name the "Nancy Lee." All went well except the orchestra leader; he was "stuck" for a tune—too old fashioned for him. In despair, with couples in place, Clyburn looked about and saw Shanlo speaking to the leader who handed the violinist a "fiddle," and sharp strains broke on the silence. With a yelp of joy at the first notes, Clyburn caught his partner, and the dance was on.

The dance was about to end. Then suddenly the music changed into a dreamy, tender, slow tune. Alice saw her father's gay, excited face change; sober and then quicken; and she saw him cross the hall and draw onto the floor a gray-haired woman—an old sweetheart of his in a golden long ago.

Other gray-headed couples swung out, and others. And while the rest of the young people looked on with mingled amusement, wonder and admiration, one girl watched with tears in her eyes. Never had she seen her father so rapturously happy—dancing again an old dance of his youth with a girl he had once loved.

The dance ended. He came up to her, the harshness gone from his face. In place of it an almost boyish enjoyment touched with a bit of sadness. He nodded to the direction of Shanlo. "He is some fiddler, little girl; some fiddler."

Her heart beat quickened at the words, and then caught its slower rhythm. His mood was the mood of a moment.

An hour later, over the cigars,

SAFEGUARDS CHILD LIFE

Chicago Detective Will Tell Story on Chautauqua's Third Afternoon.

HARRY J. LOOSE.

ON Chautauqua's third afternoon patrons will meet one of the most unique personalities in America: Detective Loose comes from Chicago where he has handled every known class of criminal from the "pick pocket trust" to the so-called "million dollar burglar trust." In co-operation with the United States Secret Service he has made almost countless arrests and prosecutions in the municipal, state and federal courts. His extensive knowledge of crime and its causes is supplemented by a rare sense of personal duty, amounting to a religious conviction, to arouse parents, teachers, communities and all of society to the necessity of overcoming the criminal menace to the rising generation. The safe-guarding of child life appeals to Mr. Loose above all else.

A Good Catch

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Either of them would be a good catch," said Mrs. Hendricks, bustling about the studio as she setting things to rights. "I believe, though, I would take Mr. Seldon—if I was doing the selecting.

Mrs. Hendricks, erstwhile society matron, now "on her uppers," and serving Clare Hawley as general business manager, social manager, bookkeeper, housekeeper and maid, punched a sofa pillow in the face and reversed it against the back of the davenport, then stood off, arms akimbo, and surveyed the offending object with a no less critical eye than she would have used in arranging draperies in a royal palace.

Clare Hawley, artist, clad in dressing gown and slippers, smiled somewhat tolerantly, as though the subject interested her about as much as the price of ice in the arctic, and went on munching meditatively on a piece of dry toast, while she reclined lazily in a deep, luxurious chair. Now and then she sipped from a cup of steaming coffee.

Success had been dawning with Clare for three months. Her picture, "The Water Lily's Dance," had met with such favor once it got on exhibition, that she was carried in 24 hours from the bottom rung of the ladder, where she had plodded and grieved, and half starved, to the top, where she worked when it struck her fancy and lived on the best the land afforded.

Much of her success with "The Water Lily's Dance" was due to the efforts and influence of Mrs. Hendricks, who was largely responsible for placing the picture on exhibition; so when Mrs. Hendricks suffered a decided reverse of fortune through the eccentri-cities of Wall street and came to her with a tale of woe, Clare gave her a place in the studio. Mrs. Hendricks never would have served anyone else in the same capacity, but she worshiped art and artists, and especially did she worship her protege.

"I Believe, Though, I Would Take Mr. Seldon."

"Mr. Pontello, though, is the best looker," Mrs. Hendricks observed, seizing a dustless duster and getting busy with it about the legs of a table. "And they're both rich—that's the best part of it," she added as an afterthought, as though that phase of the subject had never before occurred to her.

Clare, draining the coffee cup, wiped some remnants of toast from her lap and laid the cup and plate on the table.

"Oh, they're both fine fellows, and both good looking, and both very accomplished musicians, and both rich," she said, standing and making a few alterations in the arrangement of her hair. "Mr. Seldon plays wonderfully on the violin, and Mr. Pontello has no peer on the piano."

If Mrs. Hendricks could have become cognizant of the workings of Clare's mind just then, she would have gasped with astonishment, for neither the pale blue eyes of Mr. Seldon nor the midnight orbs of Mr. Pontello played even a minor role in the meditations of the procrastinating artist.

The picture that Clare visualized had to do with a country town. She visioned herself in a sunbonnet and gingham dress walking along the street in company with a freckled youth who was carrying her books.

The scene shifted and the new one might have been called "Six Years Later" if it had been part of a film play. In her fancy she was attending a barn dance, where country lads and lassies cavorted and coquetted and flirted in their rustic way, and all of them were smiling and happy, although none was handsome or accomplished or rich.

The music was furnished by a tall, gangling youth, mounted on a platform, sawing on a violin and stamping his foot loudly to make up for the absence of drums. The gangling youth was the freckled boy grown up.

Another scene showed Clare on the rear platform of the last coach of a train, which was moving from a station. The gangling youth stood on the platform, a forlorn-looking object, and Clare's eyes filled with tears as the train carried her out of sight.

Clare sighed, and took from a drawer of the table a letter which she opened and read. Her mouth took on a wistful expression and her eyes glistened.

Mrs. Hendricks bustled into the room an hour later and found Clare busy at her easel.

"Have you decided, dearie?" she asked. "Have you chosen?"

"I have. At our little party tonight you will announce my engagement."

"To Mr. Seldon?" breathed Mrs. Hendricks hopefully.

Clare shook her head.

"I'm not telling you who it is to be. You will know no sooner than the others. When you get ready to make the announcement I will slip you a folded paper containing the name."

Mrs. Hendricks looked disappointed, crestfallen.

"By the way," said Clare, "a boy from my old home town is coming to see me today—and he's going to be a guest at the party."

Mrs. Hendricks' lips framed a remonstrance, but an idea struck her and she exclaimed:

"That's a good idea. It will be something novel; he'll furnish some amusement and be no end of fun. Is he an entertainer?"

"Yes, he plays the violin; not like

Fiddle-De-Dee

Shanlo saw the strong face, still wearing the sternness of his race, but kinder, turn to him. "My boy, I was a bit hard on you. Now, say, give up your fiddling except now and then. I'll give you a place in the business, pay you $40 a week to start. Stay here, and later on, why—we can see about Alice."

Shanlo said quietly, "I make four thousand a year now, and shall make more."

"Four thousand a year fiddling—what are you talking about?"

The violinist proved his statement in a few words. Clyburn drew on his cigar with heavy puffs and repeated. "Four thousand dollars fiddling and more coming. Humph! No, I guess you do not want that job. I suppose you do want Alice. Well—you can have her!"

He went to the hall and called her. She came wondering, but he said nothing as he went by. She stood looking at Shanlo.

Shanlo smiled and opened his arms. "Now for that goodnight kiss!" he said with a slight waver in his otherwise steady voice; and with a quick cry of glad understanding she came to him.

Mr. Seldon, but he plays well, in his own peculiar way."

All was ready for the party except that Clare and the newly invited guest were absent. Mrs. Hendricks told Mr. Seldon and Mr. Pontello of the treat that was in store—a selection by a rustic violinist, and also that Clare's choice of a husband would be announced. Both Seldon and Mr. Pontello looked hopeful.

Presently Clare entered, followed by a young man. The latter's face was not unattractive, in spite of the deep tan and freckles peeping through it.

Introductions followed and soon dinner was served. Then the evening's impromptu entertainment began, Mr. Seldon opening with the very latest of classical selections. Sam Hilton, the newcomer, looked in awe and stared helplessly at the battered violin case he had lugged in with him.

Mr. Pontello sat at the piano and rendered a masterpiece in skillful fashion, and discouragement displayed itself on Mr. Hilton's countenance.

"Now, Mr. Hilton, will you favor us?" Mrs. Hendricks asked.

The person addressed rose awkwardly, opened the violin case and took out a sad-looking instrument. He placed it to his chin, tightened the bow and applied it to the strings, and then his arm began to shake and his legs to tremble. A moment later he braced up, his arm became steady, his legs stiffened, and the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" began to sound in the ears of the assemblage. Their laughing ceased and their faces grew grave as they listened. Clare actually cried.

When the program came to a close Mrs. Hendricks, at a sign from Clare, rose with a smirk, coughed and began:

"Friends, this is a most auspicious occasion, for Miss Clare is to announce her choice in matrimony, or, rather, I am to announce it for her. So I hereby make known her engagement to—"

Clare slipped a folded paper to Mrs. Hendricks, who opened it and read aloud: "Mr. Samuel Hilton of Clearbrook."

Then Mrs. Hendricks gasped, seemed to choke and sank dazed into the nearest chair.

Those who refuse the old-fashioned boiled dinner because of the odor in the house may cook it very satisfactorily in the fireless cooker. If such dishes are cooked in an open kettle the odor will not be as strong or as lasting. An excellent preparation for such meats as liver, veal and other somewhat tasteless meats is to put them for two or three days in winter, one day in hot weather, into a strong pickle made with salt, saltpeter and brown sugar, seasoned to taste, either with spice, pepper sauce, onions, or any other seasoning; then cook with cabbage, turnips, carrots, corned beef and potatoes. Such a meal should be taken only by people active enough to digest it.

Indian Pudding.—Scald quart of milk and add three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal mixed with a little cold milk, stir and cook for a few minutes, then pour into a large stone baking dish, add another quart of milk, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of suet, and one cupful of raisins and two well-beaten eggs. Put into a slow oven and stir every half hour for the first half of the cooking, then dredge with flour and brown. Bake for five or six hours. The pudding is done when it is covered with a rich brown crust. This dish may be reheated any number of times. Serve with a hard sauce made by creaming butter and sugar, adding nutmeg for flavoring.

Hilltop Chautauqua

The Hilltop Chautauqua opened up its week's engagement last Saturday with a good sized attendance despite the severe rain storm previous to the opening hour. The first evening's entertainment was largely attended. Sunday was given over to two services, one at 3 p. m., and the other at 8 p. m., the churches very wisely dispensing with their respective evening services and uniting at the tent, where the attendance was about 2,000 at night.

The numbers given each afternoon and night during the week have been of the highest order and have decidedly pleased the large attendances. All who have been there speak in highest terms of this, the first Chautauqua on the Hilltop and already the talk of one next year is quite prevalent. The performers are of the highest grade and their success as entertainers bear witness to the fact that the Redpath Company are producing the best there is in Chautauqua service. Friday will be the last day on the program. If you have not yet seen any of these numbers, go and see for yourself and be convinced.

The Hilltop Chautauqua has certainly been appreciated by this community. It has been of great value in its inspiration and uplift. A word of appreciation and praise should be given to the splendid group of Hilltop men who signed as guarantors and who have backed this movement and made it a success. Such work in our community should not go without an expression of thanks. Here it is from one who was not a guarantor.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

It has been the privilege of the writer to attend several of the sessions. On the whole it is a splendid course. The magnificent reading by Nowens and that masterly lecture of Sir John Foster Fraser were well worth the price of the season ticket. The public of the hilltop owe their splendid business men a great debt of appreciation for making this wonderful treat possible. The Redpath people are to be highly commended.

I have the understanding that this will be the forerunner of others in the years to come. The expense has been covered.

The writer has heard of people wearing full dress and with all others, regrets that at times a half dress was worn instead of a whole. Why this is necessary is a problem and those who are responsible for it ought to know and understand that the Christian conscience of the community objects seriously to any such exhibitions. It is time to speak plain and to hope that this will not be repeated again. It mars a program that otherwise is ideal.

If the rest of the course is as good as what has been given, it will certainly be more than a success.

The Annual Conference of the United Evangelical Church will be held in Akron, O., beginning Sept. 1st. The law of this church is, that no pastor can remain on a charge more than five consecutive years. P. E. Smoke, the pastor of the St. Paul church has served the allotted time and will preach only two more Sundays, this Sunday and August 29. Sunday, Aug. 15, will be the last quarterly communion service in charge of the presiding elder, and Aug. 22 the pastor will be out of the city. We are very anxious that there shall be a large attendance of the membership of the church during the remainder of this conference year. Strangers are always welcome at this church.

MOORE'S
Slotted Anti-Carbon
FIRE-POT
Burns the Gas Smoke and Soot

The United States Government declares that soft coal contains within 6 per cent as much heating power as hard coal, and would be just as valuable for heating if the gas could be burned. Its statistics show:

"A bushel of hard coal contains 6 per cent volatile carbon or gas, 82 per cent fixed carbon or coke, making a total of 88 per cent heating power.

"A bushel of soft coal contains 38 per cent volatile carbon or gas, 44 per cent fixed carbon or coke, making a total of 82 per cent heating power."

In ordinary stoves it has never been possible to burn the gas of soft coal, and the greater part of its heating power has been lost.

Moore's Firepot with which Moore's Air-Tight Heater is equipped is constructed specially to burn all The Gas, The Smoke and The Soot of soft coal, making it as valuable for heat as hard coal.

Perpendicular flues extend from the bottom to the top, and completely surround the firepot on the outside. These are connected by narrow slots with the inside. The air which is admitted through the draft door is drawn up the flues and discharged through the slots against the sides of the coal; the heat frees the gas from the coal, which immediately mixes with the air and bursts into flame. The smoke passing out of the chimney is white, showing that all the heat-giving qualities in the coal have been consumed. The fire burns around the sides of the firepot, and gradually consumes the coal toward the center. There are no ashes between the fire and the pot, so that a great heat radiates through the firepot and dome.

In ordinary stoves the fire burns from the bottom and center toward the top and outside; the gas is driven up the chimney and wasted, and the ashes and fuel prevent heat radiating through the firepot.

Through the invention and use of Moore's Firepot the heating value of soft coal or slack is nearly doubled. The cheapest grade of slack coal can be used in this stove with the same success and satisfaction as the best grade of lump.

EASY TO MOVE

It is easy to move the Moore's Air-Tight Heater. The handsome foot rails can be turned upside down and hooked into the casing, when they can be used as carriers. You don't have to have help to move the stove at house-cleaning time.

CLEAN

Moore's Air-Tight Heater is a clean stove. It has a dust flue which connects the ashpit with the cast smoke elbow. When the easy running ball-bearing grate is shaken, the damper to the dust flue is opened and all dust is drawn up the chimney. In removing the ashpan a plate drops down in front of it which catches any ashes which may spill and would otherwise fall on the floor.

HANDSOME

The blacking does not burn off, and the stove is always bright. The reason is that the open ornamental casing rests on the extended base, and does not come in contact with the firepot or dome at any point. The stove remains bright and clean the entire season, which is an important feature in a parlor stove.

PERFECT FIRE CONTROL

Absolute control of the fire is the result of perfect fitting joints.

The ashpit draft door and slide have ground joints that are so perfect that when the parts are put together they are both water and air tight.

Perfect regulation of the fire is easy because of the long draft lever which allows the slide to be adjusted to the smallest fraction of an inch. The fire is easily held from 12 to 48 hours.

HEAT THE UPSTAIRS

In nearly every home there is a hall or rooms upstairs you would like to heat.

Moore's Air-Tight Heater is built to do this without interfering with heating downstairs. On the top of every stove is a collar and a large heating pipe can be attached to it and run to a register plate in the ceiling and a large volume of heat carried to the upper part of the house, thereby greatly adding to the comfort of the family.

SAFETY

A special feature of this stove is that children are not easily burned by falling against it.

Girl of Many Dialects; Joy Night Program

ETHEL HINTON.

ATTEND Chautauqua's Joy Night program (seventh night) and hear Miss Hinton and "Her College Gang." You must not miss this feature of the seven-day program if you want to hear new character sketches in song and dialect cleverly given by a charming young woman with rare good sense and phenomenal power to hold an audience.

Besides her successful work from New England to California, in this country, Miss Hinton has had wonderful experience in Europe. As an entertainer she appeared on all of the allied fronts and with the army of occupation in Germany. She told her stories between the heavy and light artillery positions on the American front during the Argonne drive, and also amidst the tragedies of the American hospitals.

PROFITEER ALWAYS WITH US

"Gougers" Were Known and Properly Dealt With in South Africa 200 Years Ago.

The profiteering evil is no new thing in South Africa. Speculating in the foodstuffs of the people is recorded as far back as 1726, and the present proposals to legislate for the evil have their counterpart in the placcaat issued nearly 200 years ago, an exchange states. January 9, 1726, the reference in the journal reads:

"Corn harvest very bad. Placcaat issued to prevent heartless speculators from buying up the wheat to the injury of the poor and creating a monopoly; also to advise all to sell what is not required for their own use to the company at the ordinary rates and not to sell to one another."

The harvest failed in the following year, and January 8, 1737, the journal sets forth "As the harvest has failed miserably, because of the all-destroying rust or honey dew, so that hardly any grain has been delivered to the company, and as the farmers all complain and, under the circumstances, the plans of self-interested parties may be thwarted (evidently the placcaat of the previous year did not scotch the speculator) a placcaat was published forbidding licensed bakers to bake white bread, cakes, biscuits, except for funerals or to sell even a pound of flour."

A Wise Prophet.

"I thought you told me you had a good idea of who was going to be elected."

"So I had. I knew it would not be any of the people who had not been nominated."

A Blunder Repaired

By ARNOLD PRESCOTT

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In some instinctive way Alice Gove soon felt as if she had known him for a long time; and she was rather glad that the erratic train service kept him and her waiting together. She had seated herself in the great city station to wait for the train that would carry her to her Northern home; and he had seated himself beside her. Soon they had entered into conversation; his keen brown eyes had looked pleasantly into her gray ones; and she had been content to wait.

Suddenly, he had started and said to her quickly, "Will you look after this case of mine until I return? I will not be gone long."

She had readily agreed without thinking much about his request. She saw his tall form disappear through the great door. He was walking rapidly.

She looked at the case. It was large and heavy; she did not wonder that he had left it with her if he were merely going to find out about some train or ask some question at the information window.

But he did not return, and the fact worried her, for in a short time her own train would be pulling in. She almost forgot her quick interest in him; it hardly seemed just an unselfish act for him to leave her without remembering that she too must catch her train.

She watched the door with growing concern, but through it came no tall figure and pleasant smiling face. The big hand of the station clock crept to the hour. She made up her mind there was nothing to do but to take the case and go with it. He might catch her on her way and—the thought made her heart jump—think she was running away with it. But she could wait no longer.

She caught up the case, and found it very heavy, but she started hurriedly for the door with it.

Sharply, as she passed through, an arm caught hers, and a voice with a note of triumph in it greeted her penetratingly:

"Just a moment, young lady, where are you going with that case?"

She looked up with astonishment and fear, dimly wondering if some friend of his had seen her or the brown-eyed owner had returned. Instead, she found herself looking into the cold eyes of a middle-aged man.

She explained rapidly, but her breathlessness and anxiety were suspicious. She saw the gate swinging. "Please, I must get my train!"

"No," the cool voice said, "not yet. I think you can put that off. Suppose you come with me, make no fuss, and we will tell you where to go!"

She looked around with wild eyes and wildly beating heart. A curious crowd had collected and was rapidly growing larger. The hand on her arm tightened. With her train pulling out, there was nothing else to do; and she yielded.

From somewhere another man seemed to come who placed himself on her left, and they led her through corridors into an office, where a uniformed man rose.

"I guess we have got him, or, rather, her," her first captor said, "walking right off with the plunder."

Through the chaos in her mind, she heard the words dimly, and out of the chaos began to creep a slow meaning that left her white and trembling.

The grip had contained stolen goods; these men were detectives, and they had been watching for some one with just such a case; and they had found her—and he with the kind, brown eyes whose friendly glance had won her heart with just one look—he had seen them, and not daring to take the grip had hurried out, leaving it with her.

They had opened the case on the desk, and the uniformed man's eyes were cold as he turned to her.

"Caught with the real stuff. Well, I guess we need worry no longer. She doesn't look the part, does she? More like some rosy-cheeked country girl—"

"I am not a thief!" she cried, desperately, trembling. She told as best she could the story; and she saw in each face the cold unbelief. She sank into a chair with a moan, covering her eyes as she wept.

A cool but kindlier voice said, "Buck up and come with us."

They went into the corridor and down into the station. Through tear-filled eyes she glanced in the direction where she had sat those happy half hours with her brown-eyed friend. She saw a tall figure standing here! There was no doubt!

She caught the detective's arm, and incoherently whispered and talked to him. He suddenly seemed to grow tense. "Here, Space, keep this girl while I nab him!"

She stood in the grasp of the officer, and saw the other, putting himself between the tall form and the door, go up and clap the other mildly on the shoulder. The other turned, and she saw both in earnest conversation. They glanced in her direction, and suddenly that tall figure swung with long strides toward her, and, nearing her, she saw the friendly face set with some emotion.

He came up to her. "Little girl I owe you more than an apology. I did a ridiculous stunt!"

As he talked she heard the detective say to the other, "It's all off. Come on."

Wondering, dazed and weary with the stress, she heard her station friend saying, "Now come with me to a quiet place and let me explain."

She followed dumbly, half hearing what he said, and found herself in a little corner in a winsome bit of a restaurant. His mild eyes held her gently, and the soothing tones of his voice stilled the tempest in her to peace as he explained.

"I am a railroad detective—sent from the Southern division to help run down a gang of sneak thieves operating here. I spotted the chap with the valise, but he dodged me. I was sitting there with you, hoping I might catch sight of him again. I thought I saw him, and hustled out without thinking about you. And I'm downright sorry."

The mystery clear enough for her strangely happy that he was not the thief, she said somewhat without reason, "But how did you know I wouldn't run away with it? And did you catch him?"

A slow smile gathered on his face. "Yes, I landed him, and sent him on, came back for the grip—but, listen, please. I am going to hire a taxi and take you to the finest hotel for old maids and young maids in the country:-and don't you suppose you could stay over a few days and let me show you how sorry I am for this blunder?"

She listened shyly in the way of woman and answered in the way of woman very simply but to him satisfactorily, "Perhaps." And he knew by the indefinite answer that he was definitely forgiven.

On Chautauqua's Joy Night Program

"THE COLLEGE GANG."

APPEARING on Chautauqua's closing night with Ethel Hinton, "the girl of many dialects," "The College Gang" will give a lively demonstration of present-day college melodies. In the instrumental quartet are Joe Bryant, violinist; Winston Reineking, banjoist; Ed Hussey, pianist, and Robert Nelson, trap drummer. These boys, during their college days at Northwestern university, appeared frequently in Chicago programs and in this way their unusual work came to the attention of the Redpath Bureau. Each man is an expert in his line and the ensemble numbers or "The Gang" set the feet "a-moving."

Of all our food, cheese is the most compact and concentrated. It contains no connective tissue, bone or other waste so that a pound of cheese is without waste. It is highly nutritive, containing twice as much food value per pound as meat, and is much more economical to buy.

Cheese has been called hard to digest, because being rich it sinks down with little mastication and being in hard lumps in the stomach does often cause distress. This same compactness which gives us such valuable food in small compass, makes it harder of digestion unless it is eaten with coarse food, such as dry crackers or vegetables which need good mastication.

Other meat substitutes which will lend variety to the diet are whole wheat, dried beans, peas and lentils, peanuts, walnuts, pecans, eggs, butter, cream, olive oil, milk macaroni, and rice. Dried fruits as well as fresh are indispensable in a well balanced diet. These foods in various forms and in combinations with others will give sufficient variety.

Trained Birds Presented by Their Teacher

PROF. PAMAHASIKA.

AMONG the highly trained birds introduced to Chautauqua boys and girls, as well as to the grown-ups on children's afternoon, are "Mike," who pushes a wheelbarrow back and forth across a table, and "McKinley," a handsome bird, who in true martial style parades back and forth carrying an American flag. "Melville" presents a pretty picture, sitting with outstretched wings on a shield of the national colors. "Jumbo," a bell-ringing bird, is one of the most intelligent of the whole troupe. He counts, adds, subtracts, multiplies, tells the number of days in the week and answers many questions promptly and correctly by means of a bell. A bird named "Bill" selects the American, French, British and Italian flags as the name of each nation is called.

After the performance is over the audience wonders at the feats performed by these carefully coached birds and marvels at the time, patience and perseverance that it must have cost their trainer to attain such results.

George Eliot.

Most of George Eliot's novels are studies in retribution, akin to Greek tragedy and in general to Greek modes of thought, whereby, as expressed poetically, when a wrong is done, the Eumenides, daughters of earth and darkness, awake and revenge it. It was likewise the Hebrew formula that they who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind. This law, observed alike by pagan and Jew, George Eliot modernized and elaborated in detail in the light of the science of her day. Her method was to lay before the reader the antecedents of a character like Doctor Lydgate, to confront him suddenly with the necessity of an immediate act having a distinctive moral quality, and then to trace in all its windings and turnings the influence of that act not only upon him who committed it, but upon others who are caught in the meshes. "We can conceive," she remarks, paraphrasing Aeschylus, "no retribution that does not spread beyond its mark in pulsations of unmerited pain." Nothing is ever left by George Eliot at loose ends; when she finishes, the fabric is whole and complete.—Wilbur Cross, in the Yale Review.

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, August 12, 1920 No. 17

An Enjoyable Event

The members of the Carlisle & Kerr Co., employees and families celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary with the company, and also his birthday, with a surprise party on Mr. Geo. C. Stewart, 99 S. Ogden avenue, manager of the Hilltop store.

The members met at the Hilltop store and went in a body to wish him many more years with the company and many more happy birthdays.

The evening was spent with delightful music and readings given by Doris Mary Stewart. Mr. Stanley Kerr, member of the firm, presented Mr. Stewart with a gift of one hundred new dollar bills, in appreciation of his twenty-five years of service with the company. In behalf of the employees Mr. C. E. Helmbrecht, of the Hilltop store, presented Mr. Stewart with a beautiful pair of driving gloves.

The guests for the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. Stanly Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Helmbrecht and children, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hayman and children, Mr. and Mrs. Nicklaus, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dellenbaugh, and son, George, Mr. and Mrs. Vanmeter, and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Davis, Misses Grace McMillen, Helen Black and Helen Smith, Messrs. Albert Kienle, George Schrum, and William Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stewart and daughter.

Early Monday morning Mr. Stewart with Mr. Mahaffy, and Mr. Mossgrove of the Ohio Cities Gas Company, left on an automobile trip through Wheeling, W. Va., and Pittsburgh, through the Cumberland Mountains, by the way of Gettysburg. They will return in about ten days.

The Hilltop Chautauqua Association met at the tent on Eldon avenue, on Wednesday evening, Aug. 4, and made preliminary arrangements for a Chautauqua on the Hilltop next year. The association started off with about 120 signers as a guarantee. Officers for the year were elected, as follows: W. E. Dolby, chairman; W. L. Roller, secretary; H. G. Butler, treasurer.

With the grand success of the first year's program, there is an enthusiasm from all who attended over the fine entertainment given, and a universal desire for another next year. The Redpath Co. made a hit with our people, and if they can produce each year as good a program as the one just given, they bid fair to become an annual source of entertainers for the Hilltop. The local association is also talking some of having a Lyceum course here the coming winter by the same company, which no doubt will be well received.

There was about $200 over on the guarantee fund this year, and this will be used as an expense fund for next year.

COMMUNITY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL EXHIBIT AND COMMENCEMENT

Parents and friends of the children who have been attending the Community Daily Vacation Bible School which has been running for six weeks are cordially invited to the commencement exercises to be held at the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church, Friday, August 13th, at 7:45 p. m. An exhibit of the handword done by all the children will be on display. The children will present a program of songs, Bible stories and other special features. The kindergarten will have a share in the program. The enrollment has been about equally divided between children from the Hillcrest Baptist Church, Glenwood M. E. and Hoge Memorial Presbyterian churches with about 25 children of other churches enrolled. Over one hundred children have been in attendance at the school.

All who wish to get an idea of what their children have been doing during these six weeks are urged to attend this service.

The program will be under the direction of Miss Pauline T. Bryant, the principal of the school, with assistance from all the teachers.

This school has been held jointly by the Hillcrest Baptist Church and the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church. Children have heard about 30 Bible stories, learned many hymns and songs by memory and done some fine memorizing of Bible passages, besides playground work, swimming, handword and many other special features designed to please as well as instruct.

The program will last about one hour. Come!

There will, however, be three special features: A recitation by Lillian Smoot, a violin solo by Robert Currier, and a vocal solo by Gladys Darnell. Two Bible stories—Noaman the Leper, and the Good Samaritan, will be dramatized. All parents of the children and friends of the school are cordially urged to be present.

Seillers Remnant Sale, Aug. 6th to 14th.

Stephen C. Long, a resident of the Hilltop for a period of over 20 years, passed away Tuesday morning, Aug. 10, after an illness of seven weeks. Mr. Long had been in failing health for the past five years, and until recently was engaged in his work, which was that of a stonemason.

He was widely known by Hilltop people, especially among the older residents, and the best tribute we can express to the memory of Mr. Long is the oft-repeated remark, that he was "everybody's friend." Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Harvey G., and Clarence S. Long, and one daughter, Mrs. Homer Roling; his mother, Mrs. G. M. Long, of 65 North Park avenue; one brother and two sisters.

1617 Weeks in One

"I have lived in good old Columbus town for 1617 weeks, but the last week was the most enjoyable of all. Why? Hilltop Redpath Chatauqua—the greatest form of refined entertainment ever furnished by one community.

The writer attended every evening's lectures and entertainments and all of Sunday's meetings, and at no time was I disappointed.

Starting with the Saturday afternoon concert and going on through to the last on Friday evening, it is hard to say which was best, the programme so well balanced. Having attended Chautauquas in other states, I knew the Hilltop was to have the biggest and best entertainment they have ever had, and counted the days until the opening of the first concert. I knew it meant hard work on the part of the men back of it. They did their part, made it a success and over again made the rest of Columbus and nearby sections take off their hats to that section way out west, that started something and finished it. Again you can be proud to answer "Where do you live?" On the Hilltop, the main part of Columbus.

You bet your life I'll be there next year. My name is on the paper as a guarantee. Is yours?

C. E. Helmbrecht,
With the Carlile & Kerr Co.

Seillers Odd Lot Sale, Aug. 6th to 14th.

While waiting in line at the entrance to the Chautauqua tent last Friday afternoon, one Hilltop lady who was chaperoning a party of youngsters was almost thrown into convulsions when one of the urchins piped forth with: "Well, when kin we see the elephants?"

WANTED REST OF HER NAME

Churchgoer Had Missed Sermon but He Was Keen for Information on the Subject.

A tired-looking individual entered a downtown church on a Sunday evening. Finding a pew, he made himself comfortable and awaited the sermon. The minister, after the usual formalities, announced that his topic would be "Saved by Grace."

The stranger, yielding to the soothing atmosphere of the house of worship, fell asleep almost immediately after the announcement of the sermon subject. Half an hour later he awoke, almost simultaneously with the close of the sermon, and, suddenly remembering the topic, whispered to a nearby fellow-worshiper: "Wasn't his Subject 'Saved by Grace?'"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Grace who?" was the next question.

Naturally there was no answer.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Heritage of Hate.

I know four men, all old bachelors, who live together. They are all well educated, have good professions and are what the world calls successful, but they all abhor womanhood. They were adopted from an orphan asylum when children by a rich old man who had been disappointed in married life and was an avowed hater of women.

He educated the boys and left them his money, but lived long enough to instill in their minds distrust and suspicion of all womankind, and as he was their best friend (in fact, all the friend or home that they ever had) they naturally loved him and believed absolutely in all his teachings.

I have often thought when I see these men, good citizens, what a pity that a man who had such influence, and capable of raising such boys, should have such a warped side to his nature.—Chicago Tribune.

The annual picnic of the Standard Bearers will be held at Glenwood Park Monday evening, Aug. 16. All honorary members are requested to be present. Everybody be sure and come.

Eight-day Remnant and Odd Lot Sale, Aug. 6th to 14th. Seillers.

A Hilltop Shooting

Policeman William Bauer is in Mt. Carmel Hospital with a bullet wound in the left hip, the result of an encounter with two men at Whitethrone and Day avenues, at 12:20 a. m. Monday. The wound is not considered serious. He was called to the home of A. T. Burgoon by a report that two men were trying to break into the house. Bauer met the two men near the house, and when he asked them what they were doing, both pulled guns and ordered him to put up his hands. As Bauer drew his gun one of the men fired two shots before the officer knocked the gun from his hands. The two then ran.

The next meeting of the C. I. C. Class of Glenwood Church will be held Friday at the home of Margaret Mitchell, 2095 Sullivant avenue, between Belvidere and Whitethorne avenues. All members please be present.

The First Kitchen Cabinet

McDOUGALL

The McDougall Auto Front Cabinet is not an ordinary kitchen cabinet. Its construction, workmanship and finish are superior to any other make of cabinet, and can only be compared with the better grade dining room and bed room furniture.

The famous auto front curtain is an exclusive feature of the McDougal Cabinet. It is fully patented, and is not found on any other cabinet. The McDougal Cabinet is not merely nailed or screwed together, but every joint is tongued and grooved—even small partitions in the drawers and other divisions of the Cabinet.

Your kitchen work will be a pleasure instead of a drudgery. Will add to the joy of preparing a meal, as well as the ease of serving it.

This is the anniversary of the death of Byron, observes the New York Evening Sun of April 19. If the reader were in London today and should visit the statue of the famous poet in that secluded and exclusive part of Hyde Park called Hamilton gardens, he would find the monument decorated with a single yellow wreath. And if he had brought with him a copy of the Times and would turn to the obituary column he would find there a notice of Byron's death and a proclamation of his fame.

These two tributes have been rendered annually to the memory of Byron for many years. They are paid for each year with the income of a sum bequeathed for that purpose by a woman admirer of the poet. The legend connected with the tributes runs that they are to be continued annually until the name of Byron is inscribed in the poets' corner of Westminster abbey. Byron died in Greece on April 19, 1824, in his thirty-seventh year.

The ring in the wedding cake means that the person who draws the piece containing it will be the first to be wed of those present. The thimble brings disappointment, an old maid's fate is wished onto the finger of the one who gets the thimble; the tiny wish bone, of silver or gold or whatever it may be, another popular ingredient in wedding cakes, allows the one who draws it to make a wish upon it which will come true.

A Bissextile Boomerang.

By DORA MOLLAN

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The setting for this little comedy of love must be accredited to no lesser artist than Dame Nature herself. She alone was responsible for the maple tree, the fringe of alders growing along the brookside, the orchestral accompaniment of water slipping over the stones.

To be sure, a man acting all unknowingly the role of stage carpenter had knocked together the rustic bench which stood under the tree; but the materials were of her design and coloring. It was she who supplied the blue of the June sky, the tender green of the foliage and the neutral tints of tree trunk and shaded waters.

Into this setting came tripping a dainty maiden, fair as is the wont of leading ladies. She seated herself on the bench, spread out her skirts of yellow organdie, and opening a sweetgrass basket, took therefrom a tiny silver shuttle and a ball of thread.

After a moment spent in appreciative enjoyment of her surroundings the shapely head with its crown of dusky braids bent over the little shuttle as it busily thrust its nose in and out of the thread, forming intricate loops and knots under the guidance of tapering fingers.

"Oh, Miss Nannie! Telephone!"

The busy fingers stopped short in their task and the sweetgrass basket found itself in sole possession of the bench as the girl hurried up a path in the direction of the voice.

Five minutes later she returned, but the work lay neglected and the black eyes were bent thoughtfully upon the brown water, ever slipping over the stones. Then, from the direction whence had come the voice, sounded a cheery whistle. Hastily the shuttle started again on its bobbing way.

It was a youth whose footsteps followed close upon the whistle—a slender youth with sandy hair, who blushed like a schoolboy as he acknowledged the girl's greeting.

"I say, Nan, it's a great day! You—you look great in that dress, too. And it's gr—bully to find you alone."

"For a recent graduate of a celebrated university, Ned, your vocabulary seems woefully lacking in adjectives this afternoon." There was a hint of amusement in the girl's voice, but her eyes, downcast upon her work, were seriously grave.

"You know I'm always tongue-tied when I try to talk seriously with you. Cousin Nell is coming on the 4:10 and I promised mother to meet her. That only gives me half an hour. And I've got something I want to—to ask you."

"I'm listening, Ned." During the somewhat prolonged pause that followed the girl did not lift her eyes from the shuttle. The young man gazed at the girl, at the brook, at the alders, up at the maple tree, then back to the girl. What his lips said plainly was not at all what his brain had commanded them to say.

"I'm going to miss you like everything, Nan, when I go away."

"It's nice to be missed, Ned," Nan answered demurely.

Ned Barton looked nervously at his watch. "Only twenty minutes more! Bother Cousin Nell! I say, Nan, St. Louis is so far away, very likely I won't get up to see you more than once all winter. Dad expects me to stick there and make good, you know."

Moments passed. The girl did not reply, but apparently listened with serenity to the joyous thrill of a song sparrow that filled in the pause.

"I don't suppose that will bother you, though!" It was the pouting bitterness of self-deprecating boyhood that spoke.

The shuttle came to an abrupt stop. Nan Stacey, her eyes on the brown waters slipping by, spoke in her usual soft tone, though in her own ears her voice rang louder than the clashing of cymbals!

"Perhaps you would be happier in St. Louis, Bob, if I were there with you—as your wife."

Barton gazed at the girl for a moment in incredulous bewilderment. Then he laid his hands gently on her shoulders, turning her to him so that he could read the wonderful truth that was in her eyes: "Do— can you mean that, Nan!" And all the joyous trill of the song sparrow, the laughing of the waters, and the gentle sighing of the maple leaves were in his voice.

Half an hour elapses between the first and second acts of this little comedy.

Nan Stacey sat on the same bench, but the shuttle was idle in her lap. Her soft black eyes were again bent on the brown waters still slipping by. Her heart echoed the song of the little brown bird overhead. A whistle sounded from the direction of the path, followed by a laughing voice.

"Hello, Nan! Just saw Ned disappearing down the highway in a cloud of dust. Looked as if he were pursued by the wrath of God—or a motor cop. Don't tell me you let him put it over, after my tipping you off." Hal Carter flung himself down on the bench, rather too close to the girl.

Nan's shuttle was flying again, very diligently. "No," she answered, "Ned didn't 'put it over,' Hal. Ned hasn't your self-assurance, you know."

If there was any subtle intent in the remark it was lost upon the man. There was a hint of the bully in Hal Carter. His shoulders were too massive, his forehead just a trifle too broad for its height. "Oh, I counted on that," he laughed, "when I bet him the fifty he hadn't the nerve to propose to you this afternoon. But those shy men are stubborn, sometimes. You're a clever girl to have held him off, all the same, Nan."

"Do you think so?" murmured Nan.

"Sure do!" Hal Carter fervently indorsed his own words. "Some game was put up between us this afternoon, Nannie! I win the fifty—you get that antique silver tea pot you've wanted so much. Shall I have it marked with a 'C' or do you prefer your maiden initial?" The question was asked insinuatingly, and Carter's arm slid proprietarily around the girl's shoulder.

With an elusive change of position that left the arm resting upon space Nan set upright and looked straight at the very confident young man. "Thank you, Hal," she said, "I'll have it marked with a 'B,' please."

"'B,' Nan! Where's the joke?" Hal's heavy brow puckered in perplexity.

"On you, Hal. You forgot about it's being leap year. 'B' stands for Barton—and for boomerang."

The song sparrow up in the maple gurgled, the maple leaves rustled; for it was the kind of joke to laugh at.

THREE MEALS A DAY.

To begin the day, a little seasonable fruit is always appropriate, and at this season strawberries are beginning to be abundant; nothing could be more appetizing than a dish of the fresh red berries served around a mound of powdered sugar. The berries are not hulled and are eaten from the fingers, dipping the berry into the sugar.

A dish of any preferred cereal follows the fruit. Whole wheat soaked overnight and cooked until tender and gelatinous makes an ideal breakfast food, and one which is both wholesome and inexpensive. Take the wheat from the granary or buy it at the mill; wash carefully after picking it over to remove any chaff and seeds, then soak and cook until tender. Serve with top milk. Enough may be prepared for several days to save time. This food is especially good for children.

If the main meal is served at night, the noon meal should be simple but nourishing. The following are only suggestions: Hot cheese sandwiches, a simple salad of lettuce or a dish of radishes and tender green onions, baking powder biscuit, gelatin with whipped cream, cookies, and tea. Another good luncheon menu is potato salad, either hot or cold, smoked herring, brown betty, and cocoa.

Another luncheon menu: Escalloped fish, cabbage salad, steamed brown bread, canned peaches or fresh fruit, macaroons and tea.

For dinner one may have broiled steak, a roast of some kind, a roasted or friensseed fowl, a baked stuffed fish, broiled chops, veal cutlets or baked ham—a few of the good things from which to choose.

With the stuffed fish serve parsley potatoes, cauliflower with Hollandaise sauce, sliced cucumbers, a caramel custard and coffee with small cakes. With the broiled steak, baked potatoes, creamed onions, buttered carrots and lettuce salad; with an ice cream served with a sauce, either maple, caramel, or chocolate, and coffee.

"I want a CALORIC before I clean house again"

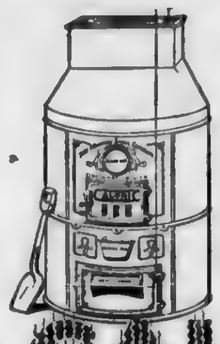
Hundreds of thousands of women, every spring and fall, must face the drudgery of house-cleaning.



They know that heating stoves and pipe furnaces fill their homes with dirt, and smoke up the curtains and wall paper, and they want to get rid of these out-of-date methods.

The patented CaloriC Pipeless Furnace keeps the fuel, kindling and ashes in the basement—and thereby largely eliminates house-cleaning.

We sell the CaloriC on the basis of "Satisfaction or money back." A splendid time to get a CaloriC is just before you clean house. The next best time is just after you clean house so that your house may stay clean.

See us at once and learn why over 76,000 families in every state in the Union prefer the CaloriC to any other method of heating.

The CaloriC costs less than stoves necessary to heat same space. Saves ⅓ to ½ your fuel. Made and guaranteed by The Monitor Stove Co., Cincinnati, O.

When Some One Cares

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Jack Reynolds, in a fur coat and heavy head-dress, sweltered under a June sun, as he stood on a Texas flying field and conversed with three men clad in army olive drab.

Nearby was an airplane, loaded with gas and oil, the motor tuned to perfection. Several mechanics were going over the machine to see that every nut and bolt was tight, every connection secure.

About the field a crowd had assembled. Predominating in the assembly were many men, although a number of civilians and several women, old and young, were on hand.

The three men grouped about Jack were arguing with him.

"I tell you it can't be done," one of them, a venerable officer, with white mustache, protested. "If you should get up 40,000 feet you'd die from cold and lack of oxygen; besides, the air would be too rare to hold the ship up."

"Nevertheless," said Jack, firmly, "I'm going up 40,000 feet if there's any possible way of getting there. Major Schroeder made it 36,000 feet at Dayton, you know."

"You'll never live to tell of it," said another of the group. "Schroeder nearly paid with his life, you'll remember. He was lucky, that's all. Better let him keep the altitude record."

"I'm going to try for it, anyhow," declared Jack, expelling a cloud of tobacco smoke.

"If you don't think anything of your own life," said the third member of the group, "have a thought for those you leave behind and who will suffer because of your foolhardiness. Think of your father, your mother, your brothers, your sisters—your sweetheart."

Gradually Circling Higher and Higher.

Jack smiled, somewhat grimly.

"I have none of those," and he turned to the waiting plane. "If I had just one of them I'd stay down here on the ground."

He mounted to the seat and tried the controls. His lifebelt was buckled round him, the engine started by an assistant, and the big bird took a quick run and soared aloft, gradually circling higher and higher until it became a speck.

The group of three kept vigil in a building at an edge of the flying field. The officer with the white mustache sat at a wireless telephone.

"I've got him," he announced, after listening for some time. "He says he's up 25,000 feet and still going."

In the attic of a modest dwelling in a middle western city a girl sat in an old rocker and untied a blue ribbon from a bulky pack of letters.

The girl was pretty, although her form was rather frail. She had an abundance of burnished-gold hair. There was much gravemess in her looks and demeanor, and something expressive of sadness about the downward curves at the lip corners.

She sighed as she separated the letters one from the other, and selecting one haphazardly drew it from its envelope.

"Good old Jack," she said, somewhat wistfully, as she read, and after she had finished she sat holding it idly in her hand while she looked through the attic window at—nothing.

She resumed her perusal of the messages from the past, but as she separated the letters her eyes suddenly took on an expression of astonishment, and she held up a bulky envelope, addressed to her, but unopened.

"Here's one I never read!" she exclaimed. "How could it have happened? Possibly when I was down at the lake last summer little sister got this from the post office."

She looked at the postmark and made out that the letter had been mailed in Texas just a year ago, lacking a few days.

"It must have been his last," she decided, and suddenly she tore open the envelope. As she read her face became pale.

"This—this is a tragedy," she breathed, but this time she did not hold the letter idly and look out the attic window at—nothing.

She left the rest of the letters on the floor and rushed down to the library, where she busied herself with paper and pen, and wrote a telegram. Calling the telegraph office on the telephone, she read the message. Then she sat and again perused the closing lines of the letter she had unearthed in the attic. These lines were:

"I know it may be a forlorn hope—this hope that you will consent to marry me; but I just can't keep still any longer. So consider this a proposal, and I will look for your answer by return mail. If I do not receive a letter I will know that your answer is 'no,' and then—well, then, I shall enter the aviation service, as I have been considering doing for some time.

"With love, JACK."

The earth was so far below it looked like a hazy dream world. Many clouds intruded between the distant globe and the aviator; it was like tossing about in a boat on a white-capped sea, looking down through the depths to an ancient city engulfed by a flood.

Frost covered the flyer's clothing; it hung to his eyebrows and his nose, and a film of it held his mouth shut. What little of his face showed through the headdress was almost devoid of blood. He was breathing heavily but he was smiling, somewhat grimly, as he looked at his altimeter and saw that he was 30,000 feet above the earth.

Mechanically he pulled back the stick and began climbing further. As he went up the difficulty of breathing became more pronounced, and frost gathered; but he did not hesitate. Into a wireless telephone strapped about his shoulders he called:

"Hello, Major; 31,000 feet now."

He was struggling to breathe, but he managed to speak the few words rather calmly, although the effort was prodigious.

"I'm a fool to go up any farther," he thought, "but what's the use of returning to the sorrowful old world? There's not much sunshine any more—since Elsie went back on me."

He pulled back the stick and continued the climb, and his suffering increased with every foot he mounted. He began to grow weak and his head to roar; but he did not falter.

"Hello, major; 33,000 feet," he said faintly into the phone. The major's voice came back:

"Hello, Jack. Listen, here's a telegram I received for you. It just arrived. Do you want it now?"

Jack was surprised. Who would be sending him a telegram? He wondered if it was a ruse to make him go down.

"Let's have the message," Jack called into the phone.

"Here it is," said the major across the expanse of space.

"Somebody mislaid your last letter to me while I was away, and I just found it today. If you still mean what it says, my answer is, Yes, yes yes."

Jack stopped gasping. He hesitated a moment, and looked at the altimeter with a peculiar smile.

Slowly he moved the stick forward and gradually the plane began to descend.

As far as Jack Reynolds is concerned, Major Schroeder can keep the altitude record.

HUN RAIDERS NEATLY TRICKED

Quick Wit of Chinese Cook Responsible for the Destruction of the Cruiser Emden.

Some time ago a mercantile marine officer, who during the war was on naval service, related to me the following interesting episode in regard to the capture of the Emden:

The famous German raider landed a company of men on the Cocos island in the early hours of the morning when most of the men in the wireless station were asleep. The detachment of Germans were under orders to put the wireless apparatus out of action. Near the beach they came across a Chinese—one of the cooks at the station mess. Him they seized hold of and commanded to lead them to the telegraph office. Unfortunately for the emissaries of the fatherland the cook kept his wits about him, and, unknown to his captors, managed to signal to one of his fellow countrymen, who was also a station servant and who happened to be near, that he was to convey the news of the landing with all speed to his masters.

This man slipped away post haste to the operator's quarters, and in the meantime the cook led his guards by a round-about way through the bush to their destination.

Apprised by the Chinese who had come direct as to what was happening, the operators were able to send out a wireless that the Emden was in the offing, so that by the time the Germans had arrived on the scene the Sydney had picked up the message and was making at full speed toward the enemy.

The Germans, not knowing that their presence had already been betrayed arrived at the instrument-room and soon demolished its contents, no doubt feeling they had done a good morning's work. Alas! their calculations were all upset through the presence of mind of a humble Chinese cook. The latter, I believe, was not forgotten by the British authorities, for I have reason to think he now lives a gentleman of ease and leisure in his native town.—Wuchang.

JUVENILE COURT

From The Christian Worker

The other day we visited the Juvenile Court, and witnessed a scene that made us hate the devil more than ever. A boy about 17 years of age stood before the Judge—charged with stealing; an older man, wife and four little children were there also; the man charged with contributing to the boy's delinquency. The testimony developed these facts: the man had engaged the boy to steal certain material from his employer and deliver the same to him, that he might use it on a job of work he was engaged in doing.

The facts in the case were gone over in a quiet and thorough manner, and we think with all the fairness and charity the Judge could show, the boy was given the kindest and plainest fatherly talk, showing him just how near he had been to the door of the penitentiary; then he was told how to conduct himself in order to recover from this misstep, by trying to be an honest, manly boy.

A sentence of six months in the workhouse was given him, suspended, providing his behavior was acceptable to the court, to which he must report every week. The mother stood by the side of her son all through this ordeal, weeping, at times seeming almost to faint.

The older man was given a very severe reproof, yet, given in the same kind manner with a very perceptible feeling of sympathy in his voice, the Judge said, "I do not like to take the bread winner away from a family, especially where there are so many small children, but the facts in this case are such I cannot overlook them;" then he gave the man a sentence of $25.00 fine and six months in the workhouse.

As the deputy escorted the man from the court room, the wife who had been sitting near with a babe in her arms and the three little ones around her, weeping as if she were by the side of her husband's casket, had to have the assistance of the ladies present. Pressing the babe to her bosom while the other three were clinging to her—one of the little fellows said, "Mamma, where is Daddy going." She could not move from the chair, so great was the burden on her poor crushed life.

Oh God help us to arouse to the importance of doing our part in defeating the arch enemy of this old world, and save the poor women and little children from such a hell on earth.

A "Marrying Parson"

Rev. C. E. Bowman, pastor of Glenwood M. E. Church, might be classed as a "marrying parson" during the past week. On last Saturday he performed three marriage ceremonies, as follows:

At 9 a. m. he united in marriage Mr. Raymond Claar and Miss Lucile Wickham, both Hilltop people. The ceremony took place at the bride's home, 69 Clarendon avenue, at which place the young couple will reside at present.

At 3 p. m. the same day Rev. Bowman united in marriage Mr. Jesse Pittsford and Miss Elizabeth Hill, both employes at the State Hospital, Mr. Pittsford being a department superintendent.

Then, at 5 o'clock Saturday, two former acquaintances from Congo, Ohio, Mr. John McCoy and Jennie Walters, were married at the parsonage. They will make their home on the Hilltop.

On Monday a quiet wedding was solomnized at the home of Mrs. Fettera, 445 Highland avenue, when Mr. Harry R. Thompson was married to Miss Rose Bennett. Rev. C. F. Bowman officiating. They will make their home at 284 South Eureka.

A Pretty Wedding

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Maud De Long of 29 Hawks Ave., and Mr. Terry B. Snyder of 142 Martin Ave., Monday, Aug. 16, 9 p. m., at the residence of Mr. Snyder's uncle, Attorney D. B. Uley, 56 South Warren avenue.

Miss De Long wore a tailored suit of blue tricotine, and wore a coursage bouquet of pink roses and swantonia. They were attended by Mr. Demart Snyder, brother of the groom, and Miss Sell Marten.

Miss Marten wore blue taffeta and her coursage was ophelia vaber and swantonia.

Mrs. J. Y. Bennett (nee Esther Uley), cousin of the groom, played the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Large ferns formed the improvised alter, with pink candles and old-fashioned garden flowers were in evidence, through the entire house.

Rev. P. E. Smoke of St. Paul's Evangelical Church, performed the ceremony, in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

Miss De Long is the second daughter of Mr. A. E. De Long of 29 Hawks avenue. Mr. Snyder is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Snyder of 142 Martin avenue, and a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Uley. Mr. Snyder served overseas with the U. S. Marines eleven months. They will reside temporarily at the home of the groom, 142 Martin Ave.

Deaths

Luther, 12-year-old son of Monte V. Ball, 488 South Warren avenue, passed away at Grant Hospital at an early hour on Tuesday of appendicitis. He was taken to the hospital two weeks ago where an effort was made to stay the progress of the malady, but without success.

He leaves to mourn their loss, a father, mother and one brother.

Funeral services, conducted by Rev. E. B. White of the U. B. Church, at the home on Wednesday evening at 7:30. Immediately after the obsequies the cortege will leave for the old home in Kentucky, where the remains will be laid to rest in the family lot.

On Sunday evening, August 15, Mr. Charles Huber, a retired plumber of East Main street, died very suddenly at his home. He was the son-in-law of Mrs. John Ritzman, 1963 West Broad street, and was well known in this city.

Mrs. Ida Fletcher, 47, widow, Wilkesville, O., died of complications Saturday at Protestant Hospital. She leaves one son and five daughters. The body was taken to the home of her late husband's brother, O. P. Fletcher, 29 S. Park Ave., where it remained until Tuesday, when it was sent to Wilkesville for funeral and burial.

The Second Division of Glenwood Ladies' Aid Society will have a paper sale, Thursday, Aug. 26. Anyone having papers may call Mrs. Martindale, Hilltop 2088, or Mrs. Garrison, Hilltop 3838. Have papers on front porch Thursday morning.

HAD TRUE PATRIOTIC SPIRIT

Militia Officers Who in 1805 Formed the "Soul of Soldiery" Deserve to Be Remembered.

The slogan, "prepare for war in time of peace," so familiar today, was potent enough in 1805 to be responsible for the organization of noncommissioned militia officers in Boston in a body known as the "Soul of Soldiery," which no doubt enhanced the efficiency of the National Militia forces not only in the War of 1812 but the Mexican war as well.

The name of the organization had been suggested by a maxim of Baron Steuben, the great drillmaster of the Continental army. "The noncommissioned officers are the soul of soldiery." The same sentiment, worded somewhat differently, was uttered by Frederick the Great, Napoleon, the duke of Wellington, and no doubt by other great captains.

Evidence that such an organization ever existed was disclosed recently by the finding in a collection of old books of a little manual containing its by-laws and a list of its members. The date of the publication is 1826, though there is known to have been a reprint in 1846, the year before the war with Mexico.

The "Soul of Soldiery," which in 1826 contained about 70 active and 60 honorary members, for nearly 50 years had an annual parade and banquet in October, similar to that of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company in June.

The commander and his subordinate officers were elected at the annual meeting in January and could serve only one year. Any noncom of good character was eligible to membership, the fee was $6 a year and the clerk of the organization was paid $10 a year. The penalty for absence from the annual meeting was a fine of 25 cents, while failure to attend on drill night cost 37½ cents.

The organization appears to have had no special uniform, as members were permitted to wear on parade the uniform of whatever militia organization they belonged to. Uniforms of the old-time independent militia companies having been of diversified design and combination of color, the "Soul of Soldiery" on parade must have had much of the kaleidoscopic appearance which distinguished the Ancients till they adopted their organization uniform a generation ago.

Members of the "Soul of Soldiery" who, by age or any other reason, became incapacitated for military service could go onto the honorary list, which 80 years or more ago included the names of Edward Everett, statesman and orator, and Gen. John S. Tyler, who served four terms as commander of the Ancients between 1832 and 1860.

Though there was always a sprinkling of professional men, the membership was mainly composed of store keepers and employers and journeymen in various mechanical trades.—Boston Globe.

Good Advice.

"My hair is coming out frightfully. I am losing it in handfuls."

"Then why don't you stop fighting with your wife?"

BEST STOP THROWING STONES

Man Ever Ready to Criticize Must Remember He Is a Target for Criticism.

Have you ever seen a man whose own penmanship is an abomination carefully and impatiently dot the "i" in the flowing and easily legible handwriting of another man?

Have you ever heard a woman whose habit it is to leave her dinner dishes unwashed until the next morning wax sarcastic in her references to another woman who dusts her parlor only once a week?

Have you ever heard a man whose own methods are the opposite of systematic scathingly criticize another man because his system fell down on a minor point?

Have you ever—but of course you have; everyone knows the man who, though he lives in a glass house, persists in throwing stones. But what kind of a house do you live in yourself? Glass in all probability. And don't you occasionally throw a stone or two? Probably. Most of us do.

There are just two possible solutions to the difficulty. Either build a house of stone or stop throwing stones; either make yourself safe against criticism or stop criticizing others. Being human, you probably won't succeed in doing either completely. But it is worth trying.

A Pound of Cheese

By KATE EDMONDS

(©, 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

Beth Browning walked around the village square three times before she gained courage to enter David Prescott's store. It was the only store in the village where one could buy good cheese, and Beth had promised her mother to buy it there.

"Never mind, dearie, if you have quarreled with David," she admonished her pretty daughter. "He has the best grocery in Brookville—and you can't stay away forever. One of you must unbend a little."

"But, mother—" objected Beth, and then smiled at her mother's twinkling eyes. "Oh, well!" she sighed. "I hope he won't be there—I hope Captain Benny's keeping store."

The gate latched behind her and Mrs. Browning sighed a little, too, as she went into the house. "I am afraid Beth has my obstinacy," she murmured. "Mine nearly wrecked my happiness and Daniel's—and I'm bound Beth shall have another chance—if cheese will do it, I'll eat pounds of it from David's store, just to help things along."

So that was why Beth walked around the square three times—past the drug store, the stationer's, the post office, the 'Brookville' grocery (with eyes straight ahead!), the meat market, the blacksmith shop, the lumber yard, the cobbler's, the Gloria ice cream parlors, the Star Dry Goods company, then the drug store, the stationer's, the post office, the grocery, and so on; three times she hurried around with pink cheeks and rebellious eyes, and at last in a little flurry of desperation she mounted the steps and entered.

She was glad to find only one customer there—David was soberly measuring a pound of tea for old Mrs. Sackett.

"Land sakes, David," the old lady shrieked, "I didn't ask for five pounds!

"Land Sakes, Davy!"

Take some out—you're cheating yourself!"

"It's all right, Mrs. Sackett," muttered David as he tied up the parcel. That's right, 70 cents, thank you, ma'am."

"I hope you ain't getting nervous, Davy," Mrs. Sackett said kindly. "You're hand shook like a leaf—"

"I'm all right, thank you," he said hurriedly. "You next, Beth," with great unconcern.

"A pound of cheese," said Beth, and before David could move to the back of the store the door opened and admitted several customers. "Never mind, I'll go around there and try it, first." She slipped around the end of the counter in her old familiar way and disappeared behind a tall glass case containing bread and cake. David looked after her wistfully, but she did not see the glance and he went soberly back to his customers.

Beth heard the door open and close several times and then a period of silence. She stood before the great round cheese which she had uncovered and daintily nibbled a small slice. It was good cheese, and she cut another bit, trying to gain courage to go out there and say carelessly: "That's all right, David, I'll take a pound of it, please." But she dared not trust her voice—her heart was thumping in the most unaccountable way, and her faithless knees refused to support her valiantly.

"I'm going now!" she told herself defiantly, but before she had more than stirred, the door opened once more and a sharp, pert voice greeted David with friendly familiarity.

"Hello, Davy Prescott!"

"Hello, Gert," he answered pleasantly.

"I want some sugar," she went on. "Sorry, but your folks have had a lot of it lately, Gert—I've got to consider all of my customers and treat them fairly."

"Bother!" she laughed merrily. "I ask it as a personal favor, Davy."

"You know I would like to, but—" There was a determined note in his voice that Beth liked.

"Only you won't do it," finished Gertrude. "Father said you were selling Daniel Browning ten pounds today."

"Your father didn't know," said David slowly, "that half of that was for Mrs. Jones—Mr. Browning was going to leave it at her house—"

"Well, if you won't you won't!" returned the girl good humoredly. "And, David! The next time you come to see me don't bring a pound of candy; bring sugar instead!"

David laughed with her. Gertrude made some other purchase and loitered toward the door.

"Have you seen Beth lately?" she asked.

"Not so long ago," he answered without hesitation.

"Indeed! I saw her ten minutes ago—riding with Sam Trimmer."

"Humph," ejaculated the storekeeper.

"Sam's got a new car—cunning little Boiler—when are you going to get one, Davy?"

"When I get married," he answered jocularly. "Going to take a honeymoon trip across country."

"That will be sweet—" the door opened and the girl's impudent voice trailed back into the store. "Be sure and get a Boiler, David!" Then the door finally closed.

For a little while silence prevailed in the store. Beth stood uncertainly by the great cheese. David hesitated behind the counter. Then, as often happens, they both started forward at once and almost collided, Beth's elbow striking the great glass cover of the cheese and sending it crashing to the floor.

"I am so sorry, Dave," she cried penitently.

"It's nothing," he assured her. "How much cheese do you want, Beth?"

"A pound, please," she quavered.

David's hand seemed very uncertain that day. Even Beth noticed that the cheese knife wavered a little, cutting a jagged slice that weighed more than a pound.

"That be all right?" he asked, his gray eyes on her charming face.

She nodded and he saw that tears were very near.

"What is the matter?" he asked.

"Oh—it's what—Gertrude—said about Sam Trimmer! It was such a fib—and the other things she said about my riding with him were just as untrue."

David nodded. "I hope you'll forgive me, Beth!"

"I do—Davy."

"How about the—wedding trip, dear—in the Boiler car?" he whispered.

She laughed through her tears. "It will be wonderful—with you—and you will come to supper now? Mother will be so glad."

"I'll carry the cheese home for you, Beth." And putting on his hat and coat he locked up the store for the night. Folks said he was crazy to close the store at 4:30, and for once in his life David had lost his reason as well as his heart.

The Empty Stage.

The desire to go on living is the passion and sin of the old man and the scorn of the young. The young do not see death and the old see nothing else, or rather for the young it is a figure of the imagination and to the old a reality that conquers or would conquer the imagination. Indeed, when we are young, for us, whether men or women, there is fascination in the scythe Time holds in his hand. We gather round it and examine it and admire its tragic sharpness and its terrible swiftness; but old people, whimpering and trembling, stand round the hour-glass and are careful lest anything should agitate the glass and the hands that hold it. In youth we do not see death, the stage is too crowded. In old age all the actors have left—and they were only actors—and death remains sitting patient on his stool.—(Further Letters of John Butler Yeats.)

New fall dresses, suits, coats—Seillers

We frequently read of the capable and systematic housewife who, having an unexpected group of friends drop in, goes to her ice chest or pantry and greets a cold fowl, a bunch of celery, a jar of mayonnaise, which she quickly prepares into a most delectable salad. With rolls, cake, coffee and preserves she sets before her guests a most dainty luncheon.

This reads well, but the simple fact is this preaching isn't sanctioned by practice, for most women in such an emergency do not meet a cold cooked fowl face to face, but a bare cupboard and the necessity of beginning with the flour barrel, rather than a well-stocked larder, to prepare a meal.

Anybody, efficient or otherwise, with a well-stocked pantry might prepare an acceptable meal, but the woman who finds a dish of cold potatoes, flanked by a tough and world-weary steak, and still looks out on life cheerfully, is both an optimist and a genius.

To fortify this optimism an emergency shelf is indispensable. Even where the corner grocery is near or the telephone at hand one cannot always provide for an emergency. Each housekeeper will stock her shelf with the foods, accessories and relishes especially adapted to her needs.

A few cans of fish such as salmon, tuna, sardines and lobster, which may be served hot, cold or in salads or in combination with vegetables as a main dish, cans of corn, beans, peas, cans of soup, olives, pickles, a jar of salad dressing, a bottle of nutmegs, with jellies, jams and a package or two of crackers and a jar of cheese. When any food is used it is replaced at the earliest opportunity, so that the supply will always be full for the chance guest.

Two or three kinds of cookies stored in air-tight jars will keep for a long time. A few cookies with a dish of fruit, a cup of tea or coffee is a dessert which is sufficiently satisfying for the most exacting.

The fortunate ones who live in the country and have plenty of milk, cream butter and eggs, find it easy to prepare delicious dishes in short order.

Elizabeth Warner was the station agent at Glen Cliff. She was very young and very pretty to have attained to this position; young to have gained the confidence of the officials of the railroad, pretty to have escaped the tangles of matrimony.

"I am E. Warner—the agent," she had to insist many a time when some person or other came to the window with freight receipts bearing her signature.

"Oh," the man would remark, occasionally. "Your father, perhaps, was Edward Warner, agent here for years. I knew him well."

And Elizabeth, in her very businesslike manner, would admit then that her father had been the agent before her and that she had been his assistant ever since she had been out of school.

A passing glance at the old Long Island station would bespeak the presence of a feminine hand. There were flowers in the garden in spring and summer; flowers in the windows in winter. There was a bird singing in the sunshine above the agent's desk; there was clean drinking glass; there was general order about the old-fashioned station building.

There was one thing that Elizabeth did every day that was not strictly business—she watched carefully over a little automobile that stood day after day opposite the station as carelessly and as carefree as if its owner had stepped inside for a moment only.

But the owner of this little machine was in the habit of driving down to the 8:20 train each morning, jumping out of the car and onto the train, leaving the machine where it stopped, nosed up to a high wooden fence. At night, with all the confidence in the world that his little car would be waiting for him, the young man would jump off the 6 o'clock train, crank his little car and chug-chug up the hill to his bachelor home. Little did he know of the devotion of the pretty station agent to the welfare of that car all during his absence.

"Aren't you afraid some one will beat it with your Liz, Linny?" his friends were wont to ask him.

"If I were" Linnickson would reply, "I wouldn't do it. That car's almost human; don't you know it?"

"About as human as its owner, I'd say," one of the boys added, with a touch of sarcasm.

Following this conversation, two of Billy Linnickson's friends decided to play a trick on him and take some of the confidence out of him. By a rather clever ruse, and taking the little station agent into their confidence, they took the small car away one Monday morning just after train time.

At 6 o'clock, when Linny arrived, his car was nowhere to be seen.

"Miss Warner," he asked, addressing the agent, "have you, by chance, seen my car today?"

Elizabeth, whose skin was a wonderful creamy white—the sort that accompanies dark red hair, blushed and looked confused, much to her own chagrin. "No—. That is, I saw you leave it this morning, Mr. Linnickson."

Linny observed the blush, also the confusion. Why had he never before observed the beauty of this young woman?

"Yes—I left it here as usual," he said. "Some one has played a game on me, I'm thinking." He looked at her questioningly.

"Is it possible?" stammered Elizabeth. "Perhaps—perhaps some one has—stolen it," she added lamely.

Linny laughed. "Never! No one would steal my little red-wheeled Lizzie, Miss Warner. It has a charmed life. I'm just superstitious enough to think that car is the luckiest of all my possessions."

For some reason or other, Elizabeth's blush grew deeper.

Linny went to the phone in the station, dropped in a nickel and telephoned to his house to see if, by chance, some jokester had put the car in its own garage.

"Well," he remarked after having hung up the receiver, "I suppose I shall have to start out on the hunt, Thanks, Miss Warner."

"Do let me know if you find it," Elizabeth said earnestly.

"Shall I?" Linny asked, a bright thought having quickly come into his mind. "Be—before tomorrow morning?"

Elizabeth hung her head. "Well—if you like. I shall be worried, you know. I do not go home until 8 o'clock."

At a quarter before 8 o'clock that same evening Linnickson appeared in front of the Glen Cliff station in his little red-wheeled car. Leaving the engine running, he entered the waiting room. "I have it," he said, all smiles.

"No!" laughed Elizabeth.

"You're a little villain and an accessory before the fact, Miss Elizabeth," he said sternly. "And, for sentence, let me inflict upon you the necessity for letting me take you home in the car in question. I know it isn't the car a girl like you would choose, but—well, come along. Will you?"

Elizabeth demurred. She tried to be very businesslike in her dealings with all the commuters, but this one man to whom she had sold a ticket every month for more than two years had become, to her, the object of her dreams. She had watched him in silence; she had looked after his little car day after day, and now—

"Don't you want to come?" he was asking.

"Yes—I do," she answered in a soft voice, a voice he had never observed the sweetness of before. Why had he been so blind to the charms of this lovely young woman?

When he left her at her own gate he saw her mother, whom he knew as a resident of the village, looking at him through an upper window.

"Will you ask your mother if I may take you out often, Elizabeth?"

"Will you ask me first, please?" Elizabeth asked, saucily. Her embarrassment had left her.

Linny looked at her with things in his eyes that he dared not put into words. "Will you go with me—often, Elizabeth?" he asked.

"Yes—if you think you can be responsible for 'Lizzie' and Elizabeth at the same time," she retorted as she ran into the house.

And in three months Linnickson found himself being entirely responsible for the two.

Why Four Wives?

In the scripture four wives were allowed, and this practice was copied by the Moslems.

To the casual reader it may seem curious that the number should have been placed at four, but we find the following explanation by a Moslem student:

"Four wives are allowed by Moslem law and for this reason: If you marry one wife, she holds herself your equal, answers you and 'gives herself airs'; two are always quarreling and making a hell of the house; three are 'no company' as two of them always combine against the nicest to make her hours bitter. Four are company; they can quarrel and 'make it up' amongst themselves, and the husband enjoys comparative peace."

Babies and Music

At birth there is no sense of melody, no apparent consciousness of rhythm. The infant will, however, jump nervously and sometimes cry at loud sudden noises and will soon begin to smile or coo at soft, sweet sounds. It is very important, therefore, to shield babies from loud, sudden, discordant noises, and to surround them with melodious sounds that naturally please them. Indeed a nervous, fretful baby can often be soothed by soft music.

Music is as natural to the human being as speech. Do not let your child's musical instinct starve in its infancy. Root his babyhood in music, that his manhood may enjoy to the utmost this God-given heritage.—Exchange.

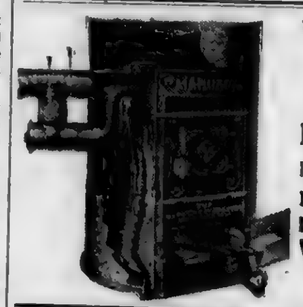
Buy Diamonds from an Expert

As diamonds are the most valuable of all articles to buy, so they are the most difficult. No one but an expert can accurately gauge the value of two stones which to the layman look exactly alike. There may be a difference of hundreds of dollars in their value.

In buying diamonds at this store, you have the satisfaction of knowing that your money is wisely invested. Our knowledge of diamonds, our experience in buying and selling them, makes us thoroughly well qualified to judge them correctly. And the standing of the store is in itself a guarantee that your purchase has been well made.



As with diamonds, so it is with all other jewelry bought here. Its value is unquestioned. You know, and the recipient knows, that it is exactly what it is represented to be.

Owed Their Success to Grit.

Many a man has been compelled to substitute grit for physical prowess. History shines with the luster of achievements wrested from adversity. President Chadbourne had suffered great illness. They said he had but one lung and even went so far as to arrange the funeral. But he lived and worked for over thirty years more. Grit kept him up. A few years ago a lad lost his eyes while a student at Columbia. But he kept on and graduated as leader of the class. It was up hill but grit did it. Francis Parkman lost health and his eyes went back on him. Still he pressed on, and after some fifteen years produced the best history of American frontier days that has ever come on the market. Nothing but grit could have made the success possible.

Tobacco Consumption.

The per capita consumption of tobacco in the United States, counting each man, woman and child, is seven pounds a year.

On a Summer Day

(©, 1910, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Kate was in the orchard, filling a small basket with yellow harvest apples when MacMalone came upon her.

"Hello!" he called cheerily, waving his cap. "I've hunted all over the farm for you. Thought you were down at the spring house, so I went there first. What are we going to do with these apples. Make cider?"

Kate nodded. They picked up the basket, carrying it between them. "I had a letter from my brother this morning," she told him. "He is coming home for the week-end and he is bringing Reece Logan with him. Reece is an architect, a gifted, ambitious boy who is bound to make a success. I'll be so glad to see him."

"How long have you known him?" Mac asked suddenly.

"Forever," said Kate simply. "We lived on the same street, in the same block, from the time I was a baby until dad bought this farm and we moved out here last year. Reece is really splendid. You'll like him."

"Maybe!" said Mac doubtfully. He glanced down at her left hand, where it rested on the handle of the basket. The small diamond on the third finger twinkled up at him disturbingly. He had thought about that ring many, many times.

She saw him looking at it, and setting the basket down lifted her hand. "Reece gave me that diamond. Isn't it a white little stone?" There was no coquetry in her manner. She was as candid as a child. "He's going to put several others with it and have it mounted in a cluster next fall, for my birthday. Isn't he generous to do that—for me?"

Mac tried to smile, made a miserable failure of it and stooped over to pick up the basket again. "Nothing in this world is too good for you, Kate."

When they had reached the cider press on the porch of the old spring house black Pete, who had gone down there for water, looked at the little basket of apples and burst out laughing. "Lawd hev mercy on us, chile," he cried, "them many apples wouldn't wet yo' whistle. Wait till Pete goes to de orchard! Ain't no use messin' up de press to make a dipperful."

Mac and Kate sat down on the porch of the spring house to wait for Pete to return. Kate was lost in the reverie of a day dream. With her graceful head tilted back against an old weatherbeaten rain barrel she was looking up, a smile nestling in her wide blue eyes and around her soft, curved lips as she watched little white clouds, like a hurrying troop of winged young fairies, racing across the summer sky.

Mac turned his head and looked at her. There was a shadow in his wondering eyes. He ran a speculative finger down her bare forearm, touching her brown hand lightly.

"Thinking?" he questioned her.

She glanced down at his hand touching her own, the dreams still lurking in her happy eyes. She slowly turned her hand over until it rested, palm to palm, under his. A little pulse seemed to be striking sledgehammer blows in her slim, bronzed throat. Her heart raced with the gossamer fairies scudding across the summer sky.

"Thinking about tomorrow and your brother coming?" he asked again with a worshipful look.

"And today, too," she remarked truthfully, blushing under his keen scrutiny. "I was just thinking how wonderful it was to be in the country. It's like hearing the heart of the world beating under my cheek." She hesitatingly withdrew her hand from his warm clasp. He made no effort to restrain her. "I have always lived in a city where people are herded together in restricted quarters, where most of the flowers are in florists' windows and little trapped birds are in feet-square cages. Out here one gets such a different perspective."

"A little philosopher, aren't you?" he smiled. "I wish that I had always known a girl like you."

"A girl like me, or—" She hesitated, laughing at his quick protest.

"You, of course. Just you, Kate. I never dreamed that there was a girl in the world who loves the country as I do, city born and bred as I have been."

"I suppose you have known many, many girls, haven't you?"

"I never knew another Kate."

"No?" She was smilingly expectant.

"I wish that I had known you sooner," he said again soberly. He rose suddenly, holding out his hand to her. "I'll try to see you some time tomorrow. I'm thinking about going on a fishing trip."

All of the laughing and the ghosts of happy little dreams fled away as she looked up at him. "Aren't you going to wait until Pete comes back with the apples? It will be such fun to help make the cider. Why can't you stay, Mac?"

He smiled gratefully when she called him by name, but shook his head. "I'm in the dumps," he told her wistfully. "Better get off by myself until I'm cured."

She watched him go swinging off down a little path, travel worn and beaten into a thin, dusty line through the drying grass. He did not look back and at every step he took he seemed to be treading on her heart.

"I wish that I had known you sooner," he said sadly. Was there, perhaps, somebody else, somebody to whom he had pledged himself? Eyes smarting with unshed, carefully restrained tears, Kate looked up once more at the far blue sky, but a shadow had veiled the golden sun and it was as somberly gray as last year's gipsy fires.

He came back so quietly that she did not know he was near until he leaned over her tenderly, his moist hands burning as with a fever as he drew her to her feet before him. "Kate, dear, I have no right to come back to tell you that I love you, that I want you for my wife, when I know that you are engaged to Reece Logan, but something stronger than my will impelled me, forced me back. Don't let it distress you, but I'll never love another girl—"

He was drawing her unresisting body closer to him, the flame of his own passion reflected in the warm color that dyed her throat and face. "Oh, Kate, it isn't right to ask you, but if I had had a chance, before you promised to marry Reece, do you think you could have cared—for me?"

Kate put her small clenched hands on his breast and faced him bravely, although her words came in choking little gasps. "Reece is my brother-in-law. He and sister Sue gave me this little ring, and when you came I took it off of my right hand and put it on my engagement finger because—because I thought you were like all city men who go to the country for their vacations—just making love to every girl—"

A little later old Pete, returning with a wheelbarrow filled with ripe apples, saw enough of the miracle that had happened to Mac and Kate to question, with a twinkle in his sharp old eyes, "Is we gwine use dis here cider to drink to yo' happiness, missy?"

The Hilltop Record

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Augnst 26, 1920 No. 19

Edward Gillilan

The death of Edward Culver Gillilan, who lived more than half his life on Midland avenue, has keenly touched the people of the Hilltop.

On last Saturday, Aug. 21, Edward with his chum, Bernard Anthony, of Harris avenue, were taken by Bernard's parents to Buckeye Lake for their vacation. It was raining when they arrived and the boys put on their bathing suits to unload the car. Unwilling to have the fun of their outing delayed, they went for a dip, but finding shore bathing unsatisfactory, they secured a boat and rowed out into the lake. The first plunge was an entire success, but the second time Edward dived he was seized by a cramp which rendered him unable to swim. He called to his pal who was swimming on the other side of the boat. Bernard sank twice with his chum, but the third time, exhausted by the struggle, he was forced to let go. The rescuers arrived just too late.

Edward and Bernard had been the closeat friends for several years. They were rivals at school, standing now one, now the other, at the head of their class, and it is doubtful if anyone is more deeply cut than Bernard by Edward's tragic death.

Edward Culver Gillilan, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Gillilan, of 225 Midland Ave. He was born January 27, 1906, at Amesville, Ohio, and came to Columbus when he was six and one-half years old. From that time on he has attended the Columbus schools and would have been a sophomore at West High School this fall.

Besides making an excellent record at school, Edward had acquired no little skill in playing the violin and piano.

He was a great reader, and had a library of over two hundred and fifty books, most of which he had purchased with his own earnings. Some of them he has read many times. Perhaps some of his friends on the street who are familiar with his gentlemanly greetings can catch in them an echo of "Just David," for his companions detect in his leadership an outcropping of Tom Sawyer.

Of his loving, unselfish and appreciative nature, perhaps his family knows best, but his good fellowship, his courtesy, his pranks and unwillingness to be outdone are known to all his friends.

Edward is preceeded by his brother, Cranz, who died in infancy, and is survived by his parents and sister, Lurene, to whom he leaves the happiness of an unblemished memory.

The funeral of Edward C. Gillilan, the 14 year old son of Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Gillilan, who was drowned last Saturday, while swimming at Buckeye Lake, was held at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at the family residence, 225 Midland Ave., and was very largely attended. The body was taken to Alton Cemetery for burial. He leaves, besides his parents, one sister, Miss Lurene Gillilan, who is employed at the State Hospital.

The family have the sincere sympathy of their friends and neighbors in their sad bereavement.

AND SO IT WAS ILLUSTRATED

The Way of Modern Artist With a Story That Really Captivates His Fancy.

"This is a peach of a story," thought Dasher Christy, the eminent illustrator. "I enjoyed every word of it. It's the kind of a story I like to illustrate. It gives me something to work on. This description of the heroine, for instance."

And he read it again for the 10th time—"Myrtle Steadfast had liquid brown eyes with prominent pupils, a dainty Irish nose to which a crescent shaped freckle on the very tip lent added piquancy, fiery red hair with a glint of green where the sun caught it, a ravishing rosebud mouth and teeth like new ivory that has just been mined."

"The hero, too—a masterpiece," mused the eminent illustrator.

And he read over the hero's description once more—"Pete Jardiniere was above all, a manly man. He was 6 feet 7 inches tall, as blond as the moon and as fascinating as the devil. His eyes were black as ripe coal, his teeth white as unspoiled snow. He was the slenderest man Myrtle had ever seen with the exception of the living skeleton in the side show."

Two months later the story appeared in McEvery's Magazine, illustrated by Dasher Christy.

In the pictures, Myrtle had purple eyes, a perfect Roman nose without a freckle, black hair and no mouth, while Pete was a little fat man with pink eyes, gray hair and a red mustache.—Detroit Free Press.

---

Gladstone Liked to Sing.

Sir Walter Parratt told at Oxford an interesting little story of Mr. Gladstone. He said he had been speaking to Mr. Gladstone of the great compasses quite unmusical people often possessed.

"Yes, sir," replied Mr. Gladstone, "I used to like to hear my voice. It rang inside my head."

Of course, Mr. Gladstone was very fond of singing, and as a young man sang negro melodies with great gusto.

His eldest son composed many hymn tunes, and the present Viscount Gladstone sang in a choir for several years.—London Chronicle.

---

Luring the Help.

"When I tried to tell the hired man what to do," complained Josh, "he laughed at me."

"Mebbe, son," replied Farmer Corntossel, "it's more hopeful than you think. If you can make him laugh often enough perhaps he'll take a fancy to us and consent not to quit."

---

Three Was a Crowd.

The officer had caught the private filling a bottle of cognac.

"Are you drinking on duty?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir."

"Corporal of the gua——"

"Don't call him, captain. There's only enough left for the two of us."

The Man From Huntington

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

[illegible]

For several long months Carter Ruggsdale had been [illegible] New York. It had been a sudden change from Huntington, Miss., with its 2,878 population, approximately all his personal friends or [illegible] acquaintances.

One had to be mentally alert in the offices of Richards Bros. There were [illegible] there for trouble and [illegible]. Fortunately, if one had been [illegible] he could [illegible] a [illegible] possible [illegible] of a very [illegible] and the next day to head off [illegible] [illegible].

Mr. Roger Vernon has a new auto [illegible].

From some sudden impulse Carter Ruggsdale raised his eyes.

Directly opposite across the path of a [illegible] fat [illegible] an old gentleman, bag of tramp [illegible] face of features, eyes of eye, was watching him. Instantly upon his feet Carter Ruggsdale whipped off his hat and bounded the dozen intervening feet, his face exultant.

"Why, Mr. Vernon," he called, "who would ever have expected—"

By this time he had reached the bench where his park neighbor sat. His face fell.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he stammered. "I thought an old friend from home from Mississippi. I had just been reading about him in my home paper. If I'd only stopped to think but the resemblance really is striking."

Embarrassed, Carter started away, calling in valedictory: "I trust I have not annoyed you, sir."

The stranger [illegible] the young man to a seat beside him.

"I did not catch the name of my double," he said courteously.

Then Carter made explanations. "Mr. Roger Vernon, sir. He's president of the bank at home and a very [illegible] gentleman. No one could object to having such a double."

Carter found himself taking quite a [illegible] new acquaintance. The old gentleman [illegible] a touch of hearty appreciation.

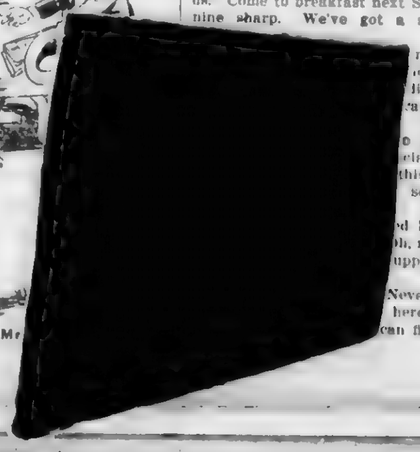
"Your [illegible] Mrs. Vernon, sir," [illegible] "I never was in Hemstead [illegible] and I never saw him. But I've heard my father tell of visiting in Mississippi when he was a boy. I've always intended to get in touch with my southern relatives some day."

Just as they were launched on this topic, there came an interruption. A slim, graceful girl, with dark eyes and coppery hair, stood before them.

"I'm just getting introduced for the first time to my relatives in Mississippi," explained the father.

Alicia held out a pretty hand. "Oh," she said, "is this a new cousin from Mississippi?"

Carter shook his head dolorously. "I'd certainly claim the relationship if I didn't know I'd be shown up an imposter later. But the families are great friends. I sent my first valentine to your fourth cousin."



Alicia laughed. To Carter it was the most charming he had ever heard. "How nice to have met you!" she said.

When they took their departure Carter walked beside them. Not far from the park a luxurious limousine waited.

"Don't forget our address, young man," said Mr. Vernon. "Come to see us. Come to breakfast next Sunday nine sharp. We've got a southern [illegible] invitation [illegible] om man- [illegible] ting. Mr. Vernon leaned out to call, "Nine o'clock sharp!"

Then a certain young southerner, from whom a burden of loneliness had been magically lifted, went blissfully upon his way.

Next Sunday was only seven days off. New York was giving him business opportunity. Now the wonderful city held out another lure. "Find romance here?" he quoted under his breath. "Why, it's already found!"

HOMES

The strength and union of America has been kept sacred by liberty and home loving people. Freedom and democracy as enjoyed and expreased in the home are the principles which promote our progress as a nation. It is much easier to own a home than most people think, and the fact is that every cent you pay in on a home of your own is saved and not paid to a landlord. We have a book of plans that we have prepared especially for you. Come out to our office and look it over. If you are interested we would be glad to furnish you estimates on one of these plans that might strike your fancy, this with any suggestions we might give are absolutely free whether you buy from us or not.

Buttons and Bachelors

By CORONA REMINGTON

(©, 1930, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Elizabeth Langston scowled at the reflection in her mirror and upbraided herself severely as she put the finishing touches to her hair.

"He may be the loveliest and most considerate employer a stenographer ever had, and he may be killingly good-looking, too, but that's no reason for going crazy over him, especially as he's probably married and has a dozen children."

She had said the same thing to herself perhaps forty times during the past two months, but it had had little effect in changing her feeling toward the charmingly irresistible individual who dictated letters to her all day, and once in a while confided his business anxieties.

With a gesture of impatience she jabbed a final hairpin into her soft brown hair and started downstairs. Half an hour later she had reached the office and was glancing over the morning mail. There were several letters that she could not answer without Mr. Thompson's advice, so she rose and went over and placed them on his desk as usual. As she did so her eye fell upon a hand-written letter lying there, and before she realized it she had read it.

"My dear Margie," it began. "I hope you won't feel I've been neglecting you by my long silence, but everything has been at sixes and sevens in the office lately and I've hardly had time to sleep. Things are getting straightened out at last and henceforth you'll hear more often.

"Miss Langston is the most wonderful stenographer I ever had—absolutely efficient and thoroughly charming. I'm sure it's too good to last.

"Too bad little Jack's had the measles. Look out for his eyes.

"I'm sending $500 to the National for you to check against. Let me know how things are coming along.

"Love to the boy and yourself.

"JACK."

Elizabeth sank weakly into the nearest chair while the desk and typewriter seemed to jump up and down in front of her. It was just what she had expected and just what she had told herself all the time, yet when it came to facing the fact she found that she had not really expected anything of the sort. A moment later John Thompson walked into the office and immediately noticed that something was wrong.

Elizabeth Sank Weakly Into the Nearest Chair.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked with concern. "You're as white as a sheet. I hope it's not bad news."

"No—yes—that is— Oh, I can't tell you. It's really nothing much after all," she ended bravely.

"Well, whatever it is," he said, placing his hand gently on her shoulder, "just remember that I sympathize and only wish I could help you. If you ever feel like telling me, and there's anything I can do—I'm right here."

His concern and sympathy made it all the harder to bear, and Elizabeth had difficulty in controlling herself, but she dragged somehow through the day and at last was able to go home. Reaching there she made a hasty excuse to her mother, said that she would not be down to supper, and rushed up to her room to think it over. By next morning she had decided to resign at any cost, and in the dark she rehearsed her little speech to her employer over and over, but when later in the morning, the moment arrived, she had forgotten every word.

"Mr. Thompson," she began, her voice trembling, "I've—I've—I'm going to resign," she blurted out at last.

"Ye gods!" he exclaimed. "I knew something went wrong yesterday morning, and if I'm to blame I'll apologize. Do tell me. I can't let you go like this."

"You haven't done a thing. I wish I could convince you but I'm afraid you'll just have to take my word for it."

"You're simply all worn out. That's what's the matter,' he said soothingly. "Take a month's vacation in the country; then you'll be fit as a fiddle again; but don't go too far away, because I want to watch over you and see how you get along."

"You're too good to me," said Elizabeth gratefully, "but I've really decided it's best to resign."

"Well, anyway, I won't accept it until you've had a month's rest."

They argued back and forth for half an hour or more, and Thompson won in the end. He chose the place and even engaged the room, and insisted upon her leaving the next afternoon.

During the following days he was untiring in his attentions, and often she wondered whether she was doing right to accept so many kindnesses from him; yet he did nothing that she could actually criticise. He was simply a most considerate employer.

Buy Diamonds from an Expert

As diamonds are the most valuable of all articles to buy, so they are the most difficult. No one but an expert can accurately gauge the value of two stones which to the layman look exactly alike. There may be a difference of hundreds of dollars in their value.

In buying diamonds at this store, you have the satisfaction of knowing that your money is wisely invested. Our knowledge of diamonds, our experience in buying and selling them, makes us thoroughly well qualified to judge them correctly. And the standing of the store is in itself a guarantee that your purchase has been well made.

As with diamonds, so it is with all other jewelry bought here. Its value is unquestioned. You know, and the recipient knows, that it is exactly what it is represented to be.

Buttons and Batchels

and from his letter to his wife, she knew how much he valued her services. It was doubtless half self-interest that prompted his actions.

When the time finally arrived for her to leave the country, Elizabeth decided naturally enough that she could not possibly desert him after accepting so much from him, although during the entire month he had never once mention her returning to work for his firm. That evening as the two sat alone on the old-fashioned veranda, Elizabeth decided to broach the subject.

"I—I think I'll go back to the office tomorrow," she said rather unevenly.

"No, you won't," he declared, to her amazement. "I know that, somehow, you didn't want to continue there, and the only reason I didn't let you sever your connection was because—because I've loved you ever since the first minute I saw you, but I was afraid that if I proposed to you then you'd think you didn't know me well enough."

"Propose!" echoed Elizabeth blankly.

"Yes," he said, losing his last vestige of self-possession, "for the last two months I've simply had to sit on myself to keep from doing it, but I ought to tell you, Elizabeth, that we can't live in the affluence you might expect, because I'm supporting my widowed sister and her little boy."

"But—but I was sure you were married," stammered the girl.

"What made you think so?" he asked, and Elizabeth felt the blood rush into her face as she realized the quandary she was in.

"Because—because all your buttons were on and on straight, and bachelors either have one or two missing, or else sew them on wrong," she ended triumphantly.

"You're left there," he laughed happily. "There's one off my coat this minute."

"Then I'll sew it on some time, maybe," she said rather breathlessly.

The Faker and the Flood

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Lou Alberts had the ouija craze.

Bill Blacklock was a nonbeliever.

As her "psychic investigations," as she called them, became more intense and earnest, his good-natured scoffing developed into ardent contempt and finally reached the stage of intolerance.

"Leave that board alone or it will drive you insane," he admonished.

"Well, let me tell you, Bill Blacklock," she said, "the stand you are taking simply shows you up as a narrow minded materialist. You're denouncing something you haven't even tried. I dare you to put ouija to a test."

She brought the board from its place in the corner and brandished it before him challengingly.

Bill and Lou were to be married within six weeks, but he was unable to discuss the coming event with her owing to the "psychic investigations." It had come to the point where Lou had to give up either ouija or Bill.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "We'll test ouija, and if he fails you must drop him and forever keep silence about him. If he meets the test I'll accept him and there'll be no more disagreements."

This seemed fair enough, and Lou agreed. They drew up chairs and placed the board on their laps and their hands on the indicator.

Bill asked his age and the board answered twenty-seven, which was correct. He questioned it regarding his vocation and ouija truthfully answered "Mining engineer." He put other questions and the replies were accurate.

"Now are you convinced?" Lou asked triumphantly, as they paused.

"No," he said. "The answers to all questions were known by one of us. Our subconscious personalities have been moving the indicator, that's all. The whole thing's a farce. You must abandon this crazy hobby."

Bill took the board and with a pencil wrote in big letters across the face of it, "Ouija is a faker."

The termination of the heated argument that ensued caused a definite break in relations, and Bill flounced from the house with a diamond ring clutched in his fist and a grim, determined, desperate look on his countenance.

Bill was stubborn, but no more so than Lou. He remained away, and she let him.

"I can't live in the same town with her," Bill finally decided, and forthwith sent a letter of acceptance in regard to some work in the southwest.

About the same time Lou's father was ordered by his doctor to a different climate, and Mr. Alberts, his wife and two daughters shortly after started on a trip across the continent.

Bill did not know that Lou had left the city, and Lou was unaware of his departure. They loved each other, their souls cried out for each other, but both were too stubborn to surrender.

If ouija is a spirit of good he must have felt bad about the separation he had brought about. If he is evil he grinned with benevolent satisfaction.

Broad river was justifying its name. Spring torrents had swollen the stream to twice its width, and the work of expansion, accompanied by a work of devastation, went on. It wrenched houses from their foundations, it obliterated abandoned mines and some that had not been abandoned. It ate its way into mountains and tore huge chunks from their sides.

A shack standing against a mountain wall withstood all the greedy assaults of the torrent. The shack was marooned, with the mountain wall at its back and water on the other sides, but there was a plentiful supply of provisions and the three men who had their temporary abode there felt little uneasiness over their welfare.

They knew they could leave should the occasion arise, for close by the cabin was a large and powerful motorboat which they could launch and make their way in the swollen river in spite of all the currents that might assail the craft. However, the men were there for a purpose and had no intention of leaving until their object was accomplished.

One day Bill was interrupted in a game of solitaire by one of his companions who stood before him holding a familiar looking board.

"Here's something queer," said the man. "I found this thing washed up by the river. It's a message for help, but it's a strange one."

Bill seized the board with a feeling something akin to exasperation. He turned the board over and his eyes widned as he read a message that had been laboriously carved in the back with a knife. It read:

"Help; out of provisions; water at cabin door; still rising; marooned on Pegg's Point."

"There's the message for help," said the man who had brought the board, "but look at this." And he reversed the board, and with a finger pointed out another message which had once been written with a pencil, although the water had washed off all traces of lead and left only a scrawling depression in the wood.

"Ouija is a faker," were the words that were only faintly visible.

Bill hurled the playing cards to the floor and upset the table.

"Launch the boat," he directed. He was leader of the party and the others obeyed without question.

Soon the motorboat was plowing upstream. The current was strong, but the four-cylinder engine drove the craft along in spite of all resistance.

Three miles they went, and a sheet fluttering from the roof of a cabin attracted the attention of the voyagers. They steered the boat toward this habitation, the lower part of which was immersed. The boat crept up beside the shack and Bill was the first to step from it into the cabin. In water up to his waist he waded through the three lower rooms and then mounted a ladder to the upper floor.

A man, a woman and two girls were huddled in a corner.

"Thank God!" breathed the man fervently. "We're saved."

"Bill!" cried one of the girls.

In a corner of the living room of a modest, comfortable dwelling in an eastern city stands an ouija board. The board is never used, for Lou has recovered from her "craze." But sometimes her husband takes it in his hands and pats it affectionately and says softly:

"Ouija, you're all right. I take it back; you're no faker after all."

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, September 2, 1920 No. 20

LANCASTER VS. GLENWOOD—LABOR DAY

The big three horseshoe pitchers from Lancaster, namely, Bobbet, Hendrick and Stevens, after pitching at the Fair Grounds Friday and Saturday will stay over in Columbus to pitch at Glenwood Park on Labor Day afternoon. This trio finished second, third and fourth at the National Horseshoe tournament at Akron a couple of weeks ago. They will be matched against former National champion, Fred Brust; Mr. Cook, and Mr. Nicklaus, all of Columbus, and members of the Glenwood Horseshoe club. This will be one of the best free attractions in Columbus on Labor Day.

The Carlile & Kerr Co., Hilltop store, will give Hilltop people an exsellent chance, next week, to receive the benefits of an expert teacher in domestic science, Mrs. J. T. More, of The Corn Products Co., who will give a series of demonstrations all week in the preparation of various kinds of foods, menus, etc. Mrs. More comes well recommended and you will miss a good deal in this line if you do not attend there lectures and demonstrations. A complete program for the week can be found in the announcement from the Carlile & Kerr Co., on the second page of this paper.

Mrs. Charles Cady, 2077 W. Broad St., will open her fall class for guitar and mandolin, Sept. 1. Limited number of students taken. For terms call Hilltop 156.

Dr. W. S. Murray, Dentist, Broad and Terrace, Hilltop 2965.

Watzy Hale, 28, colored, died late Friday, Aug. 27, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hale, 416 Highland Ave. Besides his parents he is survived by his widow, four sisters and one brother. Funeral at 1:30 Monday at Oakland Avenue Baptist Church. Burial in Green Lawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Winfield Rankin entertained the members of the Hilltop Embroidery Club in a very unique manner on last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. J. T. More, a domestic science teacher, who is at the State Fair this week, and who will give a number of talks to Columbus housewives, gave a very interesting demonstration and talk, bringing forth the advantages of corn products. Edith Gibson gave two recitations and Mrs. Tillman sang very beautifully. A delightful luncheon was served by the hostess.

Eat honey? Call Hilltop 214.

Our fruit and shade trees, shrubs, grapevines and bulbs are now ready for Fall delivery. Order early and get the best. E. T. Temple, 334 S. Warren Avenue

Woman Suffrage

Since the apparent ratification of the amendment giving women of America the right to vote at all elections, we have thought it would be well to ask different women on the Hilltop to contribute to the Record an expression of their opinion as to the "benefits that will be derived" by this forward step in human progress. We publish this week the first installment of their letters, and hope to follow later with others of like manner. We invite any Hilltop woman to express herself on this subject through the columns of the Record.

A Greeting to Hilltop Women

"For the same cause do ye joy and rejoice with me."—Phil. 2:17.

With the ratification of the suffrage amendment, 27,000,000 of women are enfranchised, a new era is begun, a great mile stone in the forward march of Christian civilization has been passed and woman is at last coming into her own.

We have always belived in the equal (God given rights) of men, women, and children, regardless of race, color or sex.

We rejoiced with great joy when the negro was emancipated sung the doxology when the liquor traffic was outlawed, thanked God when Methodism let down the bars, allowing her women to obey the command of her Master and "go tell the glad story of human redemption to this sinful, suffering world;" and my soul is thrilled at the wonderful opportunities for real service to God and humanity that now looms up before us, in this glad day.

God made Eve, as a helpmate for Adam, and men today need helpmates for mothers and wives, instead of "dolls," "pets," human "parasites," given over to selfish living, seeking pleasures and amusements, following "fads" and fashion, and worse than wasting much precious time and money.

The power of the ballot will elevate womanhood, cause her to be held in higher esteem by men and think more of herself in a worthwhile way.

She will read, think, study and talk along broader lines, and become more companionable for intelligent men.

She will have more ambition, now that in the eyes of the law she has emerged from the class of criminals and idiots, where all these years, men have been content to hold her. With one moral code, equal wage for like efficiency, a voice in the making and execution of laws by which she is governed, she will soon prove her right to the high place God meant her to fill.

M. M. MARSHALL.

Suffrage will benefit woman generally, in that: They will be actuated by motives of interest—not merely observation. In the making of great constructive laws, they will realize the necessity for clean, capable representatives, and this responsibility will cause them to become closer students of vital public questions. They will have a joint interest, with men, in all muatters pertaining to their property, and can be relied on to understand, first, and to vote afterward. In short, from being permitted, by sufferance, to live under laws, made and to be made, they will now assume the solemn responsibility of becoming joint makers as well as users.

The whole country will be benefited, for there will come forth from the ranks of womankind and into the service and council of the nation, great characters, rich in mentality and learning, who will stand full statured with the equally great men of America—camly, yet determined for the advancement of any great enterprise.

(Mrs.) D. B. ULREY.

Pure extracted honey. Call Hilltop 214.

The Young Independents football team will practice Tuesday evening, at 6:30 o'clock. The following players report at Tremont and Burgess Ave.: Sullivan, Schwartz, Bower, Dunlap, Bradfate, Richardson and Weisenberger. If the Bulldogs want a game please let Louis Schwartz know at first occasion.

Mrs. Thomas Coberly of 81 North Eureka Ave., entertained with a dinner Friday in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Daisy Brokaw, and son, of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. John Carney and daughter of Sandusky, O., Mrs. Edna Steward and Mrs. Grace Johnson.

The regular monthly meeting of the Glenwood Aid Society will be held Thursday, Sept. 9, at 2 p. m., at the church. Ladies of Second Division will serve.

Hilltop clover honey. Call Hilltop 214.

A Republican meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, Sept. 8, at 8 o'clock, Odd Fellows Hall, Broad street and Oakley avenue. A good speaker will be secured. Everybody invited. This will also be the regular meeting of Eleventh Ward Republican Club.

The thirteenth annual reunion of the Danison Reunion Association will be held Tuesday, Sept. 7, at Washington Park, Columbus, Ohio. Take Washington Park car south on High street.

The Gallia County Association will hold a basket picnic at Glenwood Park on Labor Day, Sept. 6. All former Gallia County people are invited to attend.

The Olympian Athletic Club will entertain with a get-together party at their club rooms, Saturday evening, Sept. 4. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Postle of Elden Ave., announce the birth of a daughter, born August 28th.

The Cheerful Workers of Hilltop Church of Christ will hold a lawn fete at Richardson Ave and Broad St., Saturday, Sept. 11.

Don't forget the food demonstration at Carlile & Kerr Co.'s store next week.

Mrs. Tilly Baker, 81 S. Oakley Ave., wishes to announce that no costumes will be reserved for Hallowe'en till Oct. 11, hours from 1 to 8 only.

Don't forget the food demonstration at Carlile & Kerr Co.'s store next week.

THE HAMMER OF JESUS

If I could hold within my hand
The hammer Jesus swung,
Not all the gold in all the land,
Nor jewels countless as the sand,
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
Round which His finger once did cling.

If I could have the table He Once made in Nazareth,
Not all the pearls in all the seas
Nor crowns of kings or kings to be
As long as men have breath,
Could buy that thing of wood He made—
The Lord of Lords who learned a trade.

Yea, but His hammer still is shown
By honest hands that toil,
And 'round His table men sit down;
And all are equals with a crown
Nor gold nor pearls can soil;
The shop at Nazareth was bare—
But Brotherhood was builded there.

The Lost Fur

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The snow was piled in great banks along Fifth avenue and the stages careened through the street like a ship in an angry sea.

Bess Wilson had been standing waiting for a seat on one of those buses until she felt she could stand not another moment.

Getting to and from business under the horrible conditions of the city streets was a most trying ordeal each morning and evening, and Bess, together with two of her business friends, was getting weary of the struggle.

"It is only under such conditions as these that I ever regret being poor and having to work for a living," laughed Bess disconsolately as they vainly hailed the tenth bus that passed them on its uptown way.

"It wouldn't hurt some of these wealthy people to give us a lift either," commented Nesta. "They could so easily fill up their great cars and help traffic a little."

The words had scarcely fluttered from her lips when a big motor, driven by a well-poised young man, stopped before the three tired girls.

"Plenty of room in my back seat if any of you want a lift," he invited, with a sharp military touching of his cap.

"Oh!" sighed Nesta, perhaps the most tired of the three.

"I was just saying some one would be good enough to take us uptown."

Young Vincent Drake laughed and jumped out to let the girls in his great car.

Bess Wilson hesitated.

"I go to the West side," she sighed. "You two go ahead. I will just have to wait for a No. 15 bus."

Drake inveigled her into the car while she was yet speaking.

"I can strike toward the West side at any angle," he told her. When the were all three comfortably and thankfully tucked in he turned laughingly and impersonally for orders.

As they jolted and swerved along the traffic-bound, snow-encumbered avenue the girls took complete and most satisfactory inventory of the young man who so kindly rescued them from a more lengthy wait on the street corner. Each pair of eyes said, "I like him—don't you?"

Even had Drake been chumily inclined, he could not have dared giving his attention for so much as a moment to his three passengers. Driving was precarious and all his head and energy were well occupied. However, when Nesta and Helen were safely deposited amid the snowdrifts adorning their own neighborhood, he insisted on the third and lonely passenger changing from the back to the front seat.

"You'll get jostled back and forth across that big seat and, besides, I will

The first step in the path of progress is to fix in the mind a clear vision of better surroundings and a better place for normal and unhampered growth. Growth comes from freedom of thought and an inner feeling of independence. In no other place can a family so well realize this than in a home of their own. It need not be a big mansion, but a little cosy home with good surroundings, and a cheerful appearance, a place that the children can in latter years always refer to as the dear old home. The road to home ownership is an easy one to travel after you once get started and the start is much easier than many folks think. Come out and look over our book of plans and make up your mind to own your own home. We are willing to help you with any suggestions that we may offer, estimates are free.

DIAMONDS IN RIVER'S BED

Diving Bell Employed to Bring Gems From the Bottom of the Vaal River in Africa.

Deep in the Vaal river in South Africa are diamonds. To get them a device on the diving bell principle is employed having a tubular shaft and an air lock. This consists of two pontoons rigidly connected by decks, between which a roomy caisson or diving bell is sunk to the river bed.

A tubular shaft joins the caisson to a chamber above the water level and the whole is air locked. To keep the caisson submerged it is weighted with iron ballast, says the South African Mining and Engineering Journal.

Compressed air is forced into the interior of the upper or air lock chamber, the shaft and the bell or caisson, and the river water being thus forced out below it is possible to carry on digging and loading operations conveniently. The gravel is hoisted up the shaft and delivered into a chute which holds about a ton. The bell is provided with collapsible seats attached to the wall for the accommodation of workers during lifting operations.

Puzzle to Naturalists.

There are two animals, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly, that puzzle naturalists more than any others. They are nature's submarine and airplane—the whale and the eagle. It is known that whales occasionally descend as far as 3,000 feet below the surface of the sea—a depth at which, from the pressure of water, they ought to be crushed flat. Why they are not injured, naturalists have yet to discover. It is this pressure that prevents a modern submarine from descending to a depth of more than some 300 feet.

Eagles have been seen, through telescopes, to fly with apparent ease from 30,000 to 40,000 feet above sea level. At that height no human being can live, owing to the rarefaction of the air. How the birds live and fly at far greater heights than man can endure is another question still unanswered.

Dub Golfer but Star Casuist.

The latest yarn from the links concerns a golfer who took a 10 in making the third hole, and said to his opponent, who had a 6: "I'll take 8 here; 10 is too many. I don't like double figures."

"Why not say 9 instead of 8," suggested the other.

"Well, you see, 9 is a bad number," was the reply. "You can cheat with 9; turn it upside down and it's 6, but 8 is 8, no matter how you look at it."—Boston Transcript.

Garrulous Spouse.

"It's a good rule to think twice before you speak."

"Ha! Ha!"

"What are you laughing at?"

"To think how much thinking my wife would have to do."—Boston Transcript.

WHERE TWO EXTREMES MEET

Civilization and the Wild Places of Earth Come Together at Falls of the Zambesi.

Once upon a time it was in western America that one happened on the meeting place of the wilds and civilization. Now it is Africa, Africa of the elephants and the Uganda railway. Perhaps the best-known meeting place of the two extremes on the dark continent is the hotel at the Victoria Falls of the Zambesi, where the tourists scamper about the desolate stretch of bush-veld.

Twenty minutes takes you from the hotel to the savagery of the falls, and on your way you may surprise a troop of baboons, grubbing about in the rocks, who will dash off at a clumsy gallop and show their teeth as you pass. The guinea fowls cackle, the hornbills fly over, and the kaffirs are stalking about outside the modern luxurious hotel. Inside, the tourists trying to maintain western dignity at a dance, while the great jungle baboons slink up to the hotel's orchard to steal the ripe oranges. Inevitably it reminds you of Mowgli's cry, "Let in the jungle, Huthi!" Truly contrast, and if contrast spells romance, nerv, by the great Zambesi, may you find it

Fine Art of Reading.

An English writer holds "browsing" to be more of an art and thinks that the perfect "browser" should stand up or assume some other position of easy negligence, because for him to settle down in a chair is to "degenerate almost inevitably into a mere reader." He then goes on to point out that one does not "browse" on Meredith or Browning, a statement to which might be added that one does mighty little "browsing" on Henry James.

"Browsing" is not quite the same thing as skipping, although you do skip; nor yet as skimming, although you do skim; it is, in other words, just browsing, and this may be considered as satisfactory as a great many definitions.—Christian Science Monitor.

Not So Skimpy.

Her husband was counting his ready cash when she stole up behind him and laid her hand on a $20 bill.

"I saw a lovely bathing suit yesterday," she wheedled, "and this would just about cover it."

"It would, eh?" he retorted. "Then get it by all means. I think the one you have now could be covered by a couple of postage stamps."—Boston Transcript.

Conclusive Evidence.

"But how did the boss know Clarence had taken the car out?" asked Henry.

"Why," explained William, "Clarence ran over him."—Harper's Magazine.

Buy Diamonds from an Expert

As diamonds are the most valuable of all articles to buy, so they are the most difficult. No one but an expert can accurately gauge the value of two stones which to the layman look exactly alike. There may be a difference of hundreds of dollars in their value.

In buying diamonds at this store, you have the satisfaction of knowing that your money is wisely invested. Our knowledge of diamonds, our experience in buying and selling them, makes us thoroughly well qualified to judge them correctly. And the standing of the store is in itself a guarantee that your purchase has been well made.

As with diamonds, so it is with all other jewelry bought here. Its value is unquestioned. You know, and the recipient knows, that it is exactly what it is represented to be.

The Lost Fur

have to shout for directions to your home."

So Bess found herself beside Drake minus the small fur piece she had unfastened from her throat. It had dropped on the seat and now, rather than trouble Drake, she let it remain until she should get out.

The trip over to the West side was without any special incident. Drake had cast an occasional swift glance at his tired little companion, but words between them were few. Perhaps Bess was too tired to do more than lift a pair of heavy lashes in acquiescence to some remark of Drake's, or it might have been a sense of decorum that kept her from chatting freely with this strange young man.

Interpreting her silence as the latter cause, Drake essayed to put his charge more at her ease.

"You are about the umpteenth passenger I have taken home during this new blockade. I've been picking up people all this week. Doctor orders that I keep out in the air as much as possible; so I took this means of combining duty with pleasure."

During the remainder of the drive to Bess' apartment door Drake was conscious that the girl's queer little personality was making its way through the silence she maintained.

"Thank you so much," she said softly as she stepped from the car. "I was very tired tonight and appreciate your kindness. Good-night."

She was gone so swiftly that Drake hardly realized her exit from his horizon. It was not until he had plowed his precarious way a few blocks beyond that he cursed himself for not had to return lost property before, so don't know how to do it." He looked expectantly at Bess for his solution.

"I would call it found property now," she said slowly, and decided then and there that she would like knowing young Drake much better than she already did. "Perhaps if you have time and still must stay out in the air you could stop by Fifty-third street some evening and deliver the fur. I am at that corner every evening about 5:15."

"I have time, I must stay in the air and I know you need your fur this cold weather. If tonight is all right I will be waiting."

"It is pretty cold," laughed Bess and the atmosphere surrounding her smile being anything but chilly, young Drake knew that every evening from then on would see him waiting at Fifty-third street. At least all evenings until Bess should cease to be self-supporting.

New and Valuable Disinfectant.

A new perfumed disinfectant is more agreeable to use than others, while it is claimed to be much less liable than some to stain articles with which it may come in contact. It is stated to have six times the germicidal effect of carbolic acid. The active agent is formaldehyde, which is mixed in solution with the odorous essential oil preferred—such as that of lilac, lavender, or carnation—and is then diluted with 40 volumes of water. The liquid is sprayed into the air. The spray not only destroys infective germs, but the nasal mucous membrane of those who breathe it is stimulated to resist infection.

having thought to get her address. He had a feeling that he could get to like Bess, but now he had lost his chance. She was a needle in a great haystack to him.

When Bess had climbed the three flights of stairs to the small apartment and removed her coat and hat, there was a quaint little smile hovering about her lips. She had not taken off her fur, because it was not on her neck to take off. It was in the back seat of young Drake's car. So the little smile stayed in Bess' eyes with persistent happiness while she prepared a nourishing dinner.

Next morning she made a stop on her way to business. It was at the "Lost and Found" desk of the leading daily paper.

The advertisement read: "Will young man who drove three girls home from corner Fifth avenue and Fifty-fourth street please return fur neckpiece left in car?"

As she turned away from the desk and started to make her way swiftly out lest she be late, she collided with a young man apparently bent on the same business as herself.

"Oh!" gasped Bess, breathless from the impact. Then, looking up, a beautiful flush swept her cheeks.

"So!" cried young Drake, with quite shameless elation, "then it was your fur?" He had jumped to speedy conclusions seeing Bess near the "Lost and Found" desk. "I am not sure I would have recognized either of the other two girls—had I bumped into them here," he added.

The implied compliment was rewarded by a lovely slow glance from the girl's eyes.

"You were going to advertise for the owner?" she questioned.

"Yes," young Drake told her, "and I don't mind letting you know I hoped you were that owner. I have never

The Deadly Cigarette

In fancy we see a fond mother, her arms around a bright, sturdy, fun-loving boy of five. All her hopes and ambitions cluster about him, her very life seems bound up in his future welfare. Even before his baby eyes opened to the world and looked wonderingly into hers, she had spent much time thinking, planning and praying that the best things in life might be his. She wanted him to grow into a good and great man.

But today as she looks out upon the path he must travel, sees the pitfalls, the cunning, alluring devices set for his feet, the deplorable conditions that confront the youth of today, she clasps him closer to her warm loving heart, turns her face heavenward and cries out in deep anguish of soul, "My God, what chance has my boy?"

We echo the mother's cry, and inquire of fathers and mothers and Christian men and women, what chance have the young people of today to be pure in mind, strong in body, and of high ideals. Movies multiply and in spite of censorship impure, suggestive harmful films flash upon the canvas. The great tobacco corporations are pushing the pernicious, body-and-soul destroying cigarette into every nook and corner, greeting our boys on every hand. Statistics tell us that more than 5,000,000,000 of the "little white coffin nails" are manufactured annually in the United States, besides millions more that are rolled and consumed by the smokers themselves.

Judge Lindsay says: Twelve hundred American boys begin the cigarette habit every day and that habit invites all the other demons of habit to come and add to their ruin and degradation.

Cigarettes cloud the mind, weaken the will, shatter the nerves, affect the boy physically, mentally and morally. Many railroad companies, banking houses and business institutions debar men and boys who use cigarettes. "We can't trust them," says the business man. The habit grips them, and holds like chains of iron. No confirmed drunkard was ever more helpless, and intense hunger and thirst are not to be compared to their desire for it once the habit is formed.

Parents, arouse yourselves, get in touch with the Juvenile Court, read the newspaper account of crime right here in our own town. Only a few days ago a little boy of seven and one of eight burglarized a home and set fire to it with their cigarettes. On West Broad a little fellow of six stood in front of a movie with a cigarette stub in his mouth. A gentleman interested in his welfare asked him his name and where he lived, but the child answered defiantly and rudely, "I won't tell."

We recently saw a young father smoking a cigarette in the presence of his children and another smoking a huge pipe and holding by the hand his baby boy, who held a toy pipe "just like papa's" between his lips.

We deny ( before being accused) that we are pessimistic, but we love boys, see such possibilities in them, that we have become alarmed at existing conditions.

M. M. Marshall.

Remember this date. On September 17th, the day being Friday, the hour being 7:30 p. m. and the doings being at Glenwood Church, either in the basement where everything is dry or on the grassy green adjoining the church. The best entertainment the Tri Mu Class has had this year. The object of this blow-out is to increase friendship and membership in the class. For every one who ever attended the Tri. Mu Class, ever intend to and your friends.

The Tri Mus must remember this is not a stag affair. You are expected to bring your lady along and share the fun with her. If you cannot find one get in touch with Carlos Matheny. And if perchance you have more than your share call Carlos. To those who think they are unlucky and will stag it: "Every stag will serve at the tables." Don't be a stag.

You are assured a grand and glorious good time. Remember this is for the benefit of Tri Mus and friends. Who's your friend? We want to make you acquainted with our boys' best girls. We will have good speaking and you will have no better time elsewhere. The Tri Mu plans for entertainments in the near future call for these dates: Hallowe'en Party, Thanksgiving Party, Christmas Party, and one every month thereafter.

We have a few Glenwood Soldiers Memorial Books to close out at a cheap price, 25c each.

Roy B. Hawthorne, Chairman.

Labor Day Tournament

The North Park Tennis Club championships were played Labor Day at the club's court on North Park avenue. The court being wet delayed the start so that only the doubles championship was decided. The semi-final and final rounds of singles will be played Saturday afternoon. Everyone at all interested in tennis is invited to attend these matches, which are certain to be warmly contested.

This club, although only formed this year as a neighborhood organization, now boasts of fifteen active and boosting members who are anxious to expand into a real live Hilltop club. Anyone interested in this matter is especially requested to get into communication with us at the court on Saturday afternoon.

The scores of the doubles final matches follow: Semi-final round, Johnson and Gifford vs. King and McElroy, 6-1, 6-3; Bloom and Friend vs. Dean and Clevenger, 8-6, 6-3. Final round, Bloom and Friend vs. Johnson and Gifford, 4-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

HILLCREST BAPTIST WOMEN'S SOCIETY

The Women's Society have their first meeting to begin the fall work, at the home of Mrs. Albert Peake, 26 N. Warren Ave., Thursday, Sept. 9, at 7:30 p. m. All ladies of the church and congregation are urged to attend.

Under the leadership of our efficient president, Mrs. Roy Spring of 109 S. Eureka Ave., we accomplished great things last year and expect to do even greater things this coming church year.

Our ladies will be interested to know some of our accomplishments: Paid an Easter offering of $50 on the church building, sent a box of white cross sewing and infant garments to Burma, helped the Friends' Rescue Mission, aided the church in her missionary apportionment, sent one of our young ladies as delegate to the Ohio Baptist Assembly, and gave $5 on Dispatch Poor Relief Fund.

We are busy women. Every woman of Hill Crest church and congregation should consider it an honor and privilege to be a member of this wide-awake society.

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

10:30—Public worship. Sermon by pastor.

The Sunday school is growing in size and interest. Come next Sunday. Have you ever heard our pastor? He always preaches a full gospel.

The Columbus Federated Societies of the United Lutheran Church will hold their quarterly meeting on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, in the basement of the church, being entertained by the Ladies Aid and Missionary society of this church. All the members of the congregation, whether members of the society or not, should attend this meeting. Bring your friends along.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. G. R. Robbins will preach on these amazing themes next Sunday. Morning: "The Children of This World Wiser in Their Generation Than the Children of Light in the Church." So said Jesus twenty centuries ago."

P. M.—"Why I Personally Prefer Remaining Here in Columbus and Preach the Gospel of Christ Rather Than Die and go to Heaven and Play on a Golden Harp."

Say, wonder why so many people prefer being sick when they might be healed and live useful lives and glorify Christ. Isn't it a shame and sin for most people to remain sick when Christ is just as willing and able to heal the sick as twenty centuries ago?

---

Moore's Wizard

A combination Range with oven for either GAS or COAL. The main top has four holes for coal and four burners for gas.

It is equipped with anti-carbon fire box, controller damper, glass oven door, daylight oven thermometer, Mrs. Rorer's Guide, anti-scorch cover and enameled tray in burner box, and Rutx Automatic Lighter. Elevated large roomy warming closet with two drop doors which form shelves when open. White porcelain enameled door panels and splasher back. Beautiful nickel finish.

Safety is secured to the oven burner by a clever device which makes it impossible to turn on gas until burner is in proper position, or the lower burner until gas is turned off —in fact the whole operation is completed by a simple half-turn of the wrist with a white porcelain handle.

The "Wizard" is only one of the great line of Moore's Combination Coal and Gas Ranges, all of which are positively guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction.

The range is from $138.00 to $265.00

In Mamie's Need

By CORONA REMINGTON

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

For hours Baird had hidden in the shadow of a clump of holly in the big suburban yard waiting for the dear morning time when people sleep most soundly. The young fellow's garments were whole and decently clean, but his dark red sweater hung loosely on his gaunt body; his face, thin and blue-white, was desperate, bitter, hopeless.

Baird had come West with those who listened to the alluring tales of city boosters and the real estate interests, to make his "fortune" in the "Land of Opportunity"—and his fortune, at this moment, consisted of a single battered copper!

For weeks he had tramped the streets with hundreds of others looking for work—when there were ten hungry men for every job. But he had not given up until the day before. Then, sitting in the free reading room of the "Men's Resort," at five o'clock in the morning, he had been roughly seized, with fifty others of the hungry unemployed, and after search at the police station had revealed the amount of the silver and gold of the fifty to be less than 75 cents, the "empty" ones were ordered to leave the city under penalty of a lengthy rock-pile sentence.

Stung to the depths of his sensitive soul by the injustice—crazy with the hunger pains in his stomach, Baird resolved, and as a result of his resolution he was waiting outside this silent house.

At two o'clock he fell into a light doze. Presently his own yearning cry: "Wait, Mamie! Wait for me!" awakened him. He laughed under his breath at the absurdity of the words. He had said words like that back there in South Carolina, two years ago, when his heart was breaking, and he had told Mamie Thorn good-by, just before her wedding to reckless Bob Givens.

Her Eyes Fell on Baird.

Old Hugh Tharp and Arethusa, his wife, were worldly wise; Bob was an only child, and his parents were rich. Baird had had nothing but the wages of a clerk in a hardware store to offer her, but Mamie had thought that enough until her parents had taught her better.

"I can't quit loving you, Mamie," Baird had said to her, "even though you are going to marry somebody else. I'm going away, but if you are ever in trouble or need, I will come to you. Be sure you call me, Mamie!" And in his dream, Mamie, with a white, stricken face, had held out her arms to him, for help—to him, a thing unable to keep himself in food!

Well, he'd have a full meal once more anyway, and he'd take enough of these prosperous people's stuff to take him out of the city, and—

Cautiously he swung himself through the open window. In the light of his lantern, he saw in the dining room, next the kitchen, a mahogany sideboard, covered with silver articles. He reached out his hand toward a pile of spoons, then dropped it as suddenly.

"I can't do it!" he murmured. "God—I can't do it!"

As he turned, there fell on his ears the heavy, distressed breathing of a child. Then a woman came running out of an adjoining bedroom and turned on the lights.

"Oh, my baby!" she was moaning. "I don't know what to do for him, and I'm afraid he'll die if I leave him! Oh, Jimmy—Jimmy! Jimmy!"

Her voice rose in the entreating wail of one who unconsciously calls in dire need, for one she knows is beyond reach. Then her eyes fell on Baird. She caught at his unexplained presence in desperate eagerness.

"Oh, sir—help us! My baby's dying! My maids and chauffeur are at a dance and my telephone won't work!"

Youthful remembrances of his mother and her remedies flashed over Baird. He called for articles from the medicine shelves and forced a mixture down the boy's throat, then worked over the child (a little four-year-old, with a crooked back) until the rasping breaths ceased and he slept, breathing easily and naturally.

When the child was out of danger the woman brought her purse and somewhat tremulously handed Baird a gold coin.

Flushing, he laid it in one of the little sleeper's hands.

"No," he said; "I've no work—I'm starving—I haven't eaten in two days. I came in the house to rob you, but I don't want pay for saving your boy's life! If you'll show me the door, I'll go!"

For the first time she saw him clearly. She caught her breath and the air quivered with her wondering cry:

"Oh, Jimmy! Jimmy! Jimmy!"

Baird looked at her in astonishment. There were splotches of white on her black hair; there were lines of weariness in her young face.

"Mamie!" he cried. "I—where is Bob?"

"Bob is dead," she answered him. "He was killed in a railroad wreck before the baby was born. They are all dead—father, mother and Bob's father and mother."

"I—I am sorry—" he groped for words. "I didn't know where you were living. Poor Bob!"

"After Bob got tired of me, and that was very soon," she told him in a strange, hard voice, "he used to strike me. He knocked me down the day before he was killed. That's the reason my baby is a hunchback."

The red leaped in Baird's white cheeks. "The brute! The damned brute!" broke from him. Then his head dropped in his hands. "And I," he murmured, ashamed and contrite, "I who would have died to save you trouble—I tried to steal from you! I—I'll go now, Mamie, and after this I pray God you'll get better treatment from those that profess to love you!"

He took an unsteady step toward the door, then reeled and fell. When he opened his eyes again, the young woman brought a cup of hot milk, and held it to his lips, then fed him spoonfuls of egg, as one feeds a baby.

After a little he raised himself and stood erect. "Let me go now, Mamie," he said. "I am all right now, and tomorrow I'll try again for work."

But she stood in his path, flushing and trembling.

"Don't go, Jimmy! I'm afraid to go on staying by myself—stay with me!"

Baird whitened and turned his face away from her.

"Maybe you don't like me like you used to, Jimmy!" Her words were low and wistful.

"You know I love you, Mamie, and always shall," he murmured, "but I'm no good—worse than a failure. You ought to have me sent to the police station."

"Hush," she whispered, kissing him. "In the morning—today, Jimmy—I'll go with you to the parsonage!"

First Mate of the Nancy Ellen

By FREDERICK HART

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Out past One Tree Point, out past the Barren shoals, out past the Narcross Light sped the Nancy Ellen, skimming the spray from the white-capped waves. In the stern crouched a laughing girl, her head thrown back, her slim hands braced against the tiller.

"I suppose this is our last sail together," she said. "With the Barnstable house opening tomorrow your time will be filled with fishing and sailing parties."

"Well, I hope so," said Jim, his eyes on the far horizon. "I shall need all I can get to put with whatever the old tub sells for to give me a start next fall in the city. Dad won't help me at all," he added bitterly.

"Perhaps your father thinks your opportunity lies here," suggested Mary gently. "He is getting old and the store will soon be too much for him."

"I know," said Jim impatiently, "but he can always sell out."

Mary said no more, convinced of the futility of argument. Why wouldn't Jim see that here in his old home town lay his biggest chance of success?

For miles around W. Newton & Son held the trade in groceries, hardware and dry goods, and rapidly growing trade it was, what with the yearly increasing influx of summer people who crowded the hotels and boarding houses and cottages. This business to which Jim now contributed part of the name and a few hours every morning, would eventually become entirely his. Let him combine some youthful energy with his father's reputation and there was a gold mine in it for him. But according to Jim the Goddess Success had her temple only in the city.

If, when the sail was over, Mary sighed as she helped him fasten the canvas covers, it was partly with regret for happy days gone by, partly with apprehension as to what the future held in store.

Three weeks later, as Mary walked down North Barnstable's winding, elm-shaded Main street to the post office, Jim's father, fussing over a window display of canned cheeses, beckoned to her from the store.

"Mary," he said, after she had followed him into the store, "I want you to do something for me. Young Whitlock, at the Barnstable house, is pestering me to death to sell out to him—at a price not half what the business is worth. But I'm tempted to take him up. It's more than I can manage alone and Jim is planning to get out in the fall. But if I thought Jim was putting him up to it, I'd stick it out till I pass in my checks. I won't be bulldozed by Jim."

"How can I help you?" asked Mary as the other paused.

"This way," replied the man eagerly. "Find out, if you can, what Jim knows about it. I haven't mentioned it to him. If it's his doings, I'll have nothing to do with it. But if he doesn't know about it, I'll try and jack up the other fellow's offer a little, and close the deal."

"I'll do what I can, Mr. Newton," Mary agreed and a moment later left the store. She did not relish the commission. It meant arranging a meeting with Jim, and she had not seen Jim since the opening of the hotel. That he had gone to several of the hops with Cynthia Whitlock she had gathered from very reliable information, its source being none other than Cynthia's brother, Bert Whitlock, who was trying to buy Jim's father's store.

And it was through that very same young man that Mary's first opportunity to see Jim came, when he invited her to go sailing with his sister Cynthia and himself on the Nancy Ellen.

On the afternoon of the sailing party, as they stepped aboard the sloop from the tender, Mary noticed with a queer little pang that Cynthia went straight to the helm. That had always been Mary's place, and so many times had she steered that Jim often told her she knew the channel better than he did, and called her the Nancy Ellen's "first mate." Evidently she had lost her job.

It was on the return sail that Jim said:

"I envy you, Whitlock; born and brought up in the city—that's where opportunity lies."

"Not always," returned the other pleasantly. "I have found a very good opportunity located elsewhere than in the city. It isn't mine yet. I'm still negotiating—but if I get it—well, I'm satisfied. I supposed you knew it. I want to buy your father's—"

"The shoals! The shoals!" cried Mary wildly.

Jim leaped for the helm. But before he could grasp the tiller from Cynthia's hands the Nancy Ellen struck, paused, shivered from bow to stern, then slid onto the outer edge of the Barren shoals. Half turned over, she was transformed in an instant from a responsive, buoyant creature riding the waves to a thing inert, the plaything of the swells which broke over her.

Fortunately the day was fair and the wind off shore. Otherwise she would not have lasted until the keepers of the Narcross light, who had witnessed the wreck, could launch their motorboat and hasten to the rescue. With some difficulty the drenched girls were taken aboard. The men stayed to manipulate the ropes with which the craft was eventually hauled off.

That night Mary, a bit shaken up and weak, sat in the couch hammock on her little veranda, bathed in the fragrance of honeysuckle. How strong Jim's arms had felt about her, the second after they struck! But had his action meant anything, or had it been involuntary, the result of a strange impulse at the moment of possible death? She wanted to extract from it the ultimate drop of consolation, for now that she could report to Jim's father her conviction that Jim was in no way responsible for the offer for the business, Jim's father would sell out and Jim would go to the city.

Some one was coming in the gate. Bert Whitlock, to see if she had gotten over the effects of her near drowning? No—it was Jim! Quickly he swung up the walk and veranda steps over to the hammock beside Mary's slim white figure.

"Mary," he began without preamble, "are you and Whitlock—"

"No," said Mary sweetly, "we're not. That is, Bert wants to be—oh, not me! A girl in the city."

"Thank heaven!" breathed Jim. "I was afraid the fact he was after dad's business meant that he had some ulterior motive for settling down here. And if he hasn't any such reason, he must be sincere in thinking it's a good business proposition. But, by Jupiter, he won't get it! I guess what's good enough for a city man whose father owns a whole chain of stores so that he knows what he's talking about, is good enough for me. Particularly when—why, Mary, are you as glad as all that?"

For Mary's face, lifted up to him in the white moonlight, was shining with happiness. "Yes, Jim, I am," she said. "And your father—what it will mean to him!"

Jim reached down and drew her up into his arms. "Sweetheart," he whispered against her hair, "this afternoon when we hit the reef—I knew then what you were to me. Do you care a little?"

And that Mary remained where she was, was answer enough. After a moment she raised her head. "Can I be first mate of the Nancy Ellen for keeps?" she asked.

Jim nodded solemnly. "And the captain, too," he promised.

Buy Diamonds from an Expert

As diamonds are the most valuable of all articles to buy, so they are the most difficult. No one but an expert can accurately gauge the value of two stones which to the layman look exactly alike. There may be a difference of hundreds of dollars in their value.

In buying diamonds at this store, you have the satisfaction of knowing that your money is wisely invested. Our knowledge of diamonds, our experience in buying and selling them, makes us thoroughly well qualified to judge them correctly. And the standing of the store is in itself a guarantee that your purchase has been well made.

As with diamonds, so it is with all other jewelry bought here. Its value is unquestioned. You know, and the recipient knows, that it is exactly what it is represented to be.

ADDITION TO NATIONAL MENU

Interesting Exhibit at Washington of Plant Foods That May Be Grown for the Table.

An interesting exhibit of fruits and vegetables was prepared by the office of foreign seed and plant introduction of the United States department of agriculture for the benefit of the agricultural editors who recently met in Washington.

Ranged upon the tables were specimens of cassava root, dasheen tubers, udo shoots, passion fruit, white sapote fruit, chayotes, and last, and best of all, a collection of highly colored and extremely fragrant mango fruits.

All the vegetables and fruits were fresh and all were grown in the United States at government stations.

The culture of some of the vegetables and fruits represented at the exhibition is limited by climatic conditions to our southern states, but this feature will not bar them from the northern and western markets. The exhibition in this respect gave some idea of the increased range given to the American bill of fare by the introduction of these plants for commercial purposes.

The udo, a celerylike shoot of a Japanese vegetable, is not limited by climate and is now being grown successfully as far north as Nova Scotia. It is a salad vegetable of particularly pleasing taste and texture—something quite strange to the American palate.

The value of the exhibit is in the fact that each of its members has passed beyond the experimental stage of culture and may be regarded as an accepted agricultural resource.

Notice — All news and advertising copy for The Record must be in the office by Wednesday noon of each week.

CUBA A "MAN'S" COUNTRY

Fair Sex Has Not Won Emancipation, to Any Marked Degree, on Gem of the Antilles.

Cuba, like all Latin-American countries, especially of the tropics, is essentially a man's country. One of the great surprises of Havana is the scarcity of women on the streets, even at times when they swarm with promenading men. The Cuban believes as firmly as the old Spaniard that the woman's sphere is strictly behind the grill of the front window, and with few exceptions the women agree with him. The result is that her interest in life beyond her own household is virtually nil. The woman's suffrage party of Cuba recently issued a pompous manifesto, but it seems to have won about as much support on the island as would a missionary of the prohibition movement. In the words of the militants of the sex in Anglo-Saxon lands, "the Cuban woman has not yet reached emancipation."

The clerks, even in shops that deal only in female apparel, are almost exclusively male. The offices that employ stenographers or assistants from the ranks of the fair sex are rare, and these usually recruit such help in the States. Except on gala occasions it is extremely seldom that a Cuban girl of the better class is seen in public, and even then only in company of her duenna or a male member of her immediate family, and few married women consider it proper to appear unaccompanied by their husbands, despite American example. Yet of open offense against her modesty the Cuban lady is freer than on the streets of our own large cities. Even in restaurants and gatherings, where those of the land never appear, an American woman is treated, except in the matter of staring, with genuine courtesy by all classes.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

DEVICE GRIPS SUNKEN SHIPS

Latest Salvage Machine Is Declared Superior to Any Other That Has Yet Been Devised.

There has recently been patented a device for raising sunken ships which bids fair to be highly effectual. The principle underlying the invention is the firing into the vessel of a novel form of grip. This, after penetrating the hull, automatically opens out two extending arms, which firmly grasp the plates.

The grips are discharged from a special gun by means of compressed air, says the Nautical Magazine. After being loaded on the surface, the gun is submerged to the level of the vessel, and is then fired by electricity, magnetic power being employed to keep the muzzle of the gun pointing toward the vessel.

The gun can be raised to the surface again and reloaded as often as is necessary. When a sufficient number of grips have been placed in position, the vessel, if it is not at too great a depth, can be refloated by means of cables attached to them. If, however, the water is too deep to permit of this, specially constructed cylinders are slid down the cables, and compressed air is pumped into them until they are buoyant enough to raise the vessel.

Thought It Only Half a Gift.

Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch, Democratic nominee for governor, in one of his campaign speeches, recalled a trip he made to Greenfield with James Whitcomb Riley after the children of that city had bought a loving cup for the great Hoosier poet. He and Mr. Riley were sitting in an automobile and they heard a little girl nearby talking to her mother about the present.

"I think they might just as well have given him a saucer with the cup," the child said.—Indianapolis News.

The Hilltop Public Schools

The opening of the fall term of school on the Hilltop brings forth a larger attendance than usual and both schools present a very crowded condition, which is more convincing than ever that the new school building at Sullivant and Burgess is greatly needed. The foundation is under way for this new building, which will be 200 feet long and will contain 16 rooms.

Miss Weight, Sewing.
Mr. Westall, Manual Training.

Mr. Ferguson, Physical Work with boys of grades Fourth, Fifth and Sixth, on Thursday.

Miss Florence Jones and Miss Charlotte Hook, former teachers are out on leave of absence for a year.

Mr. Bostic and Mr. Klein, the janitors are doing their share in caring for the interest of the school.

The School Gardeners will have an exhibition of their work the last of the month, at which prizes will be awarded for best exhibits.

The school is very much crowded 670 being registered at the end of the first week. Half day sessions are necessary in Second B and Third B grades. The school was opened September 19, 1911, with 252 pupils and six teachers. Now every available space is used, one large class is in the basement as are the Spanish classes, the teachers' room is used, and at times classes are held in the halls.

It is hoped that the Community meetings may be held regularly this year, and that the parents and friends may continue the interest they showed last year.

Alice May Umbaugh, 38, daughter of the late J. W. Umbaugh, former residents of S. Warren Ave., passed away at the St. Clair Hospital Sunday morning after several weeks' illness. Funeral services Tuesday at 10 A. M. Burial in Union Cemetery. The deceased wag a niece of Mrs. L. W. Muncie, 109 N. Warren Ave.

Mrs. Laura Flum, 50, wife of Mr. J. A. Flum, died at her home, 58 S. Warren Ave., on Thursday, September 9th, after several months' illness of Bright's disease. She and her husband had resided on the Hilltop for about 13 years, during which time she had won many friends who had learned to love her, and who found her a true friend. She leaves beside her husband, one brother and one sister.

The funeral services were held on Monday, Sept. 13th, at St. Aloysius Church. Burial took place at Pickerington, O., her old hame place.

The regular business meeting of the Intermediate Society of St. Paul's United Evangelical church will be held at the home of Miss Mabel Dunn, 23 S. Terrace Ave., Friday evening, September 17th. All members are urged to be present. Come and bring your friends.

WOMAN'S VOTE

Our beloved stateswoman Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, leader of 2,000,000 suffragists, was received in triumphant glory at the Pennsylvania Station, New York City, by the Governor, Alfred E. Smith, on her return from Nashville. An immense throng cheered when a bouquet of blue delphiniums and yellow chrysanthemums, tied with a yellow ribbon, was presented to her from the grateful women of our nation. The 71st Regiment Band played "Lo, the Conquering Hero Comes," and all stood at attention to hear the National Anthem.

The Joy Bells are still ringing over our wonderful victory which came August 18, with the ratification by the Tennessee legislature of the Susan B. Anthony Amendment, giving us the 36th State, or three fourths of the States of the Union, the number necessary to make the 19th amendment a part of the Constitution of the United States.

Now that we have the vote let us practice the dignity of sovereigns and as an act of first importance, go to the proper voting place and register—this is absolutely necessary to exercise our right as voters, Nov. 2nd The days for this preparatory registration are September 30th, October 7th, October 15th and 16th.

In the meantime attend a citizenship school and become familiar with the ballots which will be handed to us by the election officials, with the names of the candidates for whom we wish to vote, their position on the ballots and the proper way to mark the national ticket, the state ticket and the judiciary ballot, so that we may vote effectively. The right to vote implies the duty to vote intelligently and this great addition of 27,000,000 women will benefit the nation because their view will be [illegible] or expediency. They will not follow their grandfathers or their fathers, but will aim high, keeping in mind the greatest good to the greatest number. They will welcome assistance from their experienced men relatives but in the privacy of the little booth they will endeavor to express an honest individual opinion of men and measures, which is the highest form of patriotism.

And as a result of the sincere desire of women to be helpful in solving the momentous questions of today, involving every phase of human welfare, they will learn to be more charitable less censorious. A close [illegible] ance with their sisters will [illegible] true and beautiful [illegible] radeship will become a reality and this broader outlook will make the world more interesting and life exceedingly worth while.

As a great world power, the United States cannot afford to pursue the [illegible] ish policy of isolation and remain indifferent to the rest of the world. We are really trustees of our common civilization and the women will [illegible] it prevailing to use their power for peace, education and the enactment of laws giving exact and equal justice to everyone living under the Stars and Stripes.

BILL'S IN TROUBLE

I've got a letter, parson, from my son away out West,
An' my ol' heart is heavy as an anvil
in my breast.
To think the boy whose future I had once so proudly planned
Should wander from the path o' right an' come to sich an end!

I told him when he left us, only three short years ago,
He'd find himself a plowin' in a mighty crooked row—
He'd miss his father's counsel, an' his mother's prayers, too,
But he said the farm was hateful, an'
he guessed he'd have to go.

I know thar's big temptations for a youngster in the West,
But I believed our Billy had the courage to resist;
An' when he left I warned him o' the ever-waiting snares,
That be like hidden sarpents in life's pathway everywheres.

But Bill he promised faithful to be keerful, an' allowed He'd build a reputation that'd make us mighty proud;
But it seems as if my counsel sort o'
faded from his mind,
And now my boy's in trouble of the very wurstest kind.

His letters come so seldom that I somehow sort o' know'd
That Billy was a-trampin' on a mighty rocky road,
But never once imagined he would bow my head in shame
An' in the dust'd waller his ol' daddy's honored name.

He writes from out in Denver, an' the story's mighty short,
I just can't tell his mother, it'd break
her poor ol' heart;
An' so I reckoned, parson, you might break the news to her—
... in the legislature; but he doesn't say what fur.

... name of the author of the poem is not known. However, recent publicity on the subject is more truth than poetry in ... last line. Truly, we don't know ... he's in for neither.

HOME

The price of a good woman's perfect love is APPRECIATION—AFFECTION—SYMPATHY—and a HOME. A home of her own in which these virtues may be proudly and happily expressed. Happy is the man who knows these vital principles of love and life and early makes the sacrifice necessary to realize his highest ambitions to own a home.

We are repared to assist you with plans and can offer you many suggestions that may help you on the way to home ownership. Call us up or come out to our office and let us talk this matter over.

Fisherman's Luck

By KATE EDMONDS

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The cottage basked in the warm sun, the sea was a golden glimmer of lights winking, blinking, the waves came creaming in on the sand to break in lace-like foam and draw back again to come rushing in once more. Seagulls dipped and careened against the fresh wind or floated in the water like painted toys.

Roger stretched himself luxuriously and left the hammock to sit on the steps. His mother had advertised for a cook, and she had asked him to keep watch and to hire the very first promising applicant.

"They all promise," yawned Roger.

Mrs. Latimer never worried. She was perennially young looking and optimistic to the ninth degree. "I feel it in my bones she will be a love of a cook. Remember the last one, Roger? Old Chloe?"

"M-mmmm!" purred Roger, reminiscent of fried chicken and waffles — and the fickle Chloe.

"Well, I felt just that way about Chloe." She laughed as the car bore her away.

So Roger waited patiently, dutifully, but not one applicant appeared in answer to his mother's advertisement or to their agonized telephone messages to the employment bureaus in the city.

"It is too late, now," he told himself as he strolled down to the beach. "The last train was in an hour ago."

The beach was deserted save for a girl who sat patiently upon a rock holding a fishing-line.

"What is she catching?" he asked as he went up to her, and he repeated the question when he reached the rock.

"Nothing," she answered.

"Why try here—you'd have to go out in a boat to catch anything. You might dig some clams—if you are determined to have something," he suggested.

"What Is She Catching?"

"Thanks, I will try. How do you catch them?" she inquired hopefully.

He helped her down from the rock and regarded her with approval. She wore a blue cotton dress and a sailor hat and rather shabby shoes, and she was delightful to look at.

"Dig for them—but it is messy—must you have them now?"

She smiled and nodded. "I'm camping—I want them for my supper."

"Not alone?"

"Yes," her defiance was near to tears. "I worked in a store in town. I haven't been strong—the doctor said to go away to the shore—I just boarded, you know—and—well—I lost my job this morning and so I came down here. I'm going to work in the hotel as waitress tomorrow—isn't it beautiful here?" she breathed deeply of the salt tonic-laden air.

"Where will you sleep?" he asked.

She nodded toward the rocks. "The driest cave there—I have a suitcase—"

"At high tide you would be drowned—I am Roger Latimer—I would like to have you meet my mother—can you cook?"

—"Yes, My mother kept boarders years ago before she died—I used to help."

"My mother is looking for a cook—good wages, comfortable home and this—" sweeping his arm around sea and sky.

"If I could only do it!"

"Try," he urged. "We are starving—May I carry your bag, Miss—?"

"My name is Mary Wood—if I am to be a cook, you must call me Mary," she said independently.

Roger led her into the kitchen and showed her where chaos reigned. "It's the way they left it," he said plaintively.

"Never mind, I'll clean up for my supper, anyway, and if your mother doesn't want me to remain, that will help," she said brightly as she put on an apron and went to work.

Mrs. Latimer came home an hour later. Her delicate nose was lifted. "Fried chicken," she breathed rapturously. "Chloe has come back. My bones never failed me yet!"

She found her way to the kitchen, catching a glimpse of the cool dining room windows open to the sea. The table daintily laid, with a cut-glass bowl of flaming nasturtiums in the center.

"Well!" she exclaimed, closing the kitchen door and peering through a thin blue haze of smoke at the pink face of the young cook. "I am glad to see some one here—Mary!" she screamed.

"Yes'm, that's my name," laughed the girl as she piled a dish with snowy mashed potatoes. "Do you like gravy with fried chicken, ma'm?"

"Where did you come from?" demanded Mrs. Latimer.

"Town. Lost my way from the station here—no taxi—walked along beach—tried fishing from a rock to amuse myself—along came a young man asking curious questions—so I made up an interesting tale—and when he found out I could cook he looked hungrily at me and brought me here."

"To cook your own dinner!" wailed Mrs. Latimer tragically. "Where is that idiotic Roger?"

"I sent him to the confectioner's for ice cream for dessert—I believe he's coming now—dinner's ready as soon as I change my dress—please put the ice cream in the refrigerator and break the news to him, dear Mrs. Latimer!" and Mary Wood, house guest of Mrs. Latimer disappeared up the back stair as Roger came into the kitchen door.

Mary Wood faced a very pink and embarrassed young man across the dinner table. "He never even asked for a reference," she said plaintively. "I might have stolen all the spoons," she reproached him, but her eyes were dancing.

"I thought you were fishing for a job," he said frankly, "and I felt a pretty lucky fisherman to land you!"

"I shall cook for you both until you find a thoroughly satisfactory handmaiden," declared Mary.

"I shall never hunt another one," decided Roger, and they all laughed, but there was a queer little smile of satisfaction on Mrs. Latimer's face.

"It will be hard to explain," she said to Roger one day when love was hovering all about and the young people were deliciously and uncertainly certain about each other.

"Explain?" he repeated.

"About Mary being our cook. Her father is a rich man."

"Pooh!" scoffed Mary, biting into a delicious doughnut she had fried that morning.

Roger reddened under his healthy tan. "Suppose I tell folks that cooks were scarce and so—my wife came to the rescue."

"Oh!" cried blushing Mary.

"Ah," smiled Mrs. Latimer, slipping into the house.

"Fisherman's luck," whispered Roger as he kissed the cook of the golden doughnut.

Japan's Seaweed Pulp Industry.

That the manufacture of paper pulp from seaweed is proving a profitable undertaking seems evidenced by the fact, reported by Consul General George H. Scidmore, that the only company manufacturing this pulp is building another factory. This concern was organized in December, 1919, and is producing by a secret process, about 50 tons of pulp daily, which is largely used in the composition of cigarette paper. The new plant when completed will have a daily capacity of 150 tons of pulp. The present price is about five cents a pound.—Scientific American.

FOR SCIENTISTS TO PUZZLE

Age-Old Question As to the Development of Man and Animals From the Beginning.

The Wapiti, or American elk, was widely distributed over North America 500 years ago. But the northern limit of its natural habitat appears to have been, and still is, in southern British Columbia.

Leaving this borderland of wapitiland and traveling northward to Behring sea no other trace is found. In northern Siberia, Manchuria and Mongolia there is no trace of the species, or any variations of it, but in far western Mongolia and along the borders of Turkestan and Sungaria, it occurs again in the Altai mountains. The elk as if he might have been transported from Montana, the only perceptible difference being a more reddish coloring of the coat of the Altai elk.

The gap of 7,000 miles contains no trace of the living animal and so far as is known, no bones.

This has again raised the question among men of science whether man and the animals spread from some common center, or whether there were separate developments of creation in each continental division of the earth.

Women to be Given Lessons in Civics

The program for the six free lessons in civics for new women voters of Columbus, planned by the Franklin County League of Women Voters, with the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, was announced Saturday. The citizenship school is to be held in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium Sept. 23, 24, 28, 29 and 30 and Oct. 1, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. The same lesson is to be given the afternoon and evening of each day, for the convenience of those who wish to attend.

The first one on Thursday, Sept. 23, will be on "Citizenship—Qualifications for Voting and Registration," by Velorus Marts, principal of Avondale Intermediate school, "County Government; Functions of the County in Ohio County Officers and Their Duties," will also be discussed in this lesson.

On Friday, Sept. 24, Prof. Alonzo H. Tuttle of the law college, Ohio State university, will discuss "The State Legislature," and John Cassidy, from the office of the state tax commission, will speak on "Our State Taxation Problem."

Other lessons will be as follows: Tuesday, Sept. 28, "The State Executive Department," Prof. Clarence D. Laylin, law college, Ohio State university, and "The Courts of Ohio," Mrs. Dora Sandoe Bachman; Wednesday, Sept. 29, "The Congress of the United States," Prof. George W. Rightmire, law college, Ohio State university; Thursday, Sept. 30, "The National Executive; How the President Is Elected; His Relation to Congress, His Powers and Duties," Dr. George Wells Knight, Ohio State university; Friday, Oct. 1, "How to Use Ballots: a Practical Demonstration, Using Sample Ballots," Velorus Marts.

The Franklin County League of Women Voters urges every woman to join. Purposes:

To train women for citizenship.

To give nonpartisan information on local and national issues.

To support improved legislation.

To get law enforcement.

To the Franklin County League of Women Voters (nonpartisan), 335 Chamber of Commerce, Columbus, Ohio.

NEW VOTING PRECINCTS IN THE ELEVENTH WARD

Three new voting precincts have been added to the 11th Ward, all on the Hilltop. The new precincts, with boundaries and voting places, are as follows: Precinct U, bounded on the north by south side of W. Broad St., on the east by the west side of South Terrace St., on the south by the north side of Palmetto, and on the west by east side of S. Ogden. Voting place, corner W. Broad and S. Burgess.

Precinct V, bounded on the north by south side of Palmetto, on the east by west side of Eureka Ave., on the south by the north side of Fremont, and on the west by the east side of Powell Ave. Voting place on Palmetto between S. Ogden and S. Warren.

Precinct W, bounded on the north by south side of Fairfield Alley, on the east by west side of Whitethorne Ave., on the south by a line 200 feet south of Sullivant Ave., and on the west by east side of Highland Ave. Voting place, corner Clarendon and Day avenues.

If voters will remember these boundaries they will have no difficulty in finding their respective voting places. Registration days, Sept. 30, Oct. 7-15-16. Everybody must register in order to vote at the November election.
Henry K. Wirts, Committeeman.

The Hilltop Record beats all records in quick returns for getting what one advertises. Last week three different things were offered for sale and the paper had not much sooner reached some of the homes than by phone all these things advertised were sold and many were disappointed in being a few hours late. Surely this paper must be eagerly sought and read and have a wide circulation.

FATE'S JOKE ON THE CRITIC

Woman Henceforth Will Be Slower to Find Fault With the Way Other Folks Dress.

A woman living on the upper East side of New York was being escorted through West Forty-ninth street on a recent evening on her way to her favorite moving picture house in Broadway. To her escort she remarked:

"Do look at the skirt on the woman just ahead of us. It is not hung right. It sags on the left side and hitches up on the right side. If I couldn't put my clothes on better than that I wouldn't go out."

The speaker's disapproval was hardly voiced when she gasped, clutched at one of her hips, then at the other, then whispered tragically to her escort:

"Mercy, some of my clothing is unfastened. It's coming down right here in the street. Dear me, what shall I do? Isn't there a hotel near? I can't hold it up."

The escort steered her into a handy restaurant and she hastened inside, emerging in a little while looking greatly relieved. As the two took up their walk toward the theater the woman said contritely:

"Guess I won't be so pert again about criticizing other women's clothing and the way it's put on."

The Crego Guild S. S. class of Glenwood held their annual reunion at the home of the teacher emeritus, Mrs. Ella Eakin, Sept. 16th. The day was ideal, all nature, everything and everybody seemingly at their best. The pastor, Rev. Bowman, Mr. J. Jordan, Mr. E. Sissin, Mrs. Mary Walton, Mrs. Ray Watts, Mrs. Budd and Mrs. Gates furnished the machines and acted as 'chauffeurs, taking the entire class to and from Mrs. Eakin's delightful country home on Eakin Road.

Mrs. Eakin and Mrs. Hamilton, her daughter, furnished a bountiful supply of fat chickens, sweet country butter and other good eats, which added to delicious home-made bread, cake, pies, etc., prepared by such excellent cooks as Mrs. E. Gould, Mrs. R. Hughes, Mrs. D. J. Marshall, Mrs. G. W. Purdum and Mrs. Mary Daugherty, made a rich feast to which all did full justice. A warm vote of thanks is hereby extended to all of these. Your kindness was deeply appreciated. Twenty-six members of the class and twenty-seven guests (53 in all) fully enjoyed the delightful occasion.

There were warm greetings among friends, old time hymns were sung, a helpful Bible lesson and words of encouragement by Rev. Bowman.

At Mrs. Eakin's request the little poem, "Smiles," was read from a little book presented her by Mrs. Stottlemeier.

Little Caroline Sisson sang and whistled "Brighten the Corner." She did herself credit—the sweet little tot.

Pleasant memories of the day will long linger.

Please make your own pledge, signing the enclosed card and placing it in the plate the first Sunday. Also use the little reimbursement envelope which is self explanatory.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. G. R. Robbins will preach Sunday morning on this theme, "What Must I Personally Do to Be Saved." Evening: "The Dynamic Power of the Holy Ghost." Great blessings come to those attending this church. Another man whose case seemed hopeless was healed in answer to prayer. Last Sunday morning the pastor stated that a new lighting system must be installed soon and then prayed that the Lord would put it into the heart of some one present to give the money for the latest improved indirect lights and in less than two hours the pastor was informed by phone by one of his new families they would furnish in cash the money. I like this better than ice cream and cake and oyster stews.

The Kiss That Didn't Count

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Hartley Stevens lounged in the morris chair by the open window, thinking deep thoughts. Dared he ask Ellen Gray to marry him? Would she say, "Yes," if he did?

Meeting her at his sister's graduation, he had been straightway captivated by her girlish charm, and when his sister suggested that Ellen visit them in the late summer, Hartley was an enthusiastic indorser of the plan.

Now the visit, so long anticipated, was nearly over. He could not feel that Ellen had definitely encouraged him, and yet— There were the girls now! Through the window he watched them crossing the lawn, his jolly sister, Josie, and Ellen, the girl of his dreams.

The girls, unaware of Hartley's proximity, sank down on the steps of the veranda. Hartley, for the moment, was content to delay joining them while he reveled in the picture Ellen made as she leaned against the clematis draped pillar, fanning herself with her floppy, broad-brimmed hat.

"—and then he stalked into the crowded hall and picked her up and carried her off in his arms. Oh, it was wonderful!" Hartley deduced that Josie was launched on a version of some recent screen success.

Ellen sighed. "Do you know, Jo—those must have been glorious times, in the days of cave men and—oh, Lochinvars and all. So much easier to have a man make up his mind you were going to marry him and that was the end of it."

"I'll say so," agreed Josie, and the conversation trickled on into further film reminiscences, but Hartley heard them not. He had received his cue from the unconscious Ellen herself. She wanted cave man stuff. So be it! He arose, thrilled and determined. At the very first opportunity he would prove himself a cave man, Lochinvar and William Hart rolled into one.

To a man awaiting the nice conjunction of time, place, and girl, the hours passed on leaden wings. Young people from the neighboring cottages came in for the evening, and the great moment, when at last it came, came unexpectedly. The girls had said good-night, leaving Hartley locking up doors and windows and putting out the lights. Just as he pulled the chain of the living-room light he heard Ellen, from halfway up the stairs, say, "Wait a minute, Jo, till I get my book. It's on the window seat in the living room."

"You Are the Most Wonderful Girl in the World."

The next instant came a sound of footsteps on the stairs. Then past Hartley slipped a slim, white form. Summoning his resolution, he reached out and gathered it to him, tipped up her chin, and found her lips.

Next on his schedule had been the brave words, "You're going to marry me," but so overwhelmed was he by what followed that he never uttered them. Two soft arms stole about his neck, fragrant hair brushed his cheeks, and a little giggle issued from his shoulder. Then she was gone.

Hartley, although a bit amazed at the swift surrender, was triumphant. All that was left now was to buy the ring, name the day, and look up fares to Bermuda.

Next morning, in a fit of desperate impatience to convince himself that the happening of the night before was not a glorious dream, Hartley arose betimes. He hoped that Ellen was experiencing the same palpitating eagerness as himself to follow up that wonderful kiss. But the girls sauntered down as usual, sleepy-eyed but keen for breakfast, and lingered exasperatingly over their eggs and toast in a discussion of plans for the day.

But Hartley's chance came at last. Josie slipped away to the kitchen and Ellen, book in hand, sought the cool seclusion of the couch hammock on the porch. In an instant, Hartley was beside her. Firmly he withdrew the book, tucked it behind the cushions, and seized her hand. "And when are we going to be married?" he asked.

"Married!" gasped Ellen, "What—what a sudden person you are!"

"Yes, darling, when? You know I love you. You are the most wonderful girl in the world. Make me the happiest man!"

Ellen bit her lip and looked anxiously around to see if they were alone—but she did not withdraw her hand. Josie's brother had come to seem to her as attractive and desirable as the Prince Charming of her dreams, but she had not been prepared for this sudden and abrupt declaration. "I—I don't know what to say," she murmured.

"It's up to me to do the saying," decided Hartley to himself, mindful of the words he had overheard yesterday.

Then aloud, "You are going to marry me this very fall, Ellen love!" he said determinedly. On the words, he drew her into his arms, and for a moment there was no sound other than the rustle of the morning breeze in the clematis.

"That," said Hartley, as at length he released her, "was infinitely more satisfactory than the kiss I got last night. Why—why—what?"

For Ellen had stiffened and was regarding him with a sort of frozen horror. "Of—all—things!" she said, slowly. Then vehemently, "How dare you! Let me go, Mr. Stevens!"

At that moment somebody giggled. In the doorway stood Josie. "Oh, I'm sorry. I didn't mean to overhear—but just as I got to the door I caught a little and as I turned to go I heard the rest. Hereafter, Hartley, when you kiss a girl in the dark be sure it's the right one!" Not waiting his rejoinder, Josie fled.

His sister's giggle had been strangely reminiscent to Hartley of the night before. Like a flash he realized what had happened. "Listen, Ellen," he said, desperately "I thought I heard you say you were going to the living room—well, I thought it was you—and—"

"Yes," said Ellen, "I see. Jo went for it. But I thought that girl you were with when we walked to the store—oh, I'll forgive you, but please don't do it again. It's taking chances!"

"Nonsense," said Hartley, tenderly. "I'd know the difference now!"

Which remark perhaps it was just as well Sister Josie didn't hear.

PROGRESS OF THE MACHINE

Numerous Complicated Inventions That Do Work Better Than It Can Be Done by Hand.

American inventors are designing scores of machines that automatically do work so complicated that it has heretofore been done only by hand. Some of these are remarkably efficient and clever. Current Opinion lists a few of them:

Machines that will automatically make boxes from sheets of cardboard put them together, tuck in the bottom end, place jar or bottle with circular or directions therein, and then tuck in the top, making a complete cartoned package without the touch of the human hand. Machines that will build up a carton or box, weigh and fill the same with powder or a floury substance, place cover on box, then wrap the box completely with a printed wrapper, and then place a trade mark seal on each end of the package. Machines that will label bottles (120 per minute), bottles fed from magazine and labeled automatically. Machines ironing and folding sheets, pillow cases, towels, handkerchiefs and napkins. Machines folding and labeling shoe and corset laces automatically. Machines that will assemble and wrap hard candies, rolling them into a package, producing 25,000 packages in a day. Machines that will automatically wrap cigars in paper and foil. Machines that automatically wrap sandwiches or fold paper napkins. Machines for automatically assembling and producing various kinds of buttons and for cracking all kinds of nuts.

For Your Children's Sake

You have ambitions for your children — everyone has. Ambition thrives only on real home life, and real home life demands a home of your own.

During the present period of unnatural earning and reckless spending, young people are bound to form habits and standards of living which will either make or mar their future happiness and usefulness. A home that is all yours and all theirs will become to them an inspiration for the present and a safeguard for the future.

Is YOUR home an asset or a liability? We shall be glad to talk over your problem with you, without obligation, of course.

Roman Emperor's Feasts.

Roman emperors who feasted copiously and sumptuously had no menu cards, so they often spoiled their enjoyment of a banquet by eating too much of one dish and passing over something they specially liked.

According to Montaigne, one of the Roman emperors, while ignorant of menu cards, devised an order for serving dishes which enabled him roughly to foretell what was coming next:

"Geta the emperor would have all his messes or dishes served in at his table orderly, according to the first letters of their names; for example, those that began with p, as pig, pie, pike, puddings, pouts, porks, pancakes, etc., were all served in together, and so of all the rest."—Chicago News.

The World's Champion Singer

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Jim Hennessey stood at the top of the brown-stone steps and stupidly surveyed the white panels of the green door, it began to dawn on him through his daze that wooing Maggie Walton and promoting prize fights did not harmonize.

With a ring in his pocket he had called that afternoon with an erratically thumping heart. He had been greeted coolly, however, and Maggie had seated herself on the davenport and glared at him reproachful and said accusingly:

"Jim, this is the end of things. I can't stand it any longer."

He took the newspaper which she held up and his eyes met the headline:

KALOOZO'S CONCERT IS CALLED OFF

Advance Sale of Tickets So Light Managers Couldn't Make Expenses.

"Yes, it's the end of things," Maggie continued, while tears welled in her eyes. "Since you came to town a year ago and started the fighting business Cattolane hasn't stood for respectable entertainment. We used to have a real musical artist once in a while, but your fights have cultivated the city's brutal tastes. This is the second attempt to get a grand opera celebrity here, and it's the second failure, since Cattolane developed a thirst for blood.

"Jim, I've tried to put up with it, because I cared a lot for you, but I love music and loathe fighting. So there's no use of our continuing—"

Jim made the fatal mistake of attempting reconciliation with his bankbook.

"But look, Maggie," he implored, displaying the evidence of his prosperity. "See the big wad I've laid away as a result of the fights. Why, we could get married tomorrow. Let's do it. See, I've brought the ring."

Stupidly surveyed the White Panels.

Flame flared in Maggie's black eyes. With majesty and grandeur she rose to her feet.

"Go away, Jim Hennessey. I'd rather trim hats the rest of my life than marry the richest man in the world, unless he gained his wealth by some decent method."

"But, Maggie—" he protested, holding the bankbook before her.

"Don't Maggie me!" she cried, pushing him into the hall and out on the steps. "Do something worth while before you ask me to wear a ring."

Having surveyed the panels of the green door to his satisfaction, Jim shrugged his shoulders and made his way slowly to the home of the "Daily Banner." He had practically completed negotiations for an exhibition by the world's champion heavyweight, and it was the correct thing to consult the "Banner" sporting editor.

Jim walked dejectedly up the stairs to the editorial room. The sporting editor was busy, so Jim waited, and looked abstractedly out of a window. He saw a young couple pass, arm-in-arm, chatting blithesomely, and in a vacant lot two newsboys were battering each other while an admiring throng urged them on. Jim felt sick.

The sporting editor finished his work, approached him, rubbing his hands and grinning, and asked for a cigarette.

"Well, do we get the big bout?" he inquired affably, obtaining a match from the same source.

Jim turned from the window with a vacant stare.

"Say, Bill," he asked thoughtfully, "who is the world's champion singer?"

* * * * * * *

It was about three months later that a debonair young man, who appeared

Very willingly he fell in with his mother's plans. Twenty-eight years with that woman who prided herself on "calling a spade a spade" and doing everything "open and aboveboard" had rendered him utterly unsuspicious of any subtleties or concealments on her part.

Mrs. Pettigrew herself had some anxious moments, while John spent the evening before his departure at the Scobies', and the old grandfather's clock ticked away several long hours. She was worried for fear John had committed himself to an engagement with this flyaway girl. Then she consoled herself by the thought that it had taken John's father four years to get to the point of a partial proposal, and John had known this person only a month.

The time after John left passed very quietly. The haying progressed satisfactorily, helped out by a neighbor's son called in to assist the hired man. Martha Jordan dropped in once or twice and the two women congratulated themselves on "saving John." Even when Martha brought the news that Evelyn had ended her visit unexpectedly soon (for John had neglected to mention the fact that Evelyn was leaving on Thursday), their complacency was not disturbed. They figured she had doubtless found Centerville suddenly dull without John around to flirt with.

One letter came from that youth postmarked "Taylor City"—then one stamped "Austin Junction."

"Probably run up to see his father's cousin," remarked his mother. "Very thoughtful of him."

The next letter did not mention his father's cousin, but gave the time of his return. In preparation his mother "got up" a supper fit for the gods—and even for her son. Waffles with golden sirup, feathery biscuits, jellied chicken, lemon pie with flaky, fluted crust; crispy fried potatoes—a collection of all John's favorite dishes, whether customarily served at the tea table or not. And because she felt she owed a debt she could never repay to Martha Jordan she invited her to come.

When the whistle of John's train blew for the stop at Centerville the two ladies were rocking placidly on the shady porch. Supper only awaited John's arrival. They heard the train slow down, stop, pull out. Up the hill came a man—then two women—then a boy—and last came John—and—and—"For the land sakes, Marthy, who is that with him?"

Chattering, laughing, clinging arm in arm, two people came through the gate, up the walk, up the steps.

"Mother—this is my wife—Evelyn!" cried a happy, rejuvenated John.

And, "I hope you'll like me!" said a slim, gayly dressed, sparkling young girl.

Across the red-covered supper table John explained more fully. "Evelyn lives in Austin Junction, you know. We were married there yesterday. I didn't know how much she meant to me until I went away. Then I found out and hunted her up. You know they say, 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder!'"

Later, out in the kitchen, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pettigrew permitted themselves one exchange of glances.

"We hit the wrong proverb," said Martha dolefully.

But between "that Thatcher girl" and "my son's wife" a gulf stretched.

"She seems a very nice girl," said Mrs. Pettigrew complacently. "And you know 'all's well that ends well!'"

COMFORT HIS ONLY THOUGHT

Colored Man Was Not at All Engrossed in Any Pursuit of the Finny Tribe.

It was a hot, drowsy day in July, and the heat waves swam steadily upward from cotton field and winding road. In front of a negro cabin, a man sat, clad for the season, and with a fishing pole in his hand, nodding sleepily. The line attached to the pole was dangling into a water barrel that had never raised anything more like a fish than a mosquito larva, known locally as a wiggle tail.

An acquaintance passed by mounted on a packing mule, whose dragging feet kicked up little spurts of dust. Catching sight of the somnolent fisherman, the passerby called: "Hey, Jim, what you doin' fishin' in dat ole water barrel? You know you ain't gwine catch nothin'. Jes' wastin' yo' time."

Jim peered forth from heavy-lidded eyes. "Niggah, I knows jes' as well as you does, I ain't gwine catch nothin' in dis here bar'l. What does I care if I don't catch nothin' so long as I is comf'table as I is."

The fisherman returned to his nodding, and the pacing mule ambled on down the dusty road.

That Dear Old Frying Pan

We often hear these later days of how our soldiers fared
Some fifty years ago, or more, when we much hardship shared
But what of that, we liked it then, deny it if you can.
We ate that bacon with a cheer from that dear old frying pan.

'Twas pork and beans and hard tack, too, on the march or in the camp,
And coffee from the kettle hot, while the ground beneath was damp.
And sometimes when the foe would shoot, we snatched, them and ran
And left with out a parting word with that dear old frying pan.

Some times we would forage 'round some luckless fowl 'to find
Or catch a pig or two, for fun, that had been left behind
Then we'd hurry off with all our might to build a fire we ran
To cook that meat, that juicy meat, in that dear old frying pan.

Then we'd fill our haver sacks with provisions all we could
And slung them across our shoulders while marchang after Hood
But time, alas, my friends, has but a single span.
We'd greet it with a cheer, with flap jacks in the pan.

The canteen and the haver sack, we'll not forget them no,
For they were our constant friends where ever we did go,
While on the march or picket post before the fight began.
We'd greet it with a hearty cheer, that dear old frying pan.

Now, kind friend, we'll not forget thee, no, as age comes creeping on,
For thou were ever constant, though now thy time be done,
For when we in reunion shall shake each comrade's hand,
We'll ever think, and not forget, that dear old frying pan.

Comrade Jacob Stouder.

OUR DAILY FOOD.

Here is a fruit soup that someone who is fond of such soups may desire to try:

Prune Soup.—Wash and soak one pound of prunes in three pints of cold water overnight. In the morning heat slowly and add one lemon sliced very thin, and one stick of cinnamon; cook below the simmering point until the prunes are tender but unbroken. Add water if needed, as there should be three pints when done; add three tablespoonfuls of sago, a pinch of salt and sufficient sugar to sweeten. Cook until the sago is transparent. Remove the cinnamon, add two-thirds of a cupful of orange juice, reheat and serve at once.

TOO MUCH STRAIN ON MAYOR

Dusky Official in Danger of Forgetting His Position in View of Chance for Wealth.

Sailors lounging along the rail of an American destroyer that was anchored in a small Philippine harbor were throwing pennies into the water for a crowd of dusky, naked youngsters to dive for. It was a lively scene. No sooner was a penny thrown into the water than a native boy dived and brought it to the surface. Many times a penny did not reach the bottom before a boy caught it.

On the wharf, the native mayor, surrounded by his native townsmen, was awaiting the arrival of the American naval officer to whom he was going to tender a grand reception. He watched the diving with keen interest.

A reckless sailor lad began throwing quarters and then half dollars into the water. Then some one threw overboard, one after another, a handful of big, glistening silver dollars. What a scrambling! It seemed as if every boy in the town was either in the air or in the water.

Suddenly a dusky messenger came dashing breathlessly down the wharf, and shouted to the group of sailors: "Will you lads please stop throwing those dollars? The mayor's getting nervous; he's already taken off his coat!"—Youth's Companion.

Statue Had Many Models.

Six thousand eight hundred guineas for the Hope Athene is scarcely an excessive price for one of the most beautiful statues in the world.

If we may believe Socrates—and who dare doubt him?—no one model could have stood for it, for he told Parrhasius that to produce a perfect figure the artist had recourse to many models, choosing some particular beauty from each.

Perfection in the human form was, in the view of the Greek sculptors, the rarest occurrence.—London Chronicle.

Salmon Leap Eighteen Feet.

The little Indian village of Awilgate on the Bulkley river in British Columbia is famous for its leaping salmon. Helen de Cucy Lett in Travels, tells about them. "Here over a great rock which almost blocked their way, salmon were leaping. A leap of eighteen feet is necessary," she says. Old-time packers and guides, the old Hudson's bay post, Indian dogs and burying grounds, ancient totem poles—these are at Awilgate also. All fishermen will sympathize as they read of the "large fish that we could see quite plainly as they swam toward the edge of the pool——" and these were rainbow trout! "There was an ancient bridge there once, and upon it ten squaws were made "to dance to test whether it was safe for a horse to cross while the flimsy structure swung to and fro above the boiling water."

Guiding Child's Play.

Grown people often fail to realize how children delight in their companionship. Every mother should employ care and insight as well as love for her child when she selects his occupations. Shown an eager desire to enter the child's world, he will welcome her with countless suggestions. It is the mother's privilege to modify these ideas, to make a quiet occupation more attractive than a noisy one, to offer materials that are large and easily handled when little fingers show signs of restlessness, or to direct active games when repression becomes unkind.

The Hilltop Record

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, September 30, 1920 No. 24

The Glenwood Glee club held its first meeting in the church basement Monday evening, Sept. 27, 1920. In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions which prevailed, a goodly number turned out and spent both a profitable and enjoyable evening. The Glee club was organized under the direction of Miss Lillian Born, the chairman of the music committee of the Epworth league. M. Herschel Ferguson was elected pianist of the organization. The members could not agree on a musical director and one will be chosen at a later date. The Glenwood male quartet also made its first appearance and made a great hit in the rendering of a few numbers. They have a trick or so up their sleeves that will be pulled off the night of the Halloween party at Briggsdale.

The Glee Club will meet again next week. No definite evening has as yet been announced, so please watch the "Record" for the later date.

The Hilltop Chapter of the Delta Sigma will meet Wednesday evening at the home of "Polecat Perkins" on West Broad St. This is the second meeting of this mysterious brotherhood and every members must be present. All prospective candidates must come with their sponsors to be admitted. Next meeting will be at the home of "Hardpan Hawkins," near Briggsdale. Automobiles will be waiting at the entrance to Greenlawn cemetery at 7:30. Bring dues and be prepared to meet all obligations. Secrecy is our watchword and any indiscretion on the part of any member will be punished by the agreed forfeit or expulsion will follow. Remember this in your recruiting Deltas.

By order of "Magpie Sumpkins."
chairman of Publicity committee.

One year ago, Sept. 28, Captain E. M. Parry departed this life.

The hand holding this pen trembles in its efforts to portray in terms and terse the character of so noble and good a man who was near and dear to the writer as was the subject of this notice. I feel that I should be permitted to lay one more tribute upon the alter in memory of my brother, Captain E. H. Parry. He was born and raised here, spent most of his life here. Twenty-seven years he spent in the fire department. He was willing at any time to risk his own life to save that of another.

Greater liberality of heart I never saw, and his unfailing cheerfulness and boyant spirits were a tonic and stimulant to all his friends. Little children looked forward to his visits, and were heart broken when the Master called him home. His sympathy went out to every cry of distress and both hands and purse were open at once for their relief. He loved his own with absorbing passion. In the hurry and struggle for existence we forget the inevitable until suddenly brought face to face with the grim reaper, who ——— like a thief in the night and robs us of those flowers which have shed more sunshine in our lives than all else. It is then that the thought of that last bitter hour comes like a blight on the spirit and the stern agony of the shroud and the narrow home tears the heart and soul. Tis harder still to touch for the last time the lips of the father, husband and brother in the very prime of life and know that never again will those portals smile a welcome and lisp a caress. I believe that the pure in heart see God and I feel that his faithful, tender spirit took its flight and that he saw his Savior face to face. At such times we can only turn to that all comforting one who has said come unto me all who are weary and heavy laden. We shall not see his like again. God does not often mould such clay.

His sister, Mrs. F. H. Paderas,
Beaumont, Texas.

Friday afternoon and evening of Sept. 24 an exhibit was held at West Broad Street School which consisted of garden produce, flowers and all kinds of cookery.

The vegetables were raised by the school children in their own gardens, under the supervision of Mrs. Charlotte Walton, sixth grade teacher and garden supervisor of the school.

All of the exhibits were splendid and excited much favorable comment.

Prizes were awarded on the garden exhibits by the Hilltop Improvement Association, to the following pupils: Randall Phillips, Roger Dolder, Roland Dolder, Louise Hibbs, Alice Smith, Arthur Meimerl, Robert Muncie, Helen Giffin, Ray Williams, Kenneth Bishop, Nicholas Patton, George Skipper, Hadya Hoffman, Flora Kuch, Florine Hughes and Doris Stewart.

At the evening meeting a large gathering of parents and friends were present to see the exhibits and to help in the organization of a community club, the object of which will be to aid or promote any kind of good community work.

Miss Judd, principal of the school, gave a short introductory talk. This was followed by a talk by Mr. Densmore on the value of the children's work and a talk by Rev. Shields on the value of a community organisation to the community. Rev. Shields was chosen temporary chairman after which a nominating committee was selected.

The next meeting for election of officers will be held Friday evening, Oct. 1, at West Broad St. school.

Anyone, of whatsoever denomination, creed or school, who has the interests of the Hilltop at heart, should be at this meeting.

Mrs. Harpster Lutz, formerly of the Hilltop, and soon to go as a Presbyterian missionary to Korea, will tell her "life story" at the Hope Memorial C. E. meeting, Sunday 6:30

Mrs. A. L. Riper and son, Eldon, 358 South Harris Ave., will spend the winter in Florida. They will be accompanied by W. N. Clouser. They expect to be back in about six months.

Mrs. Emma L. Stahler, 72, who died Saturday of complications at her home, 41 Midland Ave., was buried Monday afternoon in Green Lawn cemetery, following funeral services at 2 o'clock at the chapel of the Hilltop Undertaking Co., 2352 W. Broad St. She leaves one son, Arthur Raine of Columbus.

Mr. George E. Beck, 2028 Floral Ave., piano tuner for the past 10 years with Goldsmith's Music store, is now in the piano tuning business for himself. He will also be equipped to do all kinds of repair work on pianos and players. See his advertisement on page two of this paper.

NOTICE—Mr. C. J. Kohn wishes to inform the public it was not a shortage of cash that kept him from going to the Hilliards fair with Sulzberger, Cussins and their gang, but when Mrs. Kohn said, "Clifford, your reputation has always been beyond reproach," he decided he would stay on the hill.

Goodlow Porter, 13, of 128 North Park Ave., and Clarence Stith, 15, of 147 N. Park Ave., appeared in Juvenile Court Monday on a charge of having wrecked the auto of G. H. Witherspoon, Powell, after driving it away from Glenwood Park, West Broad Street.

The Porter boy was pinned down when the auto overturned, but was able to flee when bystanders lifted the machine. Police, who captured him later, say he drove the machine.

The Midland Avenue Bible Class will meet at the home of Mrs. Nelson, 73 Loraine Avenue, Wednesday evening, Oct. 6.

The City Rescue Mission on West Maple street expects to make an extra drive, Oct. 5 to 15 for the raising of funds to carry on the work of the mission for the next year. A special meeting will be held Monday night to plan teams for the same. Anyone interested is invited to be present, at the mission, 17 W. Maple St.

Church Doings

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:15. This is rally day for the Sunday school. The attendance has been steadily increasing. We want "one thousand" next Sunday. If this goal is reached it means that you must come. A good program is being prepared. Come.

Worshipful service at 10:30. Rev. Samuel Stephen will preach. The subject is "The Tender Ministries of Jesus, as to the Physical Man."

Epworth League at 6:30. Prescott Gilliland is the leader. The subject is: "Making Prohibition Effective."

Evening worship at 7:30. Sermon by the pastor. Subject, "The Tender Ministries of Jesus, as to the Soul."

On Friday evening, October 1, the classes in religious training will meet. The enrollment is still open. The books have been ordered. You are invited to enroll and take this course in teacher training.

The First Division of the Ladies' Aid Society will meet Tuesday, Oct. 5, at the home of Mrs. Lowery, 275 Eldon Ave. All the members are urged to be present.

The Fourth Division of the Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Swaney, 28 Midland Ave., Tuesday, Oct. 5, at 1 o'clock, to piece a comfort.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will be held at the church, Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. This is the time of election of officers for next year. All the members are urged to be present.

Regular meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held Monday evening at the home of Nettie and Bina Martin, 155 S. Richardson Ave.

We begin the new year's work and urge every member to be present. The Mystery Box of the August number of the Friend will be used at this meeting.

Corresponding Sec.

King's Heralds meeting will be held at the church, Friday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Oct. 1. Each member bring a friend.

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

We turn our clocks back one hour on Sunday morning.

9:30 A. M.—Sunday school. We had a record breaking attendance on last Sunday. Exceed this coming Sunday. Join the Community Bible class in this church. There will be no preaching service in the morning because the pastor, as an officer of the Synod, will be out of the city to assist in the ordination and installation of a young pastor.

7 P. M.—Preaching service. Either the pastor or Rev. W. H. Shepper of Defiance, O., president of Synod, will preach the sermon. All members are urged to be present and the public is cordially invited. Come to the Glad Hand church. You will be a stranger here but once.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30 A. M.—Morning worship and preaching by the pastor. This is the pastor's second anniversary and special services will be conducted. The subject of the sermon in the morning is "A Great Victory." It is desirous to have a great home-coming communion service at this service. Will every member please plan to attend. Especially are the officers urged to be present.

7:30 P. M.—Anniversary sermon by pastor. Subject, "A Preacher's Hobby." You will enjoy this. Mr. Knox will have the choir in fine form and they will sing at both services. Hill Crest will have the greatest choir in Columbus this year. Don't fail to hear it.

In the past two years of the present pastorate the membership has more than doubled and finances have steadily doubled, too. At the rally day last Sunday the church was crowded, 188 being present. There is a reason for this. Come and find out for yourself the quality of our welcome, the genuineness of our message and the spirituality of our atmosphere.

Prayer meeting and Juniors on Wednesday evening at 7:30.

ST. PAUL UNITED EVANGELICAL

10:30 A. M.—Topic, "Our Consecration to Missions."

7:30 P. M.—Sermon, "The Second Coming of Christ."

Choir rehearsal on Thursday evening at F. B. Ellisons, 428 South Powell Avenue.

Intermediate business meeting Friday evening.

The Caloric Pipless Furnace give you a cool basement and a warm house.

HILLTOP CHURCH OF CHRIST

Bible School will observe Promotion Day.

Morning sermon, "The Sin of the World."

Evening sermon, "God Is Light and God Is Love."

THE HOGE MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

9:15 A. M.—Bible school meets. Make good on your Rally Day start and come this Sunday and every Sunday. Mr. H. G. Deems, superintendent.

10:30 A. M.—Morning worship and sermon, "Exaltation of Christ's Church." Last sermon in the series, "Beliefs That Count." Children's sermon, "Playing the Game." The Circle glee club of Hoge Memorial church will sing.

6:30 P. M.—Meeting of Young People. Subject "Our Church Privileges and Obligations."

7:30 P. M.—Evening song and worship, with sermon on the subject, "A Modern Ruth." A sermon especially to women in their new responsibility. All those voting this fall will be interested in this. We welcome you.

Members of the Ladies' class of Hoge Memorial and their husbands and members of the Men's class and their wives are invited to a social evening at the country residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chamberlain, three miles west of Columbus, Monday night. All are asked to meet at the corner of Broad and Hague to take the interurban at that time. They promise a fine time out on the farm.

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran

Services at 10:30 and 7 o'clock (changed time). At both services the holy communion will be celebrated. Morning topic, "Why Do We of the Lutheran Church Believe the Doctrine of the Real Presence." Evening topic, "What Is Your Excuse?"

HILLTOP TENT MEETINGS

The Evangelistic campaign that is being conducted in the grey tent located at the corner of Broad and South Eureka, is attracting a most gratifying attendance, according to Rev. E. G. Roberts, the pastor of the King Ave. Nazarene Church, who has charge of the campaign. Dr. Roberts is an experienced leader of such campaigns and has called to his aid Evangelist Thomas C. Henderson and Miss Helen Prichard. Evangelist Henderson has conducted three revival campaigns on the Hilltop and is well known among the members of the various churches. The evangelist preaches each night, except Saturday, at 7:30 o'clock, and on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Miss Prichard is the soloist for the campaign. This series of meetings comes to a close next Sunday night.

Dr. G. R. Robbins, in last week's issue of the "Record," tell of how prayer quickly brought needed financial help to his church. We believe this is God's way for us, and the prayer of faith, the key that unlocks heaven's great storehouse of blessings.

Hear him saying "Ask of Me and I shall give thee the heather for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

"My God will supply all your needs according to His Riches, in glory by Christ Jesus." "Ask and it shall be given you—whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee." "Delight thyself also in the Lord, and He shall give thee the desires of thy heart." Like precious promises abound in the word, and yet many of us act as if all heaven was bankrupt, and we must needs compete with the world, adopt its program of entertainments, in order to hold the people of the church, and carry on God's work. A grave mistake. The gospel of Christ is a message of love, cheer, joy and soul victory. It meets humanity's need, satisfies, saves and keeps.

If members of our churches would pray more, cultivate the companionship of Christ, they would enrich their own lives and be a blessing to others.—A Record Reader.

The senior Christian Endeavor Society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will hold a Scouting Party, starting from the church at 7 p. m. tonight, Thursday evening, Sept. 30 After rounding up the young people assigned to the various teams they will return to the residence of the pastor, Rev. Richard E. Shields, for a social evening. Stunts and special features and some surprises await all who attend. The Society invites all young people to their regular meetings Sunday evenings, at 6:30 o'clock.

To Add Interest.

A boy had been killed on a viaduct near Galveston, Tex. The father of another boy was trying to describe the victim to his son. The child, who was much interested, tried to recall the dead youngster, but unavailingly. Returning to his father, he said, sorrowfully:

"I wish it had been Tommy Sprigg—I know him."

Caught!

By CORONA REMINGTON

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

He was plunging through the woods in his usual carefree manner when suddenly he came upon her crouched almost at his feet.

"You startled me." His voice sounded somewhat peeved.

"Nothing to the way you startled me," she flashed back.

"Do you know that it's dangerous for you to be out here this near dark?" he went on, unmoved by her nettled [illegible].

"Why?" she asked, her eyes growing big.

"Because snakes abound in this place at this time of year and you might get bitten. How can you see where you're putting your foot in all this underbrush and it nearly night?"

"I didn't know that," she answered, her face paling slightly.

"Well, now I've told you, you must go home at once. Come, I'll see you there."

"That's very nice of you, but I'm perfectly satisfied where I am," she returned coolly, making no attempt to [illegible].

"I'll stay until you change your mind," he said quietly.

"Oh, please go," she begged.

He paid no attention to her remark, but went on good-naturedly: "Guess I'd better introduce myself. We seem to be in for quite a siege of it."

"Don't, please," she said pettishly. "I don't even want to know who you are."

"All right," he smiled as he lit a cigar and dropped carelessly at her

"You Startled Me."

feet. "We'll say that I'm Mr. Man and you're Miss Sprite."

The girl was in anything but a jesting mood.

"The fact is," she said, after a while as the darkness settled around them, "I'll just have to go. My friends at the camp'll be looking for me and they'll be scared to death if I'm not in pretty soon."

"There! You're coming to your senses," he remarked with satisfaction.

The girl only answered by suddenly bursting into tears while the man looked on in amazement.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked, but she only continued to weep.

"Look here," he said at last. "For pity's sake, do stop or I'll just about go dippy. When I see a girl cry I either want to spank her or take her in my arms and soothe her, and since you're a perfect stranger to me I'm afraid to do either. You might misunderstand."

The sprite could not help laughing at this in spite of her predicament.

"Now, won't you tell me what the trouble is?" he asked gently.

"I—I guess I'll have to," she confessed. "To begin with, there's a crowd of us camping in a little tent on the Watkins place, and since we came to the country we've all gone perfectly wild.

"It was dreadfully hot this afternoon about two o'clock and we were all lying around in the shade trying to keep cool when some one said: 'I wish I had a nice luscious watermelon' and we began talking about how good it would be, and, before I knew it they had dared me to go and slip one out of somebody's field. I don't know yet what made me agree to do it, and if I had been in town I'd have died before I would have stolen a pin. But—Well, the long and short of it is that I—I'm sitting on one of your watermelons."

The man laughed until the forest [illegible].

"So you got it out of the patch on the other side of the thicket?" he [illegible].

"Yes, and I'll do anything on earth if you won't send me to jail. It would kill my father and mother and we'd all be disgraced," she pleaded.

The man seemed to debate with himself while the sprite eagerly watched him.

"Where do you live?" he asked at last.

"Kensington. 348 Watagua avenue."

"I live in Kensington, too," he went on. "You'll have to let me come and call, say, twice a week for two months. That's the only demand I make. In the meanwhile, let's take the melon to camp and I'll leave you before we get in sight; then you need never tell of your misadventure."

"You're really too lenient," the sprite smiled happily, "and I agree to the conditions absolutely and promise never, never to do it again."

When they parted at the edge of the clearing where the tent was pitched he handed her the melon and turned to go.

"By the way," he said over his shoulder, "when are you going back to town?"

"Tomorrow," she answered ruefully.

"All right. Tomorrow'll be Saturday. See you Sunday." He raised his hat and, in a second the bushes had closed behind him.

The two months sped swiftly by and with little coaxing the man managed to prolong his inflicted fine through the winter and into the spring. With the summer the girl went back to camp and he to the old farm house nearby. Naturally they spent most of their time together, and one day when they were rambling through the woods picking berries the man stopped suddenly.

"Do you remember?" he said.

"Remember what?" she asked.

It was a year ago today at this very spot."

The girl blushed, but asked bravely: "What was?"

"That I met you after you'd stolen the—"

"Don't say 'stolen,'" she broke in. "Say 'slipped.'"

At the end of the sentence her voice shook and for some unaccountable reason she burst into tears again. This time the man did not hesitate to administer the proper consolation, nor did the girl protest. After a pause he spoke:

"Dearest, I have a dreadful confession to make and I know you'll never forgive me for doing it, but I felt it was my only chance of ever seeing you again."

"Tell me, quickly; what have you done?" she demanded.

"Why—why—that wasn't my watermelon you—you—that strayed away from the patch last year. In fact, I haven't the least idea who owns that piece of land and, what's more, I don't care a rap!"

GETTING AHEAD

To get ahead you must look ahead. Outgo must be kept consistently less than income. Willingness and hard work will never take the place of an intelligent plan of saving.

Home ownership is the world's greatest incentive to systematic saving. We are going through a period of unnatural earnings and reckless spending. Some folks will attain independence during this period. They are the folks who begin their program of systematic saving, TODAY.

And remember, building your new home is a sound investment TO DAY, just as it has always been.

Come in today and talk it over, without obligation, of course.

A Question of Proverbs

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pettigrew had at last run out of the small change of gossip which they had been passing back and forth concerning Centerville friends and neighbors. There was yet an hour before Mrs. Jordan's husband would return from Slocum and pick up his wife, whom he had left to visit Mrs. Pettigrew. Meanwhile there was nothing else to do but fall back on personalities—or remain silent. And neither lady was one to remain silent long.

"How's John?" asked Mrs. Jordan, snipping her thread with her teeth.

"He's fine!" and Mrs. Pettigrew's face beamed. Her entire interest and pride centered in her one son, who, according to her, had reached his twenty-eight years unmarried simply because he had never found a girl "like his mother."

"They do say," warily insinuated Mrs. Jordan, viewing the other out of the corner of one eye to see how she took it, "that he's interested in Emma Scobie's cousin that's a-visiting her."

"The idea!" flashed John's mother. "The idea!" Then, perhaps because she felt an acquaintance of forty-odd years did not deserve to be treated casually, perhaps because she yearned for a confidant, she burst out excitedly: "Mebbe he is a mite—but she's no girl for him—that flighty creature! I hear tell she dances the newest, queerest dances; that she act'ally has her nails tended to in the city—and look at her clothes!"

The other nodded assent. "I don't know anyhow what the times is coming to. It's awful different than when we was girls!"

"I know John's been going to call on her off and on," continued Mrs. Pettigrew, "and I don't suppose he'd like it if I put my foot down about his doin' it." And her intuition was accurate, for John, used as he was to his mother's domination in small things,

"Who Is That With Him?"

would of a certainty have rebelled at any attempt to control his comings and goings, at his age. "There ought to be some way to put a stop to it without his catching on."

Whereupon the two elderly ladies put their graying heads together and plotted for the well-doing of John. Martha Jordan even suggested her daughter -as counter-attraction, but her friend could not bring herself to see in lanky, freckled, sandy-haired Bessie Jordan a suitable foil to the dancing, manicured siren at the Scobies'.

"Say—look here, Ella!" and Martha fairly bubbled over with excitement. "can't you send John away? By the time he got back the girl would be gone, and you know the old proverb—'Out of sight is out of mind!'"

Ella looked thoughtful. It certainly was an idea. It wouldn't occur to John to go off himself, just at haying time; but she knew he was often wishing for a chance to "see a little life," and that, urged on by her, he would probably go. "I guess you've hit on a scheme, Marthy," she said.

Presently Mr. Jordan arrived, and Marthy drove away with him, inwardly content at having assisted her friend out of her dilemma.

That night, across the red-covered supper table, John's mother broached her project. "You're looking sort of peakin', John. How'd you like to go over to Taylor City and visit your uncle's folks for a spell?"

Taylor City deserved its pretentious name only when compared with Centerville and Slocum. But John, good-looking, in spite of a certain restlessness of his eyes and discontented, downward curve of his mouth, looked at her, pleased. Lord, how he hated the dreary round of life in Centerville! Evelyn Thatcher had mitigated his lot for a while, but after Thursday that pleasure would end with her departure for home.

Very willingly he fell in with his mother's plans. Twenty-eight years with that woman who prided herself on "calling a spade a spade" and doing everything "open and aboveboard" had rendered him utterly unsuspicious of any subtleties or concealments on her part.

Mrs. Pettigrew herself had some anxious moments, while John spent the evening before his departure at the Scobies', and the old grandfather's clock ticked away several long hours. She was worried for fear John had committed himself to an engagement with this flyaway girl. Then she consoled herself by the thought that it had taken John's father four years to get to the point of a partial proposal, and John had known this person only a month.

The time after John left passed very quietly. The haying progressed satisfactorily, helped out by a neighbor's son called in to assist the hired man. Martha Jordan dropped in once or twice and the two women congratulated themselves on "saving John." Even when Martha brought the news that Evelyn had ended her visit unexpectedly soon (for John had neglected to mention the fact that Evelyn was leaving on Thursday), their complacency was not disturbed. They figured she had doubtless found Centerville suddenly dull without John around to flirt with.

One letter came from that youth postmarked "Taylor City"—then one stamped "Austin Junction."

"Probably run up to see his father's cousin," remarked his mother. "Very thoughtful of him."

The next letter did not mention his father's cousin, but gave the time of his return. In preparation his mother "got up" a supper fit for the gods—and even for her son. Waffles with golden sirup, feathery biscuits, jellied chicken, lemon pie with flaky, fluted crust; crispy fried potatoes—a collection of all John's favorite dishes, whether customarily served at the tea table or not. And because she felt she owed a debt she could never repay to Martha Jordan she invited her to come.

When the whistle of John's train blew for the stop at Centerville the two ladies were rocking placidly on the shady porch. Supper only awaited John's arrival. They heard the train slow down, stop, pull out. Up the hill came a man—then two women—then a boy—and last came John—and—and—"For the land sakes, Marthy, who is that with him?"

Chattering, laughing, clinging arm in arm, two people came through the gate, up the walk, up the steps.

"Mother—this is my wife—Evelyn!" cried a happy, rejuvenated John.

And, "I hope you'll like me!" said a slim, gayly dressed, sparkling young girl.

Across the red-covered supper table John explained more fully. "Evelyn lives in Austin Junction, you know. We were married there yesterday. I didn't know how much she meant to me until I went away. Then I found out and hunted her up. You know they say, 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder!'"

Later, out in the kitchen, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pettigrew permitted themselves one exchange of glances.

"We hit the wrong proverb," said Martha dolefully.

But between "that Thatcher girl" and "my son's wife" a gulf stretched.

"She seems a very nice girl," said Mrs. Pettigrew complacently. "And you know 'all's well that ends well!'"

MUTE'S SHOUT SAVES LIVES

Incident That Can Only Be Regarded as a Miracle is Related by English Bishop.

An extraordinary story of how a dumb man, a peer of the realm, was given the power to utter one word, thereby saving many lives, was told by Dr. Kennion, bishop of Bath and Wells, at the dedication of a new home for deaf mutes in Bath, England.

The peer was a former Lord Carbery and a friend of Dr. Kennion.

"Lord Carbery," said the bishop, "was aboard a steamer sailing from Cork to Bristol. A dense fog came on and passengers could see nothing. Even the lookout man was unaware of danger, when Lord Carbery, who was sitting in the bow, shouted loudly, 'Land!' It often happens when God has deprived a man of one sense he increases the power of another. Lord Carbery was able to see what others could not, and realizing the ship was making straight for the black mass, his excitement forced that one word from his lips.

"The captain put the helm round and the vessel just skimmed past the southernmost rock of Lundy Island. We all had a most narrow escape, and many lives were saved by Lord Carbery's warning."

That word "land" was the only one Lord Carbery ever uttered.

Tuff!

"The toughest thing to have to pay is the balance on the engagement ring after the girl has thrown you over for some other mutt," sighed the young man.

"You're wrong," replied the elderly man. "The toughest thing to have to pay is an old bar bill with prohibition in effect."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Entertainments

Another successful series of Redpath entertainments is to be offered this winter at Glenwood M. E. church. The opening number is the Irene Stolofsky Company, November 3 Miss Stolofsky toured one one of the Redpath Chautauqua circuits last summer and was a sensation as a violinist. She is assisted by Vawter MacGregor, Scottish baritone and Lula Townsend MacGregor, soprano, pianist and whistler.

Other entertainments and lectures to be offered at Glenwood church are Dr. Frank D. Loveland, one of the most popular pulpit orators in the west; Landis Sextet in a vocal and instrumental program; Judge George D. Alden of Boston; the MacDonold-Crowder Company including harpist and reader.

Announcement is made that price of season will remain $1.00, altho such a series of entertainments is well worth twice that price. The fact that the numbers are secured thru the Redpath Bureau, which management furnished the Hilltop Chautauquas few weeks ago is sufficient guarantee of the excellence of the winter course.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS.

Those who have a well-stocked cellar will find a vegetable soup most appetizing occasionally.

Julienne Soup.—Into three quarts of water put one-half cupful each of diced carrots, turnips, finely chopped onion and celery, one bay leaf and one tablespoonful of minced parsley. Bring to the boiling point, then add two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, two teaspoonfuls of beef extract, and one teaspoonful of salt. Simmer one-half hour, strain and serve. Three quarts of good soup stock may be used in place of the beef extract and water.

New ways of using peanuts will be welcomed by those who are fond of the ground nut.

Creamed Peanuts on Toast.—Scald two cupfuls of milk in a double boiler, reserving one tablespoonful to mix with a teaspoonful of cornstarch, add one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth of a cup of stuffed olives chopped, or green peppers, or cooked celery may be used. Cook until smooth and thick and add one cupful of finely minced or ground peanuts just before serving. Serve on toast.

Buckwheat Cakes.—Take one yeast cake dissolved in half a cupful of water, add a pint or more of warm water and buckwheat flour to make a thick mixture. Do this in the morning and let stand to rise until the next morning, when it is ready to use. Take one cupful of the thick batter for the next day's cakes, add water and buckwheat flour to thicken and set away as before. The batter that is left is salted, and a half cupful of milk, sour or sweet, added, then a little soda dissolved in hot water which will thin the cakes to the right consistency. Never mix any of this soda and milk batter with that which is to be used the following day.

Three Hurt in an Auto Accident

Three persons were seriously injured, one probably fatally, at 7 a. m. Tuesday when a Ford touring car struck a truck and swerved into the West Broad street car barn wall at Glenwood avenue. The injured:

Mrs. Lulu Chilcote, 50 Mt. Gilead, fractured skull, cut about the head and shoulders and possible internal hurts. She may die.

Miss Evangeline Reams, 50, founder and superintendent of Friends' Rescue Home, North Hague avenue, injured spine, fractured jaw, nose broken, some teeth knocked out, cuts about the head and throat, and possible internal injuries.

George Hickman, 38, superintendent of grounds at Friends' Rescue Home, broken left arm, broken ribs and cuts on hands.

All are in Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Hickman was driving the Rescue Home machine. He and Miss Reams were taking Mrs. Chilcote to Union Station from where she was to take a train for her home. She came here Monday for a meeting of the Rescue Home Board of Directors.

The truck was driven by William Brand, driver for the Franklin Asphalt Paving Co. He was uninjured.

About twenty personal friends met at the home of Walter King last Monday evening and proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wyman (Grace Curran), South Ogden avenue, and pulled off a real old-fashioned belling, with plenty of noise and pep. The hosts showed their appreciation of the music by serving the crowd with ice cream and cake. Everybody then wished the young couple, who are very popular on the Hilltop, a long and successful sail on the Sea of Matrimony.

Tuesday evening, Oct. 5, Molly Make-Believe, entertained with a "Let's pretend" party. Jack and Jill fell down the hill and Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffet until Polly put the kettle on. Mickey smiled so beguiling while Cinderella sat in the chimney corner. Mary Jane and Buster Brown were there and so was Raggety Ann. Mary, Mary, quite contrary, told how her garden grows. Little Miss Etticoat, in her white petticoat had a red nose. The Little Colonel, just like her grandfather, and See Saw Marjorie Daw completed the group of happy "little youngsters" who enjoyed a lovely spread and a delightful evening of games.

At a special meeting, last Wednesday evening, at the home of "Polecat" Perkins, the members of the Delta Sigma changed the name of their organization to Delta Nu Delta, by which appellation it is to be known in the future. They held their third meeting Saturday evening at the home of Liniment Lucas. A very enjoyable evening was passed, concluded by a delicious repast, consisting of fried chicken, hot biscuits, butter, fresh milk and coffee. Magnificent pumpkin pies and that good old-fashioned cake—like mother used to bake—completed the course.

After this feast the host passed around a box of Ricoro Cabinets. Then a short business meeting was called by Old Testament Tilton. When ready to return to town, Liniment ran his big eight-cylinder car out of his stucco garage, but after a short ride the rear springs were broken going over a bump. Rather than risk further damage to the car, the members decided to walk home, which was accomplished by 2 a. m.

The next meeting will be held Oct. 20, at the home of Magpie Simpkins. The Newark chapter will attend in a body. All members of the local chapter must be present.

The Glenwood Epworth League took a short hike south of town last Sunday afternoon, under the leadership of Mr. J. D. Marsh, the new athletic director. About forty were present. After a four-mile jaunt the crowd ate supper and played games in a delightful sylvan grove, just off the Harrisburg Pike. When the Leaguers returned home, tired but happy, they unanimously voted it a splendid afternoon and a similar excursion is to be made sometime in the near future.

Miss Helen Kistler of 106 Snyder street, Sprinfield, was the guests of her cousin, Miss Hazel Ferguson, of 2302 Palmetto street, over Saturday and Sunday.

Do you enjoy good singing and readings? If you do, you will be pleased with the entertainment that Mrs. Lutz will give at Hoge Memorial church, Tuesday evening, Oct. 12. You know, Mrs. Lutz was at one time a resident of the Hilltop, and is soon to go as a missionary to Korea. She has attended Oberlin Conservatory of Music, has had six seasons with Margaret Perry Hast, which included a season abroad, was a pupil of the late Evan Williams, has had three years in the Grace Hamilton Morrey School; is a member of the Women's Music club and has taught music in the Hawaiian Islands. A fine evening of music and readings is assured. A free will offering will be taken, and refreshments sold after the concert. Half of the proceeds are to help her buy a piano, which will carry some music and joy into the lives of some of the Koreans. The other half will be used by the C. E. Society for missions. Come out, and enjoy the evening.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST

Dr. G. R. Robbins will preach Sunday morning on the theme, "The Great Revival of Religion Coming and a Time of Great Rejoicing." Evening, "Gathering Them in Great Multitudes." Last Friday evening the young people of the church gave the pastor a surprise in honor of the third anniversary of his instantaneous and miraculous healing and restoration to the pulpit, and Sunday being his birthday. Splendid addresses were given by Drs. Colborn and Cowley and seven representatives of different departments of the church.

Another man testified publicly Sunday of being healed after two sets of doctors had pronounced his case hopeless. At the annual meeting this week it was announced in the treasurer's reports that over $6000 had been paid in cash and over $18,000 subscribed for missions. This is the church that was about ready to close its door when Dr. Robbins, two years ago, reluctantly accepted the pastorate.

A Counterfeit Husband

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Bob Anderson, owner of the Anderson Studio apartments, gazed at the caller in his office in consternation. Her information had been wholly unexpected.

"So, Miss Anthony," he said at length, "You are really going away. Isn't there any chance at all that you may reconsider?"

Helen Anthony threw him a fleeting glance. She had lived in the apartments for nearly two years and had grown to like the gray-eyed man with the lazy drawl who now sat looking at her with such evident dismay. And he had shown every sign of enjoying the friendship she had given him, her occasional companionship at the theater, an infrequent invitation to tea in her studio. She wondered if he had said the right word in time he might have kept her in the city. Well, it was too late now.

"No," she said. "I am really going home. I haven't exactly failed; but, on the other hand, my success hasn't amounted to enough to justify my remaining here. My mother is not well and has considerable to worry her. My place for the present is back home."

"I say Hel—Miss Anthony," said Anderson earnestly, "I can't begin to tell you how I hate to have you go. Won't you give fortune one more chance?"

He was surprised at the vehemence of his feelings. A confirmed bachelor so he imagined himself, at the age of thirty-five, he had lively appreciation of the easy-going freedom he would be giving up if he asked this girl to marry him and she said yes. And yet—

His thoughts were interrupted. "No," she replied quite definitely. "I am going."

That night Bob could not get to sleep. His inclinations were drawing him in two opposite directions. He got up, lighted a cigarette and stood by the window, meditating. His glance wandered idly across the court to the ell of the building in which was the studio of the girl he did—and didn't—want to marry.

And, startled violently out of his musings, he saw a man who had climbed the fire escape disappearing into Helen's window.

"A burglar!" He threw his dressing gown about him, took his revolver from the drawer and hastened to her aid. As he reached her door he caught voices raised in altercation within.

"No, no, girl! Don't do it, I tell you. It would mean sure death to—"

Bob seized the handle of the door. "Helen!" he cried. "If you can, open the door!"

Came from within a man's angry curse. Then followed swift steps and a pale-faced woman flung the door wide. "What do you mean by trying to enter my room at this time of night, Mr., Anderson?" she cried.

Bob was altogether taken aback. "Why, I—I—" he stammered. "I saw a man—"

"Exactly," she said, cuttingly. "My—"

"Don't say it, Nell," came the man's voice from within.

"My husband," she concluded, weakly.

Bob reeled as if he had been struck. Then, "I beg your pardon," he said, and turned on his heel.

For hours he paced his room, trying to reorganize his shattered outlook on life. For now that Helen Anthony was irrevocably another's it had come to him how deeply he loved her. Why had she deceived him?

Three days later, Helen, white and weary-eyed, stopped him in the hall. "I am staying a week longer than I expected," she informed him, coldly. "Here is the difference in rent."

Bob took the crisp, new bills she held out to him without comment, making no effort to detain her as she walked quickly away. But when he came to deposit the money in the bank he met with a surprise. "Counterfeit," declared the teller with calm certainty, and stamped it full of triangular holes.

At the words a man stepped quickly forward to Bob's side. "Counterfeit?" he said.

"Yes," said the teller, "it is, but I can vouch for Mr. Anderson."

"There's a gang working the city, but we're after them and sooner or later will put them where they belong. From whom did you get this?" The man seemed very certain of himself and Bob concluded he was a treasury agent.

Bob hesitated. Then, "No," he said shortly, "I've had a lot of money coming in from various sources in the last few days and I cannot place this."

"Well, it's your loss," said the other cheerfully.

"My loss it is," said Bob and went out. The loss of a couple of five dollar bills meant nothing, but when it came to losing faith in the one woman he would have said was pure gold—that hurt.

The setting sun was turning to points of fire the myriad windows of the city's buildings as Bob reached the apartments. In the gathering twilight of the room he at first scarcely saw the slender figure leaning back in his deep-cushioned chair. Then, "Helen!" he cried, and, forgetful that he thoroughly believed in "hands off" other people's property, he dropped on his knees beside her and took her in his arms. Counterfeit or simon-pure metal, married or unmarried, he loved this woman.

But Helen was trying to withdraw from his embrace even as she explained her presence in his rooms. "That money I gave you," she said, "was bad. I tried to spend some and found out. But, oh, I didn't know it when I gave it to you," she besought him imploringly.

"Of course you didn't," he assured her. "It's nothing to worry about."

At the tenderness of his tone tears gathered in Helen's eyes. "Bob," she whispered. "Would you be glad to know that that was my brother—not my husband? Wait—until I have told you the rest. He was just telling me, when you came, that the police were looking for him, and that if I could only let him stay there that night he could manage to slip through to Canada next day. Before he left he insisted on my taking those bills. I am sure he didn't know they weren't good. Billy was weak, but he wasn't a criminal—although this time he had got mixed up with a bad crowd. He made me promise to tell no one who he was—he was nervous and afraid. And for mother's sake—he has brought her great unhappiness and worry, but he was always her favorite—I let you think he was my husband."

"And nearly broke my heart," said Bob reproachfully.

"Well, I don't think I would have had the courage," confessed Helen, "if you hadn't nearly broken my heart by being so perfectly willing to let me go!"

"And I was an idiot," said Bob. "Heaven knows I wanted you, but I didn't know how much until I thought I had lost you."

"So, by passing off a counterfeit husband I was able to win a real one," said Helen whimsically. "I suppose Billy is safe in Canada by now; as for mother—"

"As for mother," whispered Bob, "she must come here. And we will go after her together."

BEAT SPOUSE SEVEN YEARS

Kansas City Man Says Even That Didn't Make His Wife Behave.

Kansas City.—"I've done my best for her, judge. I've got a car and some money to make it comfortable for her, and I've beaten her every day since I married her seven years ago, but I can't make her behave," complained Frank Grochocki to Judge A. J. Herrod.

"How can I love him when he treats me so? Last night he refused to keep me any longer, and kicked me out into the street and cut me with a knife," said his wife, Emma, who had him arrested for assault.

"Why don't you try kindness?" asked the judge.

"I did once, and she threw a telephone at me," replied the man.

"I threw the telephone at him when he tried to choke me," broke in his wife.

"Anyway," said Grochocki, "she always gets the best of the fights."

"That's true, at least," the wife admitted.

Judge Herrod gave up in despair and turned the case over to the welfare board.

The Laborer is Worthy of His Hire

Contributed

(The Literary Digest for August 31, 1918.)

In every crisis of national life the clergymen of America have stood in the forefront of patriotic endeavor; in every human crisis they have brought support, and guidance, and comfort to souls in desperate need. Now it is time to measure the work and the needs of the preacher and pastor, as men in other departments of work today are being measured, that their value may be rightly appraised and their needs fairly met.

The cost of living has greatly increased. Clothing, food, fuel, and all the daily incidentals, that go to make up American life, have gone up from thirty to a hundred percent. And the loans and taxes for Freedom's war are ever making deeper drives into the purse. Wage-earners in every department of the nation's work have been demanding more income, and their demands have been recognized as just and necessary. Railroad men, miners, lumberjacks, ship builders, munition workers, telegraph operators, automobile makers, and all the multitudes of skilled and unskilled laborers have been counted "worthy of their hire," and of higher hire. The United States government, very recently, has raised the wages of two million railroad workers alone, giving the poorest paid men an increase of 43 per cent. Corporations and individual employers, without number throughout the United States, have taken similar action. Trade-unions are standing back of their men and using pressure, when necessary, to gain for them the means to live their lives and do their work as Americans should.

Who stands back of the clergymen of America in these days of pressure? What great organization or compelling authority, what generous heart or spirit of fair play is winning for your minister, or pastor, or priest, or rabbi the salary increase that will give him strength, courage, efficiency and success in his vital and exalted work for the welfare of the nation, and the kingdom of God?

Your pastor is not a cheap man nor an unskilled laborer. He has brought long, careful training to his task. He was chosen with scrutinizing care as to his qualifications, and he is being measured, today, by high and exacting requirement in the performance of his work. Carry this measurement to its just conclusion. What salary would you expect to pay to the trained man in business of whom such important work and expert ability were required? Set down on paper some of the qualities and duties you demand of your pastor, and then judge their value.

He must be a man among men, a man of force, tact, and agreeable personality, a good mixer, a man of knowledge, wisdom and authority, whose presence commands respect, and whose word carries conviction. He must be able to influence men and women, win their confidence, kindle their enthusiasm, direct their energies, and organize their working powers. He must be full of sympathy, ready with consolation; a strength in weakness; a bright light in times of darkness, and a never-failing source of inspiration to the souls of his people. You expect all this of him.

Your pastor, also, must be the successful head and center of your organized church activities—business, social and spiritual. On occasion, or as a regular part of his task, he must be an expert money-raiser. You engage him as your chief and leader, the general manager of your church, if not its actual creator, or savior from its difficulties. You put upon him a burden and a responsibility you would never dream of entrusting to any cheap man in business.

Nor are those his greatest tasks. He must read, and study, and meditate, and commune with the Infinite. He must understand men and know their work, their trials, their problems, their temptations, their deep inner feelings and aspirations, and the avenues of helpful approach to their sympathies and convictions. He must know something of history, science, literature. He must be familiar with all social needs, and institutions, and methods. He must be able to interpret the Word of God with true spiritual insight, and practical human application. He must stand before you in the pulpit on the Sabbath and deliver messages that search the soul, feed the mind, bring courage to the heart, make plain the path of daily life, and lift you nearer to heaven, or bring heaven nearer to earth.

In these days, also, your preacher must proclaim the ideals and principles of America. He must stir the patriotism of his young men, and send them with strong hearts and noble vision into the service of their country. He must pastor them in the camps and follow them with his letters and prayers as they go across the sea to fight. The government values him so highly that it has already called thousands of American clergymen into active service to shepherd the fighting men and help them win the war. At home the government calls him to be its mouthpiece in its appeals to its citizens for every form of patriotic service or economy prescribed as needful for victory. You expect your pastor to be equal to such demands, and to do your church credit when called upon for public addresses or community action.

When you have listed all the qualities and services you ask of your pastor, make out the bill for the amount your church ought to pay for such a man, and then move things to see that the church pays that bill. Never mind what has been done in the past, nor what long habit has accustomed the church to believe can be done. The standing record of clergymen's salaries throughout this great rich nation is a pitiful shame, and belies the real heart and fairness of the American people. The average salary of clergymen in ten of the largest denominations is only 4793 a year. What trade or business would tolerate such a condition?

The minister of your church is a human being like the rest of us, and he is feeling the pressure of increased cost of living just as we do. But no government decree has raised his salary. No corporation or trade-union stands back of him. He does not go on strike. He simply trusts his people and works faithfully for them seven days a week, and many nights, and struggles to look respectable, and pay his bills, and perform the miracles expected of him, often for less than the salary of the young girl stenographer who teaches a class in his Sunday school, or the wages of the man who lays the sidewalk in front of his church.

Among the more than two million readers of The Literary Digest are active and substantial members of thousands of churches throughout the United States. To them this frank appeal is made, in keeping with the urgent needs of the day, and the American spirit of justice and generosity. Give your minister a lift. Take the initiative now and have his salary increased to an amount which will come nearer to the real value of his services, and enable him to meet the increased cost of living. He is not demanding it, but he needs it none the less, and your own sense of right demands it for him. If his salary is $800, it ought to be made, at once, $1200. If it is $1000, it ought to be raised to $1500. There is scarcely a church, large or small, anywhere in America that can not increase its pastor's salary at least 50 per cent. Money never was so plentiful. More actual cash—gold, silver, and paper currency—is in circulation today than at any time in the nation's history, and there is a bigger share for every man, woman, and child. See that your pastor gets his fair share of your profits and those of every member in your church.

Back up the soldiers of America who follow the flag to France! Billions for them! Nothing is too much nor too good for our soldiers of liberty. But, now, remember that your minister is one of the bravest, worthiest soldiers of all. He is fighting for America, for the righteousness that "exalteth a nation." He is fighting for America, as he puts his clean, valiant, patriotic spirit into the youth and into the men and women of his congregation, and sends them out into the tasks of the week better fitted to answer America's call. He is fighting for the kingdom of heaven on earth, to help win its victories over the arch-enemy of the human race, the destroyer of bodies and souls. He is the soldier of mercy to those in distress, the ever-ready soldier of service to those who need help. Back him up with whole-hearted support and a quick, generous increase in salary.

The clergymen of America in this supreme crisis of the nation's readjustment are the one great devoted, indispensable body of faithful workers who have no spokesman. In this way it may be possible to reach the individual consciences and hearts of millions of men and women who, in all our experience have never failed to respond to any just call.

CLOSE SHAVE FOR BARBERS

Riderless Motorcycle Smashes Into a Pittsburgh Tonsorial Parlor and Works Havoc.

Pittsburgh.—The usual Saturday night crowd was in Frank Dodd's barber shop when there was a terrific crash of glass and a snorting motorcycle shot across the room and stopped with a bang against the water cooler. One man dashed into the street with his face covered with lather and a towel draped over his shirt front. Most of the others were stunned into inactivity. Later it was ascertained that a negro, unable to make his new motorcycle behave, had fallen off just outside the barber shop. The machine kept right on going.

Terrapin Found Sixty-One Years Old.

York, Pa.—A terrapin, which, according to the date cut on the bottom of the shell, is more than sixty-one years old, was found a few days ago by James L. Zellers, at Stewartstown, this county. The date is 1859 and the initials L. Z. The latter correspond to those of his grandfather, Levi Zellers, who often cut dates on terrapins.

PRESERVE EGGS BY SOAP FILM

Oklahoma Scientists Describe Method of Conserving Hen Product in Good Flavor.

ALUMINUM SOAP IDEAL SEALER

Perfect Process Which Keeps Contents of Egg Sweet and Leaves no Trace of Foreign Flavor—Result of Long Research.

Chicago.—Eggs can now be preserved by putting on their shells a thin film of aluminum soap. The process, one of the newer methods employed in guarding the product of the lowly hen from spoilage, is described in the current number of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

Its description occurs in an article by Drs. Hilton Ira Jones and Robert Du Bois of the department of chemistry at the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college at Stillwater, Okla., who have made an intensive study of the subject.

Those scientists began their researches on this line a year or so ago and have not only suggested important improvements in egg preservation but have prepared a catalogue of the books and articles which constitute the first bibliography of the salvage of the egg.

One-Quarter Spoilage.

The practical bearing of their investigation is shown by their statement that egg dealers handling millions of dollars a year report losses from spoilage as high as 25 per cent.

Beginning with the earliest expedient, that of burying or packing the eggs in an air-tight substance, the authors carry their scientific readers through the entire range of the literature of egg preservation from salt to water glass. They find various faults with the sealing agents employed.

They then tried aluminum soap, and recommend it for further investigation and experiment. This substance can be prepared with soap solution, to which can be added a solution of some salt of aluminum, such as the alum of commerce, which is a sulphate of aluminum and potassium. Although the resulting precipitate is technically a soap, it is insoluble in water and must be dissolved by some such agent as gasoline, so that a film may be quickly and cheaply formed upon the shell by dipping the eggs in a solution of it. The soap itself is odorless and tasteless and therefore makes an ideal sealer, since it has no effect upon the egg. The experimenters found, however, that the usual solvent, gasoline, left a slight taste on the shell of the egg which was imparted to the contents.

Two methods of solving the problem of obtaining a tasteless application were tried and both were successful.

Wholly Satisfactory.

"The first," to quote the authors, "was to protect the eggs by a preliminary coating before sealing with the gasoline solution. The best agent for this purpose is dilute sulphuric acid. When eggs are immersed in the acid effervescence continues for about ten seconds and ceases as a coating of calcium sulphate is formed in the pores of the egg shells. The calcium sulphate acts as a polarizer and stops the reaction. The eggs are then dipped without drying into the aluminum soap solution and placed in a special dripping rack. The method of double sealing with sulphuric acid seems wholly satisfactory. The contents of the egg are sweet, and no taste of gasoline can be detected. The extra cost of the preliminary sealing, either in time or money, is negligible.

"The necessity of double dipping is without doubt a weakness and a better solution of the problem was found. Gasoline is composed largely of pentane, a practically tasteless, odorless and colorless liquid. Since gasoline dissolves aluminum soap well, it is certain that its chief constituent would do so, and the problem was to prepare chemically pure pentane on a large scale.

"The best method of preparing pentane seems to be the reduction of amylene. A very convenient and cheap process of making amylene or pentane has recently been devised by Dr. Roger Adams. By fractional distillation practically odorless and tasteless pentane can be produced. The cheapness with which pentane can now be made and the facility with which the product can be used to dissolve aluminum soap seem to make this solution of the problem satisfactory in every way."

Mother-in-Law Scares Bold Burglar Away

Topeka, Kan.—If you want to keep burglars away from your house have your mother-in-law there when you think they are about to pay you a visit. That is the advice of F. B. Nipps of this city.

Mrs. Nipps' mother, seventy-seven years old, was asleep in the living room of the Nipps home here when a burglar entered. "What do you want!" she demanded, as she awakened when she heard him. Without replying the negro fled. Nothing was reported missing.

GALVESTON IN SECOND PLACE

Ranks Next to New York in Total Value of Shipments to Foreign Countries.

Washington.—Galveston, Texas, took second rank among ports of the United States in the value of exports during the fiscal year ended last June 30. The total value of its foreign shipments as given by the department of commerce was $566,289,227, or nearly double those in 1919, and greater by three times than those in 1918.

Nearly half of all the exports from the whole country were sent out of New York, the value being $3,383,638,588, or $180,000,000 greater than the exports the year before and nearly $1,000,000,000 more than those in 1918.

New Orleans ranked third with a total of $589,409,222, or $100,000,000 more than during the year before. Philadelphia was fourth with $449,691,705, or $40,000,000 less than the year before. Baltimore was next with $236,961,488, or $24,000,000 more than the year before. Savannah, Ga., ranked next and ahead of Boston, with $211,171,389, or double the 1919 total. Exports from Boston were valued at $261,614,919, or $16,000,000 more than the year before.

Exports from Norfolk and Newport News were valued at $226,006,286, or more than double those in 1919. San Francisco was slightly ahead of the Virginia ports, with $233,654,736, as was Seattle, with $228,186,694.

New Community Association

At a meeting of the newly formed Hilltop Community Association, at West Broad school building, Monday night, methods were discussed relating to the work of this association. It was voted to appoint a committee of seven to thoroughly study the work of different Community Association methods and report at the next meeting, which is to be held on Friday evening, November 19th. At this meeting a splendid program of song, etc., will be given also. It is hoped that at that meeting there will be a very large attendance.

The object of this organization is a getting together of all residents of the Hilltop for the purpose of helping each other socially, physically, and any way tending to make the Hilltop an ideal place to live. Any adult resident on the Hiltop is eligible to membership. Keep this date, November 19th, open and come out and help to boost this excellent organization.

Mrs. Elizabeth Boyd of Kansas has been visiting with her nephew and neice, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Miller, 89 S. Terrace Ave. Mrs. Boyd sang at the evening service at Hill Crest Baptist Church and all were delighted with the rendition. It has been a great pleasure to have Mrs. Boyd in the community for she brings back memories of that wonderful woman Miss Francis Willard. Mrs. Boyd was a personal friend of Miss Willard and accompanied her as soloist in her great meetings.

On Saturday evening, October 9th, 1920, the members of the Hillcrest Baptist Church chorus choir and their friends, thirty-five in all, enjoyed a very pleasant evening in the woods just north of the church. The evening was spent in consuming quantities of roast weiners, doughnuts, toasted marshmallows, etc., after which a thoroughly enjoyable program of songs, stunts and soap box oratory was given. Mr. W. E. Knox, seems to enjoy roast weiners fully as well as directing the choir.

Miss Evangeline Reams, matron at The Friends Rescue Home, North Hague Ave., who, with two others, was seriously injured in the automobile accident at Glenwood Ave. last week, is reported as having gained a little in her condition, and her many friends are hoping for her recovery. Her injuries have been such that there is nothing yet definite as to the outcome.

Mrs. Chilcote is also in apparently the same condition as yet, and the hopes of her recovery is reported as being doubtful.

Mr. Hickman, the third one injured in the accident, was taken from the hospital to the Rescue Home last week, and is getting along very well, it is reported.

The second meeting of Glenwood Epworth League Glee Club met October 11th at the home of Miss Lillian Born, 2705 West Broad. After a short business session, a musical program was rendered by the Glenwood Male Quartet and the party adjourned to the lawn on the west side of the house. Electric lights had been arranged so as to sufficiently light every corner. Games were played, after which the hostess served refreshments. The remainder of the evening was spent in singing. Seven new members were present. A director was chosen whose name will be announced in next week's Record. Those present were: Misses Sarah Westlake, Margaret Marsh, Kathryne Doudin, Mabel Heysl, Velma Currier, Ruth Wolfe, Frances Huffman, Bernice and Lillian Grumley, Florence Thompson, Helen Smith and Lillian Born; Messrs. Kenneth Dickerson, Dana Marsh, Ernest Cady, Herschel Ferguson, Wilby Norris, Henry Keller, Robert Smith, William Thompson and Willard Jones.

The fourth meeting of the Delta Nu Deltas was a tremendous success. It was held at the home of Magpie Simpkins October 6th. As this was purely a social meeting and no distracting business matters to be brought up, an enjoyable evening was spent in music and games. Refreshments were served and later Magpie's sister made a ton or so of fudge which was quickly disposed of by the guests. Several new pledges were present, whose cases will be taken up at the next regular ceremonial meeting. The party broke up at a late hour. A short business meeting was held at the Ohio Union Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 12th, where it was decided that the Deltas will entertain with a wiener roast next week. This week's social meeting is to be at the home of Scenery Sims. The constitution committee is to make its report at this time.

GREAT QUEEN AS A DIPLOMAT

Elizabeth of England, Eccentric and Able, Curried Favor With Her "Loving People."

Queen Elizabeth of England had all the instincts of a politician, besides being one of the most eccentric of English rulers. Among other popular customs, she was wont to honor Greenwich fair with her presence. On one of these occasions she came riding on a pillion behind her favorite master of the horse, Leicester, and the people not only greeted her with great acclaim, as was their custom when she appeared among them, but in their eagerness to get near her, to catch a look, a word, or perhaps snatch a jeweled button or aiglet from her dress, crowded her majesty almost to suffocation.

Her noble equerry then, as a matter of necessity, used his riding whip very smartly to drive the crowd back, whereupon her majesty graciously interfered ever and anon, crying: "Prithee, my lord, take heed that thou do not hurt my loving people!"

But when, in obedience to these tender remonstrances, he desisted, and she found herself again surrounded by the swarming crowd, and her progress impeded, she would call to the earl in a low voice, "Cut them again, my lord, cut them again!"

Clearing the Way for Jones.

A celebrated revivalist came to address his flock, and before he began to speak the pastor said: "Brother Jones, before you begin this discourse, there are some powerful bad negroes in this here congregation, and I want to pray for you," which he did in this fashion:

"O Lord, give Brother Jones the eye of the eagle, that he may see sin from afar. Give his ear to the Gospel telephone and connect him with the central skies. Illuminate his brow with a brightness that will make the fires of hell look like a tallow candle. Nail his hands to the Gospel plow, and bow his head in some lonesome valley where prayer is much wanted to be said, and anoint him all over with the kerosene oil of thy salvation and set him afire."

Fire on South Eureka

The Hiltop Fire Department was called out last Thursday to 391 S. Eureka Ave., the home of Mr. Armstrong, where a fire had gained considerable headway, resulting in the loss of about $1,000. The fire is thought to have originated by sparks from an electric wire. One of the members of the family is reported as being in the cellar at the time and was compelled to make his escape through the cellar window. The home at 389, which adjoins the former, also caught fire and about $400 damage was done to the outside of it also.

Another run was made by the Department to Box 137 at Broad and Hague Sunday morning, but no damage was done.

The members of the Department wish us to state that, on the first discovery of fire, if people will immediately turn in the alarm to the department first, then try to put the fire out themselves they will be doing a more practical thing than to wait before calling the department.

BIRD CLUB HAS 700 BOARDERS

Three Floors and Basement Needed to Accommodate the Feathered Pets.

LIVELY NEW YORK HOUSE

Wonderfully Accomplished Parrots and Cockatoos, Temperamental Canaries and Brilliant Black-and-Yellow Tropicals That Imitate Musical Instruments.

New York.—Quite the most populous boarding house in New York city this summer is Virginia Pope's Bird club, at 130 West Sixty-fifth street. They counted up to the 700th bird that had arrived the other day, and then it took so much time to serve bird seed, meal worms, boiled eggs and baked apples for the little guests that they stopped counting, and no one knows how many birds there are now—three floors and a basement of them, including a bird comic opera troupe.

It is a very chatty place, this bird club, and when a reporter dropped in a guy voice said "Hello!" cheerfully and then began in a clear voice to sing:

Yankee Doodle came to town riding on a pony,
Stuck a feather in his hat and called it Macaroni.

The nonchalant reception of a guest was in keeping with the character of the singer, who is one of the aristocrats of the club. He is a Mexican yellow head parrot, a wonderful bird, one in 10,000, worth many thousands of dollars; there have never been a dozen so valuable in the country, and his mistress would not take any price for him. Polly is patriotic in his musical selections; he sings "Marching Through Georgia" and shouts "Vive la France," and if you knew his mistress you would know where he learned the sentiments, for he speaks exactly in her voice. Polly also knows his primer and if he happens to be in a showing-off mood he will ask: "Can you spell cat? I can spell cat—c-a-t, cat." He will do the same with the word dog and wind up with:

"What does the canary do?" and with twitter and trills he will show how the canary sings.

An Acrobatic Cockatoo.

But the talented Mexican is not the greatest bird socially in the club if he is worth in cold cash at least $5,000. There is a big white Malacca cockatoo, "Coco," with a rose-tinted crest, who is in the $1,000 class and who trots around the floor, does a side tracking dance when in a frisky mood, and nips at visitors' feet and really does the honors of the place. If a visitor puts an inviting hand down to him he is likely to take a bite in earnest, though he rubs his head gently against Miss Pope when she appears, nips her ears and fingers, but ever so gently. He is a conceited creature and poses for admiration openly. He does gymnastic stunts on a chair, and to attract your attention and show you how he does it he calls "Hello" now and again in a voice that is astonishingly human. He can converse fluently in both French and Spanish.

While the club has its greatest number of visitors in summer. It is an all-the-year-round affair and takes in not only boarders, but hospital patients, birds that have bad manners, and others for one reason or another. Miss Virginia Pope was the first woman to put the bird club and hospital on the map. She has a wonderful fondness for the little creatures, birds having been her favorite pets from the time she was a little girl, and she has remarkable control over them and they seem to have absolute confidence in her. When she has taken in a sick bird that needs constant care and warmth she has been known to take it to bed with her and with it lying up close to her throat she has cared for it all night, ready to attend to its slightest need.

Birds Are Temperamental.

"Give the birds something to amuse them," says Miss Pope, "especially the parrots; clothes pins, a buckle with a strap, a key on a ring, or a little bell, and one parrot has been known to go to sleep with a little china doll in its claw, like a child. Toys keep them from pulling out their plumage.

"Birds are very temperamental. I had one canary that I could not persuade to take a bath. It fluttered its wings and appeared very angry and unhappy every time the bath was brought until one day by chance I brought the water in a very gay-colored little dish. I was surprised to see it hop down to it quickly and there was never again trouble with that little bird's baths. The little tramp, as I had called it, became a clean little gentleman."

Birds go to the club sometimes to learn good table manners. Some of them are very naughty about scattering seed out of the dishes onto the floor. It is a bad habit which can be broken. Parrots sometimes have not the bath habit because in their native climates there are heavy dews and they are not accustomed to the baths taken by smaller birds. A spray bath with an atomiser or plant sprayer twice a week keeps them clean and happy.

Birds are subject to all sorts of ills which affect human beings. They have indigestion if they have poor seed; they are sure to get rheumatism if their perches are left damp, they have a variety of typhoid fever, and it is bad for any of them to hang in drafts or out of doors, and they may have different affections of the lungs. Very ill birds are sometimes given a Turkish bath by being fastened to a hot-water bag and a cloth placed over them to induce perspiration.

From Canaries to Crows.

Canaries, of course, predominate in numbers in the clubhouse, but there are birds of all kinds, including the various-talented parrots. Aside from those already mentioned, Polly Shapard talks and also sings "Yankee Doodle." There is a Panama parrot whose accomplishment is singing "Tipperary"; one parrot crows like a cock, and of two others, mates, Polly and Abe, one whistles the "Merry Widow Waltz," and the other dances the waltz on his perch.

There is a big black crow who used to speak German, but cannot now be induced to say a word in the language. Little white love birds with red bills have big round empty cocoanut shells for nests, and very cunning they look in them when they go to sleep at night with little heads out at the round opening. Miss Pope has reason to love cockatoos, for one of them, Bob, saved her life at one time, pecking her cheek early one morning, awakening her to the smell of smoke and a fire.

Some of the most valuable birds in the club at present are the brilliant black-and-yellow tropicals, which can learn the sound of musical instruments and to sound a bugle call. One of these in a big roomy cage was being prepared the other day for a trip to England. Part of his food was being sent with him, seed and meal worms, and there were full directions for a further diet of egg, chicken, apples, etc., that could be served to him from the ship's table. He went off with a messenger, his future owner being a little English girl. An unusual bird of distinguished appearance which is a permanent guest is a corilla which once belonged to Margaret Anglin, the actress. If you are selecting parrots they will tell you at the club that the South African is the best imitator and the Mexican and South American have the biggest repertoires.

Ambulance for the Hospital.

The club hospital has had its own ambulance, a pretty thing that a child would like for a plaything, a little covered affair similar to a regular ambulance and drawn by a tiny horse. It was a feature in some of the animal league parades. There is a surgical department to the hospital and birds' wings and legs when broken can often be set satisfactorily. There is also a little bird burying ground out in Buffalo, where they are sure of an undisturbed resting place. Two little love birds shared one of these little coffins. The first had been ill and died and was brought to the club to be prepared for burial, and in the meantime its mate died of grief and loneliness and they were buried together.

New York does not stand first in the cities of the country in its love and care for birds, Miss Pope says. Boston has that honor; Philadelphia is second and this city third. New York birds have their manicures, however. Well-cared-for birds have their bills and claws trimmed every so often.

Pricked by a Pin

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Leone, Jane and their mother were returning from France, where they had helped, in the way women did, to win the war.

On board the same steamer was a captain of infantry, who had been wounded severely in the leg and for that reason was one of the first to get invalided home when the battle-line guns became silent. The captain walked with a limp, which would always be with him, but it didn't detract from his good looks or charming personality.

The captain and Leone carried on an outrageous flirtation. Perhaps it was a reaction from the serious business that had just been finished; perhaps they would have flirted anyhow. Be that as it may, flirt they did. He was only twenty-five and she twenty-one.

Every morning on the voyage they met on deck and spent the greater part of the day together. He made love, more or less violently, and she permitted it. Of course, he was only fooling, she thought; and so was she, was what she told herself.

The last night at sea the moon was full, and their talk waxed more sentimental than usual. It became time for both to retire, and he pleaded that she tell him her real name. Yes, it had been an outrageous flirtation—the kind where you don't tell your real name.

"No, there's no use," she said. "We'll never see each other again. We've both been fooling in this love business, but I'll admit it's been lots of fun. But now we must go our separate ways and forget about each other."

"Just a minute," he begged. "Won't you give me some little keepsake—something by which to remember this very pleasant journey?"

She laughed, and from her waist detached a tiny gold pin and handed it to him. She had broken the clasp on it only that morning and had pricked herself rather painfully. She had intended throwing it away, because it was now useless, but had absent-mindedly fastened it to her waist.

The captain took the pin and attached it to the under side of his coat lapel.

"Good-night," he said, and there was a yearning look in his eyes. "I think you are cruel to leave me like this—but somehow, some day, with the aid of this keepsake, I'll track you. And when I do—"

Leone went to her berth and smiled as she drifted off to sleep. She was young and frivolous, in addition to being exceedingly attractive.

During the year and a half that ensued, Leone became less frivolous and less young, although not less attractive. Of course, she did not take on age or sedateness, but her character developed a great deal in those eighteen months.

Sometimes Leone's thoughts roved back to the journey across the Atlantic and the handsome captain who had flirted with her; and she began to wish she had not flirted, that she had allowed herself and him to be more sincere.

"My opportunity came and I passed it up," she told herself. "I have come to believe he was the right man. But he's probably married now, or perhaps he's dead or in China. I should have given my name and address and learned his."

And then her thoughts were running as the roadster sped over the highway from Jackson to Oak Lake. The Jarvis home was in Jackson, and Oak Lake was a small summer resort where they had a cottage and where her sister Jane's wedding to a returned war hero was to take place this very day. Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis were there and Leone was hurrying to be there. The wedding was scheduled for three in the afternoon and it was two as she approached the halfway point where a new resort was springing into existence. She had an hour to travel the thirty miles remaining before her, and it ought to be easy.

Leone's thoughts were of the flirting captain as she approached a house that was being erected beside the road.

This was the house that Fred Richards had a contract to build. He had been a builder all his life, following in the footsteps of his father, and when he laid aside his khaki he went into business on his own account; and some whim of fate sent him to Kenelworth county.

Fred was anxious over the contract. He was behind on his schedule, due to a scarcity of carpenters. So he donned an apron and went at driving nails in earnest.

On the day of Jane Jarvis' wedding Fred hung out of a window in the upper story of the new house and adjusted some old-fashioned shutters that the owner of the domicile insisted should be an adornment of his new abode.

It was an awkward position Fred was forced to put himself in in order to perform the task, and perhaps that was the reason he lost his balance and nearly fell when he pulled a hammer from a pocket and the prongs caught in his clothes. He managed to regain his equilibrium, but in the struggle he had detached a small trinket he had been wearing. This trinket, in falling, somehow managed to receive considerable propelling force.

Just as Leone Jarvis' roadster passed the house she heard an ominous hissing, followed by a thump, thump, thump.

The feeling of vexation developed into anger when she discovered a bent nail clinging to the flat tire. She became furious when she considered the position it placed her in. She would be late to her sister's wedding; for she had no spare tire and it would take some time to repair the damage.

"Those carpenters are to blame," she raged, as she heard several hammers pounding in the new house beside the road. "They ought to help me."

She strode toward the house and accosted the first man she saw. He was leaning out of a second story window adjusting a green shutter.

"I have a puncture—and you're to blame," she called. "I picked up a nail you left on the road, and I'm stranded and in a horrible hurry, too. What are you going to do about it?"

The man looked down at her, rather whimsically it seemed.

"What'll we do about it?" he echoed. "Why, we'll fix the thing, of course. That's the only thing to do, isn't it?"

He disappeared from the window and presently came limping out of the house.

His eyes became big and round as he looked at her, standing as though dazed. But his eyes were no bigger or rounder than Leone's, and he was no more dazed. However, by a struggle they regained their composure and without uttering a word walked to the stalled roadster.

"The nail didn't cause the puncture," he said, pulling it from the flat tire. "See, it scarcely penetrates the surface of the casing."

He crouched on the road and examined the tire carefully.

"Here it is," he said presently, and with the aid of a pair of pliers which she handed him he pulled an object from the tire and held it up. At first he looked puzzled, and then a broad smile crept across his face, and her countenance assumed a duplicate of it.

"I told you," he said, straightening up, his eyes bright with a strange light and his voice sounding as musical as it did that night when the moon was full. "I told you it would help me track you, and then—. Will you—will you forgive me for the puncture?"

"Yes," she said, meeting his frank gaze with one just as frank and as sincere, "I will. I'm—I'm glad it happened—even if it does make me late for sister's wedding."

It was, of course, a tiny gold pin with a broken clasp.

He carefully attached the trinket to the under side of a coat lapel.

"I Have a Puncture—and You're to Blame," She Called.

AWFUL CONDITIONS IN INDIA

Worst in 45 Years, Says a Baptist Foreign Missionary Society Report.

New York.—Economic conditions in India now are the worst in the last 45 years, according to a survey by the American Baptist Foreign Missionary society, made public here. The report, prepared by Rev. W. L. Ferguson, describes a state of "unrest, with political and social disorders such as India has not known for centuries, if ever."

"Conditions in south India have equaled the worst ever known to the inhabitants of that poverty-stricken country," it continues. "Our mission stations, besieged day and night by throngs of hungry people crying for food, were able to offer but slight aid, the appeal was so great. Men and women, through sheer weakness, staggered about like drunken people. Suffering was intensified by lack of drinking water, while an epidemic of cholera took great tolls of human life.

"Our missionaries provided relief to the best of their ability, and for months over a hundred children without protection, food or clothing were fed and sheltered at the Baptist compound at Sooriapett. Famine camps set up by the government often fed as many as 5,000 at a time.

"Historic old shade trees were stripped of all foliage to provide fodder for the cattle. In ordinary times the lopping off of a single bran h of one of these would have been considered a crime."

Life and Death Unity.

Life is a state which follows upon death. Death is a state which precedes life. Which of us understands the laws that govern their succession?

The life of man is the resultant of forces. The aggregation of these forces is life; their dispersion, death. If, then, life and death are but consecutive states of existence, what cause for sorrow have I?

And so it is that all things are but phases of unity, according to H. A. Giles in translated "Gems From Chinese Literature." What men delight in is the spiritual essence of life. What they loathe is the material corruption of death. But this state of corruption gives place to that state of spirituality and that state of spirituality gives place in turn to this state of corruption. Therefore we may say that all in the universe is comprised in unity, and therefore the inspired among us have adopted unity as their criterion.

A New Ambition.

"Is your hired man still talking of leaving you?"

"No," said Mr. Cobbles. "He has changed his mind."

"What caused him to do that?"

"I persuaded one of my summer boarders to pose as an heiress and flirt with him. He now has an idea that it would be easier to marry money than to work for it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Will Buy "My Old Kentucky Home."

Kentucky has taken another step toward the purchase of Federal Hill in Nelson county, where "My Old Kentucky Home" was written. Governor Morrow has appointed a commission to obtain an option on the old home of Stephen C. Foster, the author of the famous song. The commission will report to the next session of the general assembly. Foster's old home is near Bardstown.

Accused of Pantslegging.

Columbus, Ga.—Bill Bailey, a negro, has only one leg, but he finds plenty of use for the vacant leg of his trousers. When arrested on a charge of boot-legging, a quart of whisky and a live chicken were found in the vacant trousers leg. The charge was changed to pants-legging.

British Workers Send Greetings.

Portsmouth, England. — British workers, in convention here, sent a message of greeting to American workers on the occasion of Labor day in the United States. The message signed by Ben Smith of the textile workers, Robert Smillie of the coal miners, Harry Gosling of the transport workers and O. E. Cramp of the railway men, said: "English labor stretches its hand across the seas in a grasp of brotherly friendship to its American cousins. International solidarity means a steady movement toward world peace and progress."

He Dropped Her Hand When the Bear Growled

New York.—A young man and a young woman were walking along Ferris avenue in White Plains holding hands and talking of the future, when they heard something grunt and say, "Woof! Woof!" behind them.

"A pig," said the young woman. "How funny a pig should be out at night!"

But it didn't sound to the young man like a pig. He turned and looked and saw a big black bear ambling along not more than ten feet behind them. Both he and the young woman went home without further comment.

Since that time at least five persons have complained to the White Plains police that the bear has interrupted their wanderings along Ferris avenue. The animal appears to operate along Cemetery road also. The first two or three nights the bear was alone, but three people told the police that the animal had a couple of little ones along. Plenty of tracks have been found.

Society Stunts

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Edwards, of 71 Belvidere Ave., honored Mother Edwards with a 12 o'clock chicken dinner, October 13th. The following guests were present:

Meadames E. Blackwell, L. Foor, Sarah Edwards, M. G. Swaney, L. A. Howard, E. E. Gillilan, M. M. Marshall, Hannah Ballamy, and Margaret Edwards

The table bouquet was pink and white dahlias, the cream and cake in the same delicate hue. There was no formality, no toast master, but much lively talk while all did full justice to the feast of good eats. The impromptu program of the afternoon was interesting and unique. Every one was requested to sing a song, recite a poem, tell a story or relate some event. Mother Edwards, with a happy expression on her face and a gleam in her soul-speaking eyes, recited a poem in Welsh then interpreted in English.

Mrs. Gillilan gave a vivid description of the Mammoth Cave and then chatted something which she said was in Chinese, but declined to expound.

Mrs. Marshall told a laughable Irish story, but vouched for its being true.

Mrs. Ballamy told of a recent visit to Niagara and Mrs. Margaret Edwards of a trip through Southern Ohio and West Virginia.

But space forbids details, suffice to say it was a very pleasant occasion. All did well their part.

One of the Guests.

Rev. E. B. White, pastor of Burgess Avenue United Brethren Church, like some of the rest of us, has a birthday ocasionally. This time it happened on October 12th. A bunch of his friends got next to the fact, and sneaked, in a great multitude, to his home on South Warren avenue. A person seeing them on their way would have thought they were carrying donations, but, oh no, 'twas supplies for a "grand and glorious" feast to come after Rev. and Mrs. White had recovered from their surprise. The following Messrs. and Meedames were there: E. J. Swaney, G. C. Amrine, A. L. Callendine, Ed. Wallam, E. G. Rockey, R. D. Nawberry, J. S. Howell, P. Gleason, G. W. Wymer, C. L. Davis, F. Engard, R. C. Wilcox, Kinsel, Fred Sites, Cathers, B. F. Beaville, Earl Zuck, also Messrs. Schofelt, I. J. Livingston, Fletcher, J. E. Newell, Rohlin Kohn, and Meedames Hibbler, Hoeflich, and Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Harris of Westerville.

---

A most enjoyable evening was spent Thursday, October 14, at Miss Helen Oliver's, the occasion being a masquerade party. Those present were: Ella Lamprecht, Marjorie Slater, Dorothy Prior, Clara Slyh, Eleanor Moorman, Anna Moone, Cloreus Halsey, Helen Hoffman, Ruth Mills, Geraldine Larrick, Gloria Keets, Velma Herron and Helen Oliver; Burd Miller, Richard Smith, Clarence Isom, Walter Kidd, Fred Dean, Robert Nowell, Robert Watson, Victor Westlake, James Moones, Norman Dye, Heber Kellar, Sanford Kaufman, Paul Knowon and Karher Schlaep.

---

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will give a chicken dinner at K. of P. Hall, 37½ E. Long St. on Friday, October 29th. The price wil be 50 cents.

---

Mrs. Dora Sandee Bachman, non-partisan candidate for common pleas judge, of which there are four to be elected, will speak at the home of Mrs. Chas. W. Lents, 25 North Harris avenue, next Saturday afternoon at 2:30. All women voters are cordially invited to come.

One of the prettiest events was had at the home of Mrs. O. Hungelman, 32 South Hague avenue, when she entertained the friends and neighbors to a hit and miss shower for Miss Bertha Rausch, 92 South Hague avenue, whose marriage to Donald Lear, South Eureka avenue, will take place Saturday. The hostess had as a center decoration to her dining room table a life size keupie dressed as a bride. Refreshments were served, then the bride-elect opened her many beautiful presents and joins in thanking you all. Present: Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. Rausch, Mrs. Kramer, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Lear, Miss Emma and Catherine Fisher, Miss Mayme Byrle, Mrs. J. Heinds and Mrs. Scheiderer and Miss Bessie Fisher.

OBITUARY

Salome Jennings Kerr, daughter of David and Alice Crawford Kerr, born Nov. 5, 1836, in Carmichaels, Green County, Pennsylvania, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Daniel Jerman, Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 13, 1920, aged 83 years, 11 months and 8 days.

She was the oldest of six children. Her brothers and sisters were: Huston H. Kerr, Mary Lucinda Fisher, Margaret Holmes, Rebecca G. Stanley, Phebe Alice Blake.

When six years of age she, with her parents, moved to Albany, Ohio, where she resided until her marriage to Andrew H. Holmes Dec. 28, 1854. To this union was born nine children, four of which preceded her in death: Costello Crawford, Fanny Alice, Wm. David and John Kerr Lynn.

Those living are: James Huston, Pasadena, Calif., Dr. Andrew Frederick, Toledo, O., Loma Lulu, Columbus, O., Phebe Wallace (wife of Daniel Jerman), Columbus, O., and Everett P. Holmes, Lost Angeles, Calif.

She was left a widow Sept. 3, 1899.

In 1875 she (with her husband) united with the F. W. Baptist Church at Albany, O., and has always lived a Christian life, a devoted wife, a loving mother.

Her health had been greatly impaired for years. At times her suffering was intense, and during the past two years her physical condition was such that it was marvelous that she could live. Until a few moments before her death her condition did not appear different from other times. Conscious to the end, her last words were, "I am dying."

The evolution of life resolves itself to one thing which is certain—that it cannot attain perfection short of Immortality—and death alone can part the veil which leads to that mysterious realm.

The body was taken to Albany, O. The funeral was conducted at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rebecca G. Stanley, after which the remains were buried in Hebbardsville cemetery.

The family greatly aprpeciate the kindness and sympathy extended to them from many friends and for the beautiful flowers. Also the words of condolence from Rev. E. E. Shields.

HOW TO VOTE

It is surprising the number of people that do not know how to vote. In order to teach the people how to vote correctly, an entertainment has been arranged for at West Broad Street School Auditorium on Monday evening, October 25th, at 8 o'clock, at which expert will teach the community how to vote. This is not a political affair in any form. Good music and entertainment free for everybody. Come and bring your friends.

The Robbins-Greiser School of Music at 67 Midland Ave. is meeting with great success. Miss Robins and Miss Greiser wish to thank the Hilltop people for their co-operation.

For a long time there has been need of a School of Music in this end of town. The daily registration of pupils show that need is being granted.

The following letter received may be of interest to those who wish to know what kind of backing the Robbins-Greiser School has:

Cincinnati Conservatory of Music,
Sept. 15th, 1920.

Dear Edith:

What energetic young women you are. I must take time to send you my congratulations and love. With every good wish for tremendous success.

Alway your Affectionate friend.

Church Doings

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran

Services at 10:30 and 7:00 o'clock. Morning topic: "Why Does God Permit His People to Suffer?"

Evening topic: "The Scriptures Which Testify of Christ."

On Friday evening the Luther League will celebrate the Reformation festival in the chapel. Rev. C. E. Mechling will preach.

HILLTOP CHURCH OF CHRIST

A. M. Sermon: "How to See God."

P. M. Sermon: An address by T. W. Lee of Korea.

He will speak on the internal conditions in his country at the present time.

HILL-CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30: "Paying Your Debts."

7:30 P. M.: "Will God Empty Hell?"

This will be a clear, concise and convincing answer to Universalism, Russellism and all advocates of A Second Chance. It will be sane, scriptural and satisfying. Don't allow yourself to be bound by prejudice but hear and then judge. Don't rest on a false hope or on some pet scheme that any person brings up. You would not go to a butcher for medicine for your sick girl, but to a doctor, a well-trained man in his field. Why not use the same common sense in religion? Don't allow any half trained Tom, Dick or Harry to ram his theory down your throat. Hear one who is trained and equipped for the job.

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Worshipful service at 10:30. Rev. Dr. S. A. Stephen will preach at this service upon the subject: "Christ's Ministry to the Physical Man."

Evening service at 7:00. The pastor will preach on "The Walls of Jericho."

A cordial invitation is extended to all these services. C. F. Bowman, pastor.

The Hallowe'en Festival being arranged by the membership of our church bids fair to be a great success. The time is Friday evening, October 29th, at 7:30. Do not miss it.

Mrs. M. M. Marshall will review the Sunday School lesson for next Sunday and teach the Teacher Training class Friday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

The regular meeting of the Fourth Division of the Ladies' Aid Society will be at the home of Miss Dora Major, Tuesday, October 26th, at 2:00 o'clock. All members are requested to be present, as this is the time for election of officers.

THE HOGE MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

10:30 A. M., morning worship and sermon: "The Leisure Problem."

Children's sermon: "Three Johns."

6:30 Senior Christian Endeavor meets.

7:30 P. M., evening worship and sermon: "The Inaugural of Jesus."

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. G. E. Robbins has chosen for his morning topic: "What Ails Your Faith?"

Evening: "Lose Your Life That You May Save Your Life," a paradoxical problem.

If you want to get your money's worth come Sunday morning. Your intellect will be fed and your heart warmed.

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. J. M. Wenrich, the pastor of this church, is in Washington, D. C., attending the convention of the United Lutheran Church in America whose sessions run from Oct. 19th to Oct. 28th. The oldest Lutheran Synod in America—the Ministerium of Pennsylvania—is a member of this body. Next Sunday a student of Hamma Divinity School, Springfield, O., will preach at the usual hour, 10:30 a. m. Come and hear him. You know the place—the Friendly Church on the corner.

BURGESS AVE U. B.

Rev. A. B. Cox of Circleville will exchange pulpit with Rev. E. E. White both morning and evening.

ST. PAUL UNITED EVANGELICAL

10:15, preaching. Subject: "Palm Tree Christians."

7:00 o'clock, preaching. Subject: "Is the Book of John a Myth?"

The St. Paul United Evangelical Intermediate Society invites you to attend their Sunday evening meeting at six o'clock. Leader, Ruth Willis. Topic: Lessons from Recent Events. Mrs. Gladys Wilcox will be with us and favor us with a vocal selection. All members please be present.

Keep Warm the Moore's Way

Why blister and freeze, alternately, with a poor heating stove, when you can just as well have a good one and be comfortable

There are too many useful and good things to do while we live to be spending our energies on chills and fever.

A poor heating system is a good forerunner of colds and sickness.

Through the scientific construction of Moore's Air Tight Heater, large volumes of warm air are circulated all over the room, yet the outer casing never gets hot.

Therefore, it can be set in a corner or closer to the walls without danger; and the blacking will not burn off.

look alive. We are here for work."

With no further comment, the one called Johnny picked up a large armchair and proceeded down stairs. From then on he did not hesitate or stop, and Marjorie, absorbed in directing the removal of her household goods, forgot the incident of the picture.

A few weeks later one Sunday afternoon Marjorie sat in the park outside her new home. After all, the new rooms were attractive, overlooking the park, with its ever-changing scenes of human interest. Then Jim seemed less interested in his love affair. Altogether, life was looking quite gay. Raising her eyes from her book, she was conscious of a young man, shabbily dressed, looking at her from the opposite bench.

"Pardon me," he said, moving over to her side of the walk. "Of course, you don't know me, but I am one of the men who moved you down from Fifty-fourth street. Somehow, I don't think you look too proud to speak to me."

"I am glad you spoke," she said. "What you said about my brother's picture of the Acropolis interested me. We were interrupted and I never learned—"

"You never learned why a moving man was interested in pictures," he interrupted. "You see, the thing is, my brother took that picture. And, you know, one usually sees just the front view of the building; this is so entirely different, and, knowing that there are only two copies in existence, I just wondered how you had come by it."

"Billy Joudrey left it to my brother. He was killed at the front. Perhaps your brother told you," Marjorie answered.

"I'll admit," he said, "being a moving man isn't exactly what you would expect of the brother of a chap who does such highbrow things as heading excavation parties to Greece. Moving pays mighty well, and especially the tips." If Marjorie had caught his eye, then she would have seen an amused expression flit over his face.

This was the first of many Sunday meetings between Marjorie and her "park beau," as Jim called him. The four of them, Jim, and the girl of his heart, Marjorie and John, frequently had supper together in the little apartment. John remained a mystery, as there seemed no connecting link but Billy Joudrey. Jim could not remember who Billy had said had given him the picture of the Acropolis. So John came and went giving no hint as to his identity.

In the fall Marjorie went back to her studies. She was working hard, and while she and Jim commented on the absence of John, who suddenly disappeared from view, absorption in their work made Marjorie almost forget what now seemed almost like a summer dream. Jim, who was an electrical engineer, found himself more and more taken up with his work. His love affair was at a standstill, as Eleanor Johnson had gone South with an invalid mother.

"We are going pretty dull," he said one morning, as they hastily ate their breakfast. "I'll try for tickets for the opera if you say so."

"Oh, yes, do. We will dress up for a change," said Marjorie.

A little later, hurrying up the subway steps, her arms full of books, she saw a familiar pair of shoulders in front. "What on earth is John doing up here?" she wondered.

"Hello, John," she said as she caught up with him. "Are you off the moving job?"

"I'll come around and explain; it's too long a story now, when we are both late as it is," he replied.

"We are going to Faust tonight. You couldn't by any chance get a seat?" asked Marjorie.

"Oh, yes; season ticket," answered the surprising man. "I'll call you up at dinner time, and find out where your seats are. No, I can't come to dinner; thank you—Good-by until tonight," and he was off.

Marjorie in her black evening dress, her glorious auburn hair coiled becomingly about her head, and her beautiful white neck with its single string of family pearls made a striking picture.

"Clothes do change one's whole point of view," she remarked to Jim. "Why don't we do this sort of thing oftener?"

Jim, going off to smoke between the acts, met John on his way to Marjorie. "Hello, old chap," he exclaimed. "We almost need an introduction."

Taking Jim's vacant seat, John said, "I suppose you are wondering who and what I am. I will give you 'Who's Who.'

"John Endicott, born in Cambridge, age thirty-five. Graduate of Harvard, class of 1900. Archaeologist. Winner of the Marathon races. Head of the archaeological expedition to Greece in 1912. In the summer of 1917 moving man for Brown Bros. Met Marjorie Blake. The rest to be written."

"But why the moving man?" asked Marjorie.

"It was a wager that a friend put up to me. He said I was too luxury loving, and it would do me good to take a good stiff job with no romance such as Greek sunsets attached. And I wasn't to let any one know who and what I was. But I found the romance even there, Marjorie. And it's up to you to complete the 'Who's Who.'"

Late that evening, as they sat by the fire, Jim having tactfully retired, John laughed and said: "Do you know what I did with my tips? Used to buy books with them and write in the front—'John Endicott from Watson Jones, etc.'"

"The one you bought with mine must have been very little!" she queried.

"Some day you will see," he answered. And the fire-lit room grew very still, as the old story repeated itself once more.

A Romance of Soaring Rents

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Marjorie sat somewhat disconsolately on a packing box, awaiting the arrival of the moving man. She was disconsolate, first, because after three years in their pleasant apartment she and her brother, Jim, were obliged to move because of soaring rents. They had found a modest "walk-up" facing a small park, in an unfashionable part of town. Of course they would get used to it, but Marjorie was one who clung tenaciously to old surroundings, and readjustment was painful. They had had good times in the little apartment—she and Jim, fresh from the small Western town.

The moving from the apartment marked a new era, but even more did the fact that on Tom's horizon loomed a woman. If he was as serious as he appeared to be, Marjorie would have to look for a separate place to bestow her household goods.

Her melancholy reverie was interrupted by a sharp peal at the doorbell—the moving men. Wasting no time, they seized upon the larger pieces of furniture and were soon carrying them dexterously downstairs.

Marjorie had only noticed them as a group, calculating anxiously the size of the tip required for the quartet. She was, therefore, somewhat startled to see one of them gazing intently at a picture standing face upward against the wall.

"Excuse me, miss," he said, "but, you know, that's rather out of the ordinary, that view of the Acropolis one usually sees—"

Marjorie's eyebrows went up unconsciously. "You are wondering," he said, answering her questioning look, "what I know about pictures, but—"

Here he was interrupted by a voice from behind. "Here you, Johnny;

A Tombstone for Susan

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"For the love o' Pete!" Jeremiah Hart leaned over the fence and watched with amazed eyes as Oscar Plumb, the local stonecutter, chipped away at a slab of snowy marble. "Is Susie Rickets dead?" he gasped at last.

Oscar's teeth gripped his pipe and he turned a wary eye toward Susan Ricketts' windows. He was nervously aware that Susan was watching him from some vantage point and he wondered whether she would object most to the marble chips on her orchard grass or to the fact that he was wasting some of her time to speak to a passing neighbor.

"No, she ain't dead," he said, after a while.

"Not dead?" insisted Jeremiah incredulously.

"Not yet!" roared Oscar. "Not yet!"

"Sick?"

"Nope."

"Then—why—the tombstone?"

"Because she wanted to—that's reason enough—it's enough for me," he suddenly chuckled. "The Ricketses always was forehanded, y' know, Jerry."

Jeremiah sagged weakly against the fence. His mind was incapable of readjustment after such a shock. First the sight of Oscar Plumb sitting in Susan Rickets' orchard, placidly cutting into a slab of white marble, was disturbing enough—Oscar's place for chipping tombstones was in his little stoneyard by the river, or, on rare occasions, in the churchyard. Second, the idea of Susan's thinking of anything so practical was absurd in itself.

"Not Yet!" Roared Oscar. "Not Yet!"

She was a cheery little thing, sought by everyone who needed help—girls brought their love affairs to her sympathetic ear, and married women confided their minor troubles, while in their hearts they pitied her because she did not belong to their ranks.

With these thoughts revolving in his mind, like the wheel in a squirrel cage, Jeremiah watched Oscar's bright tools as he chiseled out the letters—"S-U-S-A—"

"Unless she dies right away—why, she might get married before she gets a chance to use it," burst out Jeremiah.

Oscar nodded. "And if Ed Finney comes home and marries her and she couldn't use it because of her name not being Rickets any more—a good tombstuud'd go to waste," he said gloomily.

Jeremiah groaned and plodded on to the post office, where he found the usual crowd of loungers, with the added interest of several strangers who had arrived on the mail train. One of these, a big, brown man, dealt Jeremiah a stinging slap on the shoulder and then gripped his hand.

"Well, Jerry Hart, I'll bet you don't know me!" he boomed in a deep voice.

"Dog-gone it, I don't wanter," snarled Jeremiah, backing off, and every one laughed.

The stranger rubbed Jeremiah's shoulder. "I'm sorry, Jerry, but it pays you back for the licking you gave me once down by the old frog pond—don't remember Ed Finney?"

"Ed Finney! What'd you come home for? Thought all your folks moved out to Idaho?"

"So they did—I came East to sell some cattle—and thought I'd take a look around the old town," smiled Ed Finney, but Jeremiah thought there was a purpose behind the careless glance of those gray eyes. He stood aside while Ed shook hands and joked with his old friends and after a while he reached out and touched Mr. Finney's neat blue serge arm.

"You're staying with us while you're here, Ed. Come along now—Lucy'll give you raspberry shortcake with thick cream—you know I married Lucy Bee," he reminded the prodigal son of Rosedale as they walked down the street.

"Lucy Bee—I remember—sweetest girl in Rosedale—barring one," said Ed, reminiscently.

A light came into Jeremiah's dull brown eyes. It was the greatest moment of his life for the instant his hand was on the wheel of destiny. "Hark," he said, inclining his sandy head.

They both stopped short and listened. Through the mellow evening air came the fluting song of a robin—the soft, high "tweeeeeeet" of swallows dipping in the golden light—and the clinking sound of metal against stone.

"What's that?" asked Ed, curiously. "Cow bells?"

"That's Oscar Plumb chippin' a tombstun—you remember Oscar?"

"Yes; I remember—who's dead?"

"He's a chippin' a stone for Susie Rickets!"

"Jerry!" Ed Finney grasped the other's arm, and this time Jeremiah kept perfectly still.

"It surprised me, too," said Jeremiah.

In the silence the robin sang to its mate and the swallows dipped in pools of sunshine. When Ed spoke his voice was strained. "Jerry, I came home to marry her—we quarreled two years ago and I went off—I was a crazy loon in those days, but I've learned a lot—and one thing is that she is the best girl in the world—and it breaks my heart that I've got to go back West without her——"

Jerry nodded. "She's had a tough time of it, but cheery as a little wren—Lucy and I know how good she can be—and almost everybody says the same—you really want to marry her, Ed?"

Ed nodded curtly. His gray eyes were tragic—he wore the look of a man who has followed Joy over hills and mountains and through deep valleys and has lost sight of her forever.

"Come along," said Jeremiah. "We got to pass the house."

They passed the cozy little house and came to the orchard, where Oscar Plumb was showing the half completed work to Susan Rickets, who dimpled and sparkled in the sunset glow like the flashing swallows with their glints of sooty black—that was her hair; warm brown—her eyes; and deep blue—her pretty cotton dress.

Oscar saw them and called over, "Here, Jeremiah, Susie wants me to put 'spinster' under 'Susan Ricketts' and I tell her there's a plenty time yet to get married—cricky—Ed, how be ye?"

"Beat it!" commanded Mr. Finney, as he leaped the fence like a school boy and gathered the astonished Susie Rickets into his arms.

Oscar picked up a few tools and fled through the back way, casting one backward glance, that caused him to chuckle delightedly. But Jeremiah, dizzy with the whirl of events and feeling that the wheel of Destiny had been wrested from his grip by the efficient Mr. Finney, hastened home to his Lucy with astounding news.

"And he looked at her and she looked at him just like you look at me, Lucy," he finished softly. "Understand?"

Little Lucy blushed and nodded and laid her pretty head on his heart. "We know!" she murmured.

It was eleven o'clock at night and the circus performance had given way to the night horse show at the fair says the Indianapolis News. A little girl stood up on the seat and gasped in astonishment as the finest horses she had ever seen were led around the ring. Still more horses were led into the tanbark circle and paraded before the large assembly. Bringing up the rear of the procession were the Shetland ponies, so small that for a time they escaped the notice of the little girl. Then she saw them.

"Oh," she said. "I think they might put those little ones to bed, anyway."

CLAIMS HE IS CZAR NICHOLAS

Claimant to Throne of Russia Reported to Be Gathering Support in Siberia.

SAYS SERVANT WAS KILLED

Present Soviet Government Has Offered 2,000,000 Rubles for Alleged Pretender's Head—Pretenders of Bygone Days.

New York.—A recent dispatch from London brings the information that a man purporting to be Czar Nicholas II of Russia is raising a large following in Siberia. According to his allegations, he asserts that it was one of his faithful servants who was killed in his place by the bolsheviki at Ekaterinburg over two years ago. The present soviet government has offered a reward of 2,000,000 rubles for this alleged pretender's head.

If this man is an impostor another name can be added to the long list of pretenders to the crowns of Europe. In bygone days some were successful in establishing their claims, while others paid the penalty for their false allegations on the guillotine. One of the successful claimants to a throne of Europe proved to be a wise and able ruler.

About [illegible] mysterious stranger appeared in York, Ireland, where the people greeted him as the brother of Edward IV of England, but he denied this. They then claimed that he was the son of Richard III, and he denied this too. But at length he admitted that he was the duke of York, one of the two princes whom it was believed Richard III had murdered in the tower of London.

Members of the nobility came from England, and after questioning the stranger they were convinced that he was the duke of York. He then called himself Richard Plantagenet, duke of York, son of Edward IV, and by right of succession Richard IV of England.

Henry VII was then ruler of England, and he did all in his power to thwart the designs of the new claimant to the throne. He succeeded in driving him out of France by forcing Charles VIII to banish him, and he defeated him when he invaded England from Scotland. Richard IV then sought refuge in Cornwall and later marched on London at the head of 7,000 Cornishmen who rallied to his banner, but he was defeated and taken prisoner.

Admitted He Was Adventurer.

It was said that Henry VII obtained a confession from him by torture. He admitted that he was one Perkin Warbeck, an adventurer from Picardy. After several weeks in the public stocks this pretender was executed.

James II became unpopular by favoring the church of Rome, so William and Mary were invited to accept the throne of England, since Mary was the eldest child of Charles II. But a year before they assumed their regal duties it was announced that James' consort was about to present him with an heir.

However, a rumor spread that James was about to pass off on the unsuspecting public as his heir a child that was not his own. The birth of Prince James Francis Edward Stuart, who was known in later years as the Chevalier St. George, was witnessed by persons not really believed by the people. The following year James II was forced to flee to France.

Many years later the two daughters of Sir Theophilus Ogiethorpe, who was a faithful follower of James II, were overheard by Frances Shaftoe, a seamstress, to remark that James Stuart, the Chevalier St. George, was their brother. One night the queen's infant died of convulsions at Windsor and Lady Ogiethorpe brought her son, nine days older, to the castle and he was substituted for the prince.

Ogiethorpe's daughters had Frances Shaftoe confined in a French convent when they learned she shared their secret, but she succeeded in sending word to her mother. When it was published that Ogiethorpe's son was supposed to be the prince the Chevalier St. George's plans in Scotland failed.

Catherine's Coup.

Immediately after Catharine and Peter III ascended the throne of Russia Catharine had her husband thrown into prison and later reported his death. Five years later a stranger who said he was Czar Peter III turned up in Montenegro. The people of the country were sorely in need of a ruler so they asked the alleged Peter to lead their armies in battle, and later he took over the reins of government under the title of Stephen the Little. He established courts of law and bettered living conditions throughout the country.

Catharine soon learned that Montenegro was a power to be reckoned with, so she denounced Stephen as an impostor. He was thrown into jail and a representative of Catharine visited him. Presumably they came to some agreement and Stephen was permitted to return to his throne.

Newark.—Police here are on the lookout for a new kind of rent profiteer—the kind who accepts deposits, but has nothing to rent. Scores of anxious would-be tenants complained to the authorities that they had made deposits, ranging from $10 to $20, to a man who strutted around new apartment buildings posing as the landlord.

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, October 28, 1920 No. 28

Have you bought your Lecture Course ticket yet? Don't miss the best thing that's ever come to the Hilltop. Buy now and come to the first number on November 3. The Irene Stolofskey Co. will put on something worth listening to in the way of violin, singing, reading, and whistling. Come and bring your friends, but first buy the $1.00 ticket which entitles you to attend 5 big numbers. Children's tickets are 50c. You can purchase these tickets from any officer or teacher of Glenwood Sunday school or from the following business places: Dr. Whitehead's office, S. W. Six's grocery, L. M. & M. W. Seiler's Dry Goods, Fred Sulsberger, Jeweler, H. M. Pryor, Hardware, and M. Van Meter at Carlile & Kerr Furniture Store.

Troop 33 Boy Scouts of America is a bunch of young men and boys of the Hilltop. The term "young men" being used because they are as stated, every one a clean cut, religious and uplifting boy. The Troop consists of some twenty boys each carrying as splendid a character as any boy ever had. The residents of the Hilltop can boast of this Troop of Scouts and point to it with pride. Why? Although only twenty enrolled they are the kind that make the real men of our busy world. When one of these boys apply for a position in any large corporation and state they have been a member of a Troop of Scouts they are sure of getting a job with that concern worthy of mention.

The boys of Troop 33 are those who attend schools in our city and who take pride in the fact that they live on the Hilltop. And the residents here will have an opportunity to show the boys they are for them through thick and thin. A drive will be opened by Troop 33 in the month of November for the small sum of $500 to build for them a cabin. Something every one should contribute to and make the dream these boys have had for three years come true. Anyone giving to this movement will be more than repaid, for not only will this benefit the troop but show the spirit the Hilltopers have when it comes to supporting something that boosts everything that is good. The Scout slogan is, 'Do a Good Turn Daily." Contribute any amount to this project and you have done one year's good turn. Ball Francis Huffman at Hilltop 1787 and tell him you wish to contribute to the Boy Scout, Troop 33 Cabin. And you will be thanked heartily for your generous gift.

A real old-fashioned Hallowe'en party with all the "trimmings" is on the bill for Friday night at Glenwood Church. It is being given for the entertainment of both young and old and every one is extended a cordial invitation. Witches, ghosts, fortune tellers, black cats, and other such things will all be there to give the Hallowe'en atmosphere. The party will be held in the basement which is being decorated in true autumn fashion. An interesting program is under preparation, including such things as music, mock weddings, wonderful stunts and several general thrillers that make the hair stand on end, even to relate. It is permissible to wear costumes if desired, although not necessary, but all are requested to come unmasked. Preparations are being put forth to entertain five hundred people so you will be sure to enjoy yourself. Save that night for us and come to the church basement on Friday the 29th at the ghostly hour of 7:30. Don't forget the password! SSh-ssh-h-h-h.

Meeting this, Thursday evening, October 28th 7:30.

F. E. Boykins, C. C.
C. W. Rupping, K. of R. and S.

It is said that there have been parties pretending to instruct some of the women voters how to vote, but have been giving them wrong methods, so that it will work out to an advantage for their own selfish ends. Look out for them. Get your instructions from people you know.

The Trimus entertained with a weiner roast last Thursday evening. They had as their guests the C. D. Co. Mrs. Swigert's class and the S. P. I's. A bonfire was built in the hollow along the run at the end of North Park Avenue. Nearly fifty were there.

On Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Williamson, 341 Clarendon Ave., the marriage of their daughter Doris, to Mr. Clell Corn, 130 Lechner Ave., was solemnized by Rev. Boerstler. Mr. and Mrs. Corn will be at home to their friends at 283 Clarendon Ave.

Quite a few telephone calls have been received recently by Carlos Matheny, formerly Director at the Glenwood Shelter House regarding the time of the opening of the building. Please note that this year he is Physical Director and Coach of all the boy's work at Hubbard Intermediate High School and is not down at Glenwood Park any more.

The above gentleman, R. J. Williams, candidate for County Recorder, is a clean worthy Christian young man, a farmer boy who educated himself and helped his parents in their old age. How can a man have any better record? He is now Secretary of the Buckeye Republican Club, and a national officer in the Sons of Veterans, and is in the civil service. He is a fearless independent thinker, and is always found on the side of right and justice. You can make no mistake in voting for him.

The Junior Society of Hillcrest had their masked Hallowe'en party at the home of Wesley and Lillian Smoot, 180 Highland Ave., Monday night, October 25th. A short program was rendered in which Lillian Smoot and Dorothy Hammerstein gave us several very good readings; also the violin selections by Lilda Uhl were greatly enjoyed by all. Delightful refreshments were served.

Last Friday Pauline Fisher, 87 N. Eureka Ave., was struck by the bullet from a cartridge which had been exploded by a playmate hitting it with a hammer. The bullet went through a tin can and embedded itself in her left thigh about two inches deep. It was discovered by the X-ray and removed. Dr. Turner was the attending physician.

Right here is a good chance to put in a word of warning to both parents and children in regard to playing with such things as cartridges. Many children will lay a cartridge down and hit it with a stone or hammer to make it "crack" or see what it will do, which is a verey dangerous thing to do. It was only a matter of good fortune that the bullet in the above incident did not take a little more upward course and hit little Pauline in the face, which might have caused the loss of an eye, or perhaps her life. Anyone seeing a child thus playing with one of these should stop it if possible.

The Midland Avenue Bible Class will meet at the home of Mrs. Edwards, 46 Midlanad Ave., Wednesday afternoon, November 3d, at 2:00 o'clock.

Roy Durbin Jones, 18-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jones near Alton, died last Wednesday of pneumonia. The funeral was held Friday at St. Paul Lutheran church near Rome. Burial by Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Ernest Cady celebrated his twenty-first birthday by entertaining at his home on West Broad St. last Monday evening. The house was decorated in Hallowe'en garb and presented a very pleasing appearance. Music and good eats aided in making the evening a very enjoyable one. Among those present were: Sarah Westlake, Frances Hoffman, Louise McQuade, Ernest Cady, Kenneth Dickerson, Dana Marsh, Herschel Ferguson, William Cady and Mr. and Mrs. Cady. Ernest was presented with a beautiful gold watch from his family and the Deltas gave him a splendid chain to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. Lear, whose marriage took place October 16th, will make their home for the present with the bride's mother, Mrs. Barbara Rausch, at 92 South Hague Ave. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lear are popular young people of the Hilltop, and have friends for a happy future.

Mr. Arthur White, who lives over in Prospect, was hauling a load of fodder last Sunday, and when near the Skidmore school on North Hague Ave., was run into by another horse and vehicle, which upset his wagon, causing him to receive a broken leg below the knee. He was taken to Grant Hospital by Dr. Turner, who with the assistance of Dr. Baldwin, set the fractured leg.

Prescott Gilfillan, candidate for Representative in the General Assembly on the Prohibition ticket, makes the following declarations:

The home is the bulwark of the state and nation. Anything that menaces it should be legislated against and constructive legislation should be adopted for its protection. The mothers, daughters and sons should have protection thrown around them. We need a strong state Prohibition enforcement law, to that end the Crabbe act should be adopted. There should be no place in our cities or state for the liquor traffic, the red light district or the gambling den. There should be but one standard of morals for men and women. Righteousness should rule in politics and government. Men and parties should stand for the great moral principles whether it will lose them votes or not.

The laborer should have his rights protected. If any class of men should be well paid, he should. Women who do equal work with men should have equal pay. Taxation should be just. The citizen of small means should not be oppressed and the citizen of large means should stand his just share of taxation. The government, city, state and national should be run economically. Unnecessary offices should be abolished and salaries should not be exorbitant. Our state institutions should be well cared for and kept free from political influence. We should have good roads economically constructed and supervised. The Sabbath day should be protected. Every voter should have his ballot protected and held sacred; to that end we advocate minority representation in all legislative bodies.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30, "A Clean Heart." Preaching by the pastor.

7:30, "Shall We Believe in Angels-" This is one of the sermons on "Questions of the Heart." Is it childish to believe in angels? Does belief in them suppose we are superstitious? Our ideas of angels are sadly mixed up. We have the notion that they are feminine creatures with wings. We used to sing about wanting to be an angel. The fact of the matter is that none of us will ever be angels and when we get to heaven we won't want to. Hear what the Bible says about angels. You will enjoy this message.

7:30 on Wednesday Prayer meeting. Bible study and Juniors at the church.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

"The Father and His Lad; Are They Both on the Road to Glory and Heaven?" P. M., "The Radiant Life."

The November meeting of the Missionary Society will be held at the home of Mrs. Johnston, 90 Eldon Ave., Friday, November 5th, at 2:00 P. M. This will really be a mothers' meeting and Miss Porter of the Elizabeth Home will tell of the work and aims of the Home. Miss Porter has a wonderful message which will appeal to everyone. Every woman of the church is urged to attend. Each one is asked to bring a jar of fruit or jelly which will be given to the Home in the name of the Hilltop Church of Christ.

Let us make this a real Home Missionary service.

Lumber is Cheaper Build Now

Lumber is much cheaper than it was a few months ago, and we believe that it will be higher when building starts in again in the spring. The demand for houses is growing daily. Very little has been done to relieve the situation. With very few desirable houses on market the price of real estate is sure to stay near its present value. You can make no mistake in building now. Come out and let us talk it over with your plans and estimates free.

WOMAN ASLEEP TWO YEARS

Came Out of Trance When Little Son Was Taken to See Her—Is Now Normal.

Waukesha, Wis.—Mrs. Clara Jorgenson, Racine, who has been asleep at the county asylum for more than two years, has regained consciousness.

A sister-in-law of Mrs. Jorgenson visited the institution, bringing with her Mrs. Jorgenson's six-year-old son. It is thought that the child awakened the memories in the woman's mind that restored her to a normal condition.

It has been necessary to feed and care for Mrs. Jorgenson as if she were a helpless babe, according to Mrs. Peters, matron of the institution.

She walked the other day, used table utensils and fed herself with ease. She walked a short distance about the ward, but returned to her invalid's chair exhausted from the exertion to which she has not been accustomed.

"I could not, no matter how I tried, break the spell which seemed to keep me bound in another world in which I lived," said Mrs. Jorgenson in an interview. She said that although she could not open her eyes, utter a word or move a muscle, she knew each day's events and heard each word spoken to her.

Mrs. Jorgenson clearly remembered World war events, knew of relatives who had been in the service, told the names of those who had remained on the battlefields of France, where they fell, and knew some had returned home safely and the dates of their arrival.

HAS FOOD FOR FUR HUNTERS

Power Schooner Ruby on Trip to Herschel Island, Beyond Arctic Circle.

Seattle.—The power schooner Ruby, carrying a cargo of 600 tons, has started on the long trip to Herschel island, which lies far beyond the arctic circle.

The big cargo includes supplies for the scarlet riders, the royal northwest mounted police, who patrol the far-flung stretches of this adventurous land, and for the fur trading post of the Hudson's Bay company. Bands of Eskimos and many white trappers have cashed in the pelts resulting from last season's work. When the Ruby turns homeward she will be laden with furs from this rich post, which, like other Hudson's bay posts, is being developed more extensively with the closing out to colonists of the company's remaining farm lands to give greater attention to the fur trade.

In Yukon territory the brown bear of Kadiak island, the largest of the Alaskan bears, is found, while the great white bear, which provides excitement a plenty for the most skillful hunter, stalks the Herschel island section of the arctic circle with defiance for all. Many other fur-bearing animals bring big returns to the trappers.

Sumatra Needs Tigers to Save Her Best Trade

Palembang, Sumatra.—The natives of Sumatra were greatly excited when the Dutch governor forbade them to kill tigers under severe penalties. It was hard to convince them of the necessity to protect the terrible man eater. The most important industry of Sumatra is growing oil palm trees, and it was threatened by the increase of wild boars, which prefer the fruit to all other food, killing the trees with their tusks. The more tigers killed the more wild boars there were. The tiger likes wild boar meat better than any other, although it kills also cattle.

Under such circumstances, the government decided to protect the tiger to save Sumatra's main industry.

Odd Rhode Island Expressions.

Another elderly woman of New England recalls when important letters were "backed" with the words "in haste" which, she states, had about the same effect upon the post office department as they would have today. The village gossip was the "bellcat," a woman expecting visitors "fixed herself up" and a perverse person was a "crooked stick."

She still speaks of the servant as the "help" and of "doing" the dishes and calls the garbage "swill," but so do lots of other people—in Rhode Island.—Herbert Hall Taylor, in Providence Journal.

A BIG MAN FOR A BIG JOB

JOHN C. SPEAKS
Republican Candidate for CONGRESS

Speaks for Congress

No more fitting selection of a man to represent Franklin County in Congress could be made than that of General John C. Speaks. His entire life has been lived in this community. Perhaps no man is better acquainted with our people or more conversant with their needs and aspirations of a national character.

His position on all public affairs is clean cut and well defined. His unblemished record in the public service speaks for itself. He is endorsed by citizens of all classes in every walk of life.

The true one hundred per cent Americanism of General Speaks is attested by the fact that as purely volunteer soldier he served his state and nation for a period of forty years, filling every rank from private to brigadier general. His three sons voluntary served during the world war.

Fearless, fair, energetic, efficient conscientious, conservative—all these qualities together with a broad analytical mind, round out the practically ideal man in whom to trust the affairs of this district in Washington.

IS GRAVEYARD OF FOSSILS

Western Ranch a Center of Interest to Those Who Are Keen on Prehistoric Lore.

If the skeleton in a museum is a "dinohyus" or a "moropus," one may be quite sure that it came from the farm of James Henry Cook in the northwest corner of Nebraska; and the chances are almost equally good if the specimen happens to be a saber-toothed cat or a many-toed horse, or almost any of those queer animals that belong to the early Miocene period, says R. P. Crawford, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Most ranchmen and farmers are quite content to raise the ordinary sort of stock, but here is a ranch that is most widely known because of its output of prehistoric animals.

The Cook farm and ranch, located close to the Wyoming line, comprise some 15,000 acres. On the eastern edge of the ranch the Niobrara river has laid bare two hills, from both of which scores and scores of fossil skeletons have been quarried.

Substance for Shadow

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Expect to arrive in Preston, 3 o'clock; yours as of old, Earl."

Caroline, fingering the telegram in her lap, wondered whence came the leaden feeling in her heart as she pondered the imminent meeting with Earl Baldwin. She knew from the very wording of the message that the old question was to be reopened as to whether she would marry him. Evidently her insistence on going to France in the face of his violent protests had not quenched his ardor utterly. There had been many weeks of silence, then one or two casual letters, and now this telegram.

Well, marriage with him would certainly be a solution, if one could look at it in that way. Somehow or other, the little home town of Preston had seemed dreadfully dull since her return. It was hard to pick up the old threads again, hard to find a niche in which to take refuge from the memories which obsessed her.

Always they were with her—those memories of the days in France. Not a trained nurse, Caroline had yet managed to elude the red tape restrictions and slip across, a thing not so difficult to do in the early, short-handed days of the war. Once arrived, her efficient and tireless personality had helped her to make good where others less capable had been sent home.

"You—you!"

Those days were over now, but perpetually home in Preston, where nothing ever happened, flitted visions of places and episodes in France. And of all the recollections, one alone never left her—the picture of a tall, thin figure in khaki, both arms in a sling, a maple leaf his insignia.

The discovery that they had a common bond between them—they had both seen Niagara Falls!—led them on to further conversational explorations. Bit by bit, Caroline drew him on to tell of his western Canadian home, a rolling prairie fringed at a far horizon with blue mountains. By means of such innocent advances their acquaintance ripened into friendship. Then suddenly, impetuously, he told her he loved her, and she, Heaven forgive her! had taken his declaration lightly, doubting its real worth. Convalescents so often fell in love with their nurses.

The next day he had been discharged. Practically "as good as new," he had returned to the front. She had never seen him again, did not know if he were alive or dead. But little by little she had come to realize that his love was not mere gratitude, but a passion so real and deep that, by its very intensity, it had succeeded in awakening a response in her—a response, however, which came too late.

She had never mentioned him to her family. This was due partly to a delicate reticence on a subject which touched her so deeply, partly to a feeling that there would be no patience with a sentiment which turned down Earl Baldwin's substantial self in favor of a shadowy apparition submerged in the limbo of a war that was over.

Truth to tell, Caroline never thought of him as living. So very few of those who went at first were safe and whole today.

But the memory of him fought against her acceptance of Earl. And in addition, there was that feeling about Earl himself. Would not the same pig-headedness which, when she refused to respect his wishes about going to France, led him to sulk for months, prove an insurmountable barrier to wedded happiness? Would not that which, in youth, might charitably be called force of character, degenerate with the years into sheer dominating assertiveness?

Yet Caroline was no advocate of the single life for man or woman. She believed in homes and in children. This was probably her last opportunity for marriage. Even if her dream lover were alive she had never told him where she lived, and he would never know that she returned his love. Take it all in all, the sensible, same thing was to marry Earl.

Three hours later, Caroline, in the midst of a patiently expectant family, sat awaiting the coming of the man she had decided to marry. To every one but herself the hour was tinged with romance, for Caroline's sisters understood without being told that Earl was coming to ask Caroline to marry him, and of course dear Caroline would say "yes." Imagine any girl nearing her thirties refusing a successful man like Earl!

"Now, don't be mean and keep him waiting for his answer, Carol," admonished Alice. "Remember how long he has waited already!"

If Caroline thought of the long days in France when she had waited for a letter from Earl, she gave no sign. Some hidden, almost psychic, force seemed projected from the entire family, pushing her into the arms of the man who was coming. There was to be, evidently, no escape.

In through the open window drifted the fragrance of lilacs, and ever afterward Caroline associated them with this hour. Suddenly the bell rang and all eyes focused on Caroline. Again, she felt their influence as she rose slowly and left the room. It was long before she returned.

For when Caroline with fingers that were cold, opened the door, she drew back stunned, with a short gasping cry.

A splendid, tall young man, quiet-eyed and smiling, stood on the step, his hat in his hand. Caroline drew into the twilight of the hall and was in turn drawn into the shelter of his arms.

Many seconds later, Caroline put the question, "How did you find me?"

"Don't you remember, dear, the first night I was brought to the hospital? I couldn't sleep and you stopped as you were passing through the ward and read to me awhile? As you opened the book, I could see the fly leaf with an address. Unconsciously I remembered it—the name of a girl's school. I recalled it later, thought it was probably the one you graduated from and when I came home for good I hunted it up and ultimately traced you here. I simply had to find you!"

Later, a much astonished family was introduced to the stranger, not that they could view him exactly as a stranger when Caroline, suddenly grown young and happy, hung on to his arm and called him "Bruce dear."

"How about Earl?" asked Alice bluntly.

"Oh, you look out for him," said Caroline absently. But Alice took her advice, took it so seriously, indeed, that she made a life job of it and eventually rode in the sedans and super sixes which might have been her sister's.

But Caroline, with her soldier-farmer husband, farming vast acres of golden wheat on the sunlit plains of Alberta, had no regrets.

IMPRESSED ON BRAIN CELLS

Almost Innumerable Records Are Made During the Lifetime of the Ordinary Individual.

It is generally computed by scientists that one-third of a second is required to produce an "impression" on the human brain, and the brain is constantly receiving and recording impressions during every waking moment of a person's life. Therefore, assuming that he has slept one-third of the time, a man of fifty years has recorded in his brain cells no less than 3,155,760,000 separate impressions. These impressions are as permanent as photographs, and not one is ever lost, though it may be misplaced, so to speak, and that is all that happens when something is "forgotten." The impression is safe enough in the brain, if one could only put his hands on it. Poor memory is simply the result of a bad filing system.

The average weight of the male brain is 49⅝ ounces and of the female 44 ounces. The woman's brain has a higher specific gravity. The man has a large brain in proportion to stature, but woman's brain is larger in proportion to her weight. The difference between the weight of brain in man and woman is much more marked among civilized than among primitive races, and is most marked in the Caucasian race. The female brain begins to lose weight after the age of thirty, but that of a man does not do so until ten or fifteen years later. The loss in woman is very slight, however, and she keeps up a high brain weight much later—until seventy—than does a man, so that in old age the difference in weight is reduced to its minimum, which is a little over three ounces.

When a brain falls to a weight of 37⅛ ounces in man or 32⅛ ounces in a woman it is called microcephalic, and the general rule is that below these limits idiocy exists. There is, therefore, just five ounces less amount of brain matter needed to keep a woman from idiocy than is needed for a man. The clear inference is, therefore, that the woman's 44-ounce brain is quite as good as the man's brain.

In May, 19.. ..e problem of the use of wireless telephone for communication for airplanes when in flight was presented to a group of American engineers and scientists at the request of Major General Squier, chief signal officer of the army. Laboratory work was directed especially toward producing a telephone transmitter which should be responsive to the voice, but at the same time insensitive to extraneous noises, much as those made by the motor or the wind. A full transmission set was taken into the air on July 2, the same year, and, when the planes were two miles away, speech was received at the grounding station. On July 4 the receiving set was taken into the air and the aviator received spoken messages clearly when several miles from the ground. The tests and experiments were kept up through the summer, and on December 2, 1917, an official demonstration of both receiving and hearing was made at Dayton, O.

LIFE PRIMITIVE IN ARABIA

Natives Satisfied With Little in the Way of Comforts, and Require Few Luxuries.

The scribe is an important man among the Arabs. His desk is a soapbox. He sits on the floor of his poor establishment, a nook in the corner of a building, drawing up beautifully penned legal documents for clients who cannot read or write.

Restaurants in Algeria reveal the intimacies of the oven and the kitchen to the passerby. The national dish is made of granulated flour. Many kitchens are too small to afford their patrons dining room space. They display their plates of fried fish in the door, and the native customers may eat them standing in the street, or may carry them home, or if he has no home, to a nearby cafe. It is never far to an Arab cafe, the chief furnishings of which are benches, stools, dominoes and checkers. Spools and huge pieces of wood are the pawns in these games of draughts. The cafes also serve as lodging houses. The street Arab who roams the wharves and quays of Algiers by day may come here to sleep at night. If he has earned or begged no money he will sleep on the stone stairway leading to the docks; but if he has gained six sous he will hunt out an Arab cafe, and spend a night of luxury.

Society Stunts

A "Ghost" party was given by Dorothy Strong at her home on South Warren Ave., Oct. 30. The house was well decorated and lighted with candles. The evening was spent in games and dancing. Refreshments were served. Her guests were: David Sword, Ruth Negus, Donald Bennett, Beatrice Howard, Joyce Crothers, Ardath Roberts, Paul Jones, Anna Nowell, George Matthews, Ruth Holder, Raymond Hill, Alice Mitchell, Fred Sprague, May Mossman, George Melvin, Francis Fairchild, Glendon Groc, Florence Crawford, Agnes Winget, Mary Muncie, Ruth Roller, Helen Reel, Devine Sword. They also had a fortune teller with them that evening.

O, fair are youth and strength; but fairer yet
The face of age when sculptured by a soul
Where love of God and man have held control.

On Friday, Oct. 22, Mrs. Pauline Whitehead, venerable mother of Dr. H. Whitehead, passed her eighty-sixth milestone. A few relatives and friends gathered at her home, 121 Clarendon Ave., where a chicken dinner was served. Two fine birthday cakes graced the table—on one the figures "86" was outlined with tiny pink candles. Flowers were every where, sent in by kind friends, expressive of their love and esteem. Many messages of congratulations and good wishes came not only by mail and telephone, but from those who called during the day.

Those present at the dinner were the children and grandchildren of Mrs. Whitehead living in Columbus—Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rochelle, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Fairas, Dr. and Mrs. H. Whitehead, Mr. Clyde Rochelle, Mrs. Bessie Isley, Mrs. Rose Headley and Mrs. Pauline Whitehead.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ferguson of 317 Clarendon Ave., gave a birthday celebration Sunday from 2 to 5 p. m., in honor of their little son, Archie Camillus Ferguson, it being his fifth birthday. A very enjoyable time was spent in playing and good eats. Among those present were Dorothy Harge, Claribelle Johnson, Glory Ferguson, Alberta Ferguson, Raymond Wallace, Paul Ferguson, Richard Wallace, Paul Roberts, Guy Ferguson, Joseph Roberts and Archie Ferguson. Archie received a purse of money and also beautiful presents.

The members of the Glenwood Epworth League were entertained by the members of the Briggsdale Epworth League at a masquerade lawn party at the home of Miss Catherine Briggs last Saturday evening, Oct. 30. A huge bonfire was built in the spacious front yard which sufficiently lighted the surroundings. The evening was spent in singing old plantation songs, playing games, etc. Pumpkin pie and coffee were served, after which a group of O. S. U. students, who were present, gave a little demonstration of the kind of rooting that the State bunch used at Chicago. About forty members of the Glenwood League were there and about twenty of the Briggsdale organization.

The Glenwood Epworth League Glee Club will meet in the Sunday School room at the church, Thursday evening, Nov. 4. All members are urged to be present.

Members of Glenwood Epworth League held a prayer meeting Tuesday evening, Nov. 2, at the home of Miss Lillian Grumney, 33 Elden Ave.

Thornton Case, age 8 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Case, 95 S. Oakley Ave., was hit by an automobile last Tuesday noon, near the corner of Oakley and Broad. It is said he attempted to dodge one machine and in doing so ran in front of a machine driven by Mr. Bender, when he was knocked down, but fell in such a fashion that the machine passed over him. He was bruised about the head, and was unconscious for about half an hour, at Dr. Hutt's office, where he was taken after the accident.

Thornton is a pupil in Highland avenue school, second grade.

Mr. A. R. Wheeler, 239 S. Warren Ave., who had made all preparations for leaving here Nov. 3 for Los Angeles, Calif., where he intended to engage in the tire and vulcanizing business, has been prevented by uncontrollable circumstances from carrying out his original plans, and will now remain here and engage in his business at 385 S. Harris Ave.

---

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Blair, 203 Clarendon Ave., wish to thank the friends who so kindly remembered them in the bereavement of their infant son, Robert Cecil, also the Hilltop Undertaking Co., for services rendered.

Proper Care of Auto Tires

Tires, like the engine or other parts of a car, require a reasonable amount of attention and care if the owner expects to secure best results. The motorist ordinarily places so much confidence in his tire equipment that the tires do not receive the same frequent inspection and attention that is considered necessary for the car.

It is not always possible to avoid stones and other sharp objects, ruts and severe road conditions, which cause the tread to become loose, cut, torn or otherwise injured, and these injuries should receive immediate attention to preserve the life of the tire. Make it a point to inspect your tires every week, or so, and have the injuries repaired while they are small. Fifty cents paid to have a small cut repaired when first noticed may prevent a blowout and tube repair in a few days, which might cost up in the dollars, besides lessening the life of the tire. The Hilltop Tire & Vulcanizing Co., 385 S. Harris Ave., would be pleased to have the motoring public to feel welcome at any time to consult their service.

The Glenwood Home Missionary Society is preparing a missionary box to be sent to a minister and family in Tennessee. The family consists of the husband and wife, one daughter 9 years old, and a baby two months old, and any contribution will be gladly received. For further information call Mrs. Joseph Bishop, H. T. 2589; Mrs. Mansell Legg, H. T. 1593, or Mrs. J. Q. Hartsough, H. T. 1017.

Miss Cecile Six entertained her Sunday school class and their friends with a masquerade party, Wednesday, Oct. ???. There were fifty-three girls and boys present. The house was decorated with witches, ghosts, black cats, pumpkins and shocks of fodder. After a delightful evening spent in hallowe'en games, apples, doughnuts and cider was served, each plate containing a fortune.

Double-Headed Chick.

Westminster, Md.—Mrs. Gertie Lowe of Westminster has a freak chicken that is six weeks old and has a head on both ends. She calls it a "double header" and says it is interesting to see it when it sees a grain of corn. Both ends struggle for it, and they roll over and over with no chance for a compromise. The heads are too far apart for a battle royal.

ORIGINAL "KILL JOYS" FOUND

They Are the Dependents of England, a Religious Sect Dating Back to 1850.

London.—If you have met a person dressed in plain black who cries at weddings and laughs at funerals the chances are he or she is a Dependent.

What's a Dependent? A Dependent is a person dressed in plain black and of solemn mien. There are a thousand of them living less than fifty miles from London.

John Birgood, a London shoemaker, began to give religious talks in Doxwood, Sussex, in 1850, and from these sermons grew the Society of Dependents. They esteem the spinster more highly than the married woman and regard pictures, decorations and even flowers as harmful. They hold themselves aloof from those who are not of the faith and their extreme austerity makes them unpopular with young people. But they prosper.

RUSSIAN GOLD SENT TO CANADA

Strange Story of Transfer of Bullion Made by Two Warships at Sea.

HURRIED TO OTTAWA MINT

Secretly Shipped Across Dominion in Heavily Guarded Special Train—Hitherto Unpublished Romantic Story of the War.

Victoria, B. C.—Stories of a secret transfer of millions of dollars of Russian gold from one ship to another in half a gale at sea off the Canadian Pacific coast and of a rush trip with the money across Canada in a heavily guarded special train, disguised as a silk express were published in the Victoria Colonist recently as part of the hitherto untold history of the World war.

Two recent newspaper dispatches, seemingly unrelated, the Colonist said, recalled the "hitherto unpublished and romantic story" of the gold shipment. One dispatch from Europe said a Mr. Novitsky, former assistant to the minister of finance of the all-Russian government, had hinted at the huge amounts of gold shipped through Vancouver, B. C., during the war, including £60,000,000 from Vladivostok.

Warships Figure in Story.

The other dispatch said the Canadian cruiser Rainbow had been sold to a Seattle firm. The connection, the Colonist said, was in the fact the Rainbow transferred a big shipment of the gold at sea from a Japanese warship and brought it into Vancouver.

Russia's gold, the story continued came in several shipments, the first of which amounted to about $45,000,000 It was in the form of bullion in boxes about fifteen inches long, and was loaded at Vladivostok early in 1916 for transfer to the Ottawa (Canada) mint. A big Japanese warship with Novitsky in charge of the bullion, carried the money across the Pacific.

Rainbow Gets Treasure.

The treasure ship never touched a Canadian port, however, for far out at sea the Rainbow, in a near-gale, met the warship and the precious freight was transferred between the heaves of the rollers. The warship turned back and the little cruiser steamed into Vancouver, arriving at the Canadian Pacific dock at three o'clock on a dark and wet morning.

Awaiting her were officials of the Dominion Express company, who had come out from Montreal in their private car. A picked crew put the money on a special train of five express cars, which had been switched into the Canadian Pacific dock. Each car was loaded with $9,000,000 in gold.

Greatest Caution Used.

Every door was guarded and barred and the transcontinental trip started. A telephone system connected the whole train, and whenever a sentinel wished to move from one car to another he did so on release from the official car. The doors were never opened when the train was at a standstill, and no guard was permitted to show himself from the train windows while passing through towns. At night the train ran in darkness, and at each divisional point, when engines were changed, detectives guarded the platform until the journey was resumed. As an additional precaution the train was operated at irregular speeds on different legs of the trip.

Sleighs backed up to the train at Ottawa and the gold was unloaded and taken to the mint under direction of Novitsky.

The train was the first of several which passed through Vancouver during the war. In August, 1916, another train carried $50,000,000 across Canada, and in January, 1917, $177,000,000 made the trip.

WHITE CAPS IN SOUTH

Force Thousands of Negroes to Work in Fields.

Cotton Crop Saved by Action of Night Riders Wearing the Garb of the Ku-klux Klan.

Greenville, S. C.—While the old Ku-klux Klan of reconstruction days is being revived in some parts of the South in a fraternal spirit for law and order, the hooded night raiders in long, flowing white gowns have actually made their appearance in South Carolina as a means of forcing certain planters to pay less for cotton picking and also forcing thousands of negroes to work.

White Caps, several hundred strong, with horses and riders clad in the Ku-klux Klan garb, have ridden into several towns in the state, principally in Florence county, and as a result the cotton fields the next day were thick with cotton pickers and the housewives have all the help in the way of cooks and wash women they desire.

Farmers now see a way out of the ruin which faced them by the deterioration of cotton turning blue in the fields for a lack of pickers. The White Caps appeared in Lake City for a second time. First they called on some farmers who had been paying as much as $1.50 a hundred pounds for picking cotton and suggested to them that this was too much. The price fell to $1 in a twinkling.

The cavalcade then proceeded to the negro section and threw out several hints to the effect that more work and less loafing around would be required. Hence the new hordes of pickers and multitude of cooks and washers today.

WHO'S AFRAID?

An ingenious Scotchman has brought his neighbors, separated from him by a river, within easy reach by means of a conveyor wire which he has stretched across the stream and to which he has attached a net basket large enough to hold and carry any member of his family. The picture shows one of his children in the net carrier, in which she has made herself comfortable for the trip over the stream. It is the usual way for the family to cross to the so-called mainland, saving a long walk to the nearest bridge.

The contrivance is not unlike one of the forms of apparatus used by lifesavers along the coasts, with block, tackle and pulley fittings, which provide for the carriage either with the help of some one on shore or by means of a double wire whereby the occupant of the net carrier may propel himself.

This Scotchman lives in Glenesk, famous for the product of its distilleries. Esk is the Scotch word for river, and Glen indicates the land through which it flows. As Scotland abounds both in rivers and glens, the name is not uncommon. There is also a river of the name in Ireland. The scene of the short-cut carrier is on one of the rivers flowing into the Firth of Forth and having its source in the Grampian Hills.

FINNISH HUSBANDS FOR HIRE

Russian Women Engage Them to Get Out of Country—Business Is Lucrative.

Viborg, Finland.—Hiring Finnish men to marry Russian women to enable the latter to get out of Russia has become a popular and lucrative business in the border towns south of Viborg. The Finns exact a high price, but the method is unfailing. It makes a Finnish subject of the woman, and is recognized as lawful by the two countries, which have assumed diplomatic relations.

These newly-married couples come out of Russia into Riaraloke, the frontier town not more than thirty miles from Petrograd, with the daily exodus of Swedish and Finnish refugees.

Made Good His Threat.

Jeffersonville, Ind.—The man who threatened to burn a tenant house on the farm of George W. Stoner, former county auditor, was not bluffing. He did it. Stoner was warned if he rented the house to John Driscoll it would be blown up.

Down goes the price of shoes. See our windows.
Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

The Prayer Meeting—Many can remember some wonderful prayer meetings in the days gone by. How God seemed to draw wonderfully nigh. Now what's happened to it? Who killed it? Did it die of neglect on the part of its best friends, the church members? Or did it die through persecution of the outside world?

This ought to be said. The various lodges, clubs, concerts, and political organizations should arrange their meetings on other nights but Wednesday. Why should there be a conflict between such good causes? It has been known for years now that Wednesday night is the night of the Prayer-meeting. Let us keep it so. Every Christian in these organizations should use his influence to remedy this encroachment. It is a patriotic duty as well as a religious duty. This country needs a baptism of prayer and a revival of honest-to-goodness church members who know how to keep their church vows and honor God. XX

Lumber is Cheaper Build Now

Lumber is much cheaper than it was a few months ago, and we believe that it will be higher when building starts in again in the spring. The demand for houses is growing daily. Very little has been done to relieve the situation. With very few desirable houses on market the price of real estate is sure to stay near its present value. You can make no mistake in building now. Come out and let us talk it over with your plans and estimates free.

The Accusing Eye

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Miss Jarvis twisted the solitaire diamond around on the third finger of her left hand until the glittering stone was buried in her soft palm. Then she stared at it with dull resentment in her lovely eyes—the plain gold band of the inner circlet looked like a wedding ring. With a swift, ruthless gesture she tore it from her finger and sent it spinning across the room.

From a dark corner of the rich carpet the jewel glowed at her like an angry accusing eye—a questioning eye! "Why?" it seemed to ask, "Why did you lead James Meade on if you did not love him? Why did you accept this ring from him and promise to marry him? Was it because he is rich and influential and you were afraid to wait for Paul—Paul with his fearless courage during the war—his medals of honor—his crippled foot—Paul coming home from war with joyous heart to find fallen fortunes and to learn that his promised wife had changed her mind and was going to marry an older man—one safe and sound, rich with the making of war-time profits?"

"No—no—no—" whispered Elsie, covering her shamed eyes with her ringless fingers; "but I could not hamper Paul with my support when he had to begin all over again—"

The eye winked derisively. "Tell that to the marines—but not to Paul Browning," it seemed to say.

Elsie regarded the jewel with rebellious eyes. The door pushed open and Gliding Along the Westchester Roads.

a man entered. "Your mother said you were in here," he said cheerfully, as he leaned over and kissed her unwilling lips. "You look awfully in the blues, dear. Come and drive with me—I want to show you a house in Westchester."

"I don't like Westchester, James. Long Island is much smarter, and besides there are some lovely old places there."

"Too old, some of them."

"I love old places," she said defiantly. "Little old-fashioned houses hugging the water, with quaint gardens and giant locusts—and—"

"You are describing the old Browning place, Elsie," he said coldly.

There was silence between them for a moment until his glance found the glittering ring in the corner.

"Your ring?" he asked with lifted brows as he brought it to her.

"It slipped off—oo—I threw it there, James. I am sorry—but I am cross this morning—forgive me," she cried penitently. He smiled and kissed her, but his eyes were troubled as he put it on her finger.

Presently they were gliding along the Westchester roads under a glorious summer sky. Elsie admired the beautiful house her lover had chosen; it was so perfect in every detail that only a carping spirit could find fault with it, and Elsie was sore-hearted, not mean.

"Now we are going to look at a place on Long Island," he said as he turned the car toward the city. "First, we will have a bite to eat."

Elsie was surprised when they stopped before a modest restaurant on a crowded thoroughfare. James Meade usually patronized the best hotels and when they lunched it was either in some ten room of Elsie's choice or a fashionable hotel restaurant.

"You will find the food particularly good here," he apologized as they entered, "and the service is unsurpassed—we won't have to wait."

This proved to be the case, but Elsie ate little beyond the first spoonfuls of soup; her eyes caught sight of a familiar figure across the room—a straight young form garbed as a waiter, but with a pathetic limp. The Accusing Eye winked at her again as she dropped her spoon with a sickening realization that Paul, her splendid young lover, had come to this!

Fortunately, he did not see them and later when they were again in the car she turned to Meade with blazing eyes. "You did it intentionally, James; how could you?" she demanded.

"It is better that you should know and see things just as they are," he said gravely, but the girl only smiled bitterly and turned away her head. She did not speak to him again for a long time, as they threaded the city streets, crossed the bridge and finally emerged upon the Merrick road. Then she closed her eyes to keep back the tears that wanted to come. At one moment she yearned to give Meade his ring and hasten back to Paul—Paul Browning, a waiter in a restaurant—Paul who had fought for her as he had for thousands of others like her—she wanted to snatch him away and work for him; she wanted to do some menial labor for him—

"Here we are," cried Meade cheerily as he stopped the car, but when Elsie opened her eyes she could not see until the tears had brimmed over. Meade pressed his handkerchief to her face and at last she smiled waveringly at him. "I am such a goose," she said.

"A dear, delightful goose," he agreed as he lifted her down and pushed open a white painted gate. "And what do you think of this, Elsie?" He stood apart with folded arms and watched her face change from sweet gravity to wonder, and then joy. The joy quickly faded to resentment.

"Not this place, James—not Paul's old home—"

"You love it?" he asked.

"For his sake," she said bravely, "I would leave my own luxurious home—I would give you up, with all that it means—only to be with him and wait upon him always—I don't care how poor—how lowly—forgive me, James, dear, I am so unhappy and I have been very wicked!"

He held her very close in his arms until she had sobbed out her grief, and while his voice was brave his eyes were hurt. He truly loved Elsie and he did not want her without the love that she had to give some one, and above all he was generous and he wanted her to be happy.

"I couldn't buy this place if I wanted to, dear," he said at last. "Your future husband has too much grit to let it go—I've tried to buy him out through my agent and he wouldn't sell. Unknown to him—I've had an opening made for him in my cousin's bank—and the ring—that is my wedding gift to you and you are to dispose of it and buy some scrubbing brushes and things for your house—I'm going now, Elsie, and you must be happy and make him happy, too! Some day, I'm coming out to see if you are living up to it! I think I hear him coming now—he has a motorcycle, you know—Good-by!" He wrung her hand, dashed down the steps and into his machine; in a moment there were a cloud of dust on the shore road. From the other direction came the rattling whirr of a motorcycle. Elsie went down to the gate and held it open as Paul came through, afoot, limping, his eyes ashine. "Elsie," he cried incredulously, "You—waiting for me? Why, I dream of this every day, but—"

She crept into his arms. "I am the dreams come true," she whispered.

MIDINETTE IS DISAPPEARING

French Girls Throw Aside Needles to Take Up Stenography and Typewriting.

Paris.—The French midinette is disappearing and young French girls are throwing aside the needle for the typewriter, according to the large fashion houses of Paris.

The apprentice who used to be glad to enter a modiste's or costumer's establishment as midinette, at first earning nothing but her keep, is now learning typewriting, with perhaps a suspicion of shorthand, and can command a fair salary as soon as her course of instruction is completed.

Experienced modistes and dressmakers vainly point out the folly of this course, which, they say, leads many girls into a blind alley occupation instead of providing them with a trade at which they can eventually earn a living running into many hundreds of dollars a year.

CLOCK TICKS FOR 104 YEARS

Indiana Man Has Timepiece Made in 1816 Which Has Run Ever Since, Keeping Good Time.

Jeffersonville, Ind.—Ira Fouts of New Washington has a clock which has run since it was made in 1816. It is hanging in a brick house built in 1826. The clock was made by William Thompson, an Englishman, according to a statement posted in the back of the clock in 1908 by the late John Calvin Fouts, father of the present owner. Mr. Fouts said Thompson brought his tools and brass plates from England and cut out all the wheels and machinery, piece by piece. The father of John Calvin Fouts started the clock running May 12, 1816, and it has run 104 years, keeping good time.

RUSSIAN COTTON INDUSTRY RUINED

Bolshevist Management Has Practically Killed One of Country's Greatest Assets.

MANY MILLS ARE STOPPED

Doubt Expressed That They Will Ever Start Up Again—With Experts Gone Unskilled Labor Has Ruined Most of Machinery.

London.—Russia's great prewar cotton industry has suffered to such an extent during the revolution that it is doubtful whether many of the mills ever will be able to operate again, says Sir Charles Macara, an English authority in the world's cotton trade, in an interview in the Yorkshire Post.

Based upon information obtained from an Englishman who recently returned from Russia, where for fourteen years he was the manager of a large cotton factory near Moscow, Sir Charles estimates that of the 9,000,000 spindles running in Russia before the revolution not more than 200,000 or 300,000 are now operating.

English Manager Gives Facts.

The experiences of the English manager of the Moscow factory were told as an example of the methods employed by the revolutionists in dealing with one of Russia's great industrial assets, the textile factories in the Moscow district. This particular mill carried on all the processes from cotton spinning to the finished product, 17,000 workers having been employed under normal operating conditions.

When the Bolsheviki assumed power the whole cotton industry was nationalized. At every mill committees were formed and finally, in October, 1919, a decree was issued that all who had been connected with the former owners would have to leave.

Mills All Stopped.

With the experts gone the mill stopped. After a time attempts were made to restart it, but it was almost impossible to obtain raw cotton. Small quantities were obtained, which, after being diluted with 75 per cent waste, was put through the processes.

The machinery now is in a very bad state, in such a state, in fact, that it would be almost impossible to operate the factory properly, according to the information given Sir Charles. When ever machines are damaged other machines are denuded of parts to repair them.

Sir Charles stated that there was little possibility of English workmen going to Russia for employment in textile factories. Mills in Germany and Austria were turning out only from 25 to 30 per cent of the normal production, he said, and English workers faced the almost impossible task of making up for the four and one-half years' stoppage of textile manufacture owing to the war.

RADIUM SUBSTITUTE MEDICINE

Produced by Scientists in Department of Chemistry at University of Missouri.

Columbia, Mo.—A perfect substitute for radium can be produced through a chemical process that purifies mesothorium, according to G. F. Breckenridge and Dr. Herman Schlundt of the department of chemistry of the University of Missouri, who have been experimenting in conjunction with Dr. R. B. Moore of the United States bureau of mines.

Mesothorium is a by-product in the manufacture of mantles for gas lamps, and is found in the monazite ore of Brazil.

The radium substitute can be used for medical purposes.

Wedding Party Falls in Cellar; Floor Collapses

Corning, N. Y.—Forty persons were dropped into the cellar of the home of George Coats when the floor gave way in the midst of merry-making following the marriage of Mr. Coats' daughter.

Exploding lamps set fire to the debris.

The grandmother of the bride was injured internally, and the bride and several guests were bruised and burned.

New York Boy, Master of Twelve Languages, Becomes Student at Columbia.

New York.—Master of 12 languages, keenly interested in batting averages, but more devoted to the game of marbles when played for keeps, twelve-year-old Edward Rochie Hardy, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rochie Hardy of this city, today qualified as the youngest freshman that ever entered Columbia university.

The youthful prodigy is 5 feet 3 inches in height, weighs 148 pounds, and, his mother said, is perfectly normal in appetite, habits and recreations.

Edward started school at the age of three and bounded over three classes a year, being graduated from high school at eleven. His popularity and ability were proved by the fact that he was elected editor of his school newspaper and was a leader in school

Society Stunts

NOTICE

Saturday at 3 p. m., at the Robbins-Greiser School of music, there will be held an informal reception in connection with an interesting recital of twenty-five of the beginners' class. The school has grown so rapidly it is impossible to put all on the first program, but these recitals will be given often and friends and patrons of the school are united.

Walter S. King will present a few of his pupils in a piano recital, Friday evening, Nov. 12, at West Broad Street School auditorium. The public is cordially invited. Following is the program:

Blue Ribbon Dance, Violet N. Dague; A Little Story, Thelma Raths; Frolics, Op. 12, No. 5, Doris Stewart; The Old Clock in the Corner, Corine Miller; Flag Day March, Myron Miller; Tarantelle, Mary Millikin; Arrival of Friends Polka, Helen Daniels; Night Fall, Idyll, Edna Keefer; Elves at Play, Ernest Schumann; Claudia, Valse Caprice, Mary James; Childish Glee, Edna Hetterschiedt; Manuet Op. 14, Doris E. Barnes; Flower Song, Op. 39, Louise McMurray; L. Ingenue, Valse, left hand alone, Truth Daniels; Music Box, Bernadine Drumm; The Rosary, Ruth Funke; Hungary, Rapsodie Mignonne, Mary Porter; Caprice, Op. 20, Roma Day.

At Glenwood Epworth League Glee Club business meeting, Nov. 4, the following officers were chosen: Lillian Born, president; Velma Currier, secretary; Henry Keller, treasurer. A committee of three composed of Herschel Ferguson, Helen Smith and William Thompson, was appointed for selecting the music for the club. It was decided that there would be five cents dues a month; also that the meeting would be held every Thursday evening in the Suday School room of the church. Every member and any others who desire to join are requested to come this (Thursday) evening promptly at 7:30. For information concerning the club call Lillian Born, Hilltop 428 or 2705 W. Broad St.

The Boy Scouts of America, Troop 83, are approaching their fifth anniversary. In connection with our anniversary we are having a campaign between the tenth and twentieth of November to raise money to build a Scout Cabin.

The question has arisen as to whether this troop shall endure or its members join the corner gangs. This troop's members have reached the age where they will have their fund regardless of the cost. This cost can be decreased only with your help. So we are asking everyone who is willing to see better Hilltop boys to contribute to our campaign. Anyone who wishes to contribute to this campaign fund and has not received a letter can do so by sending it to Mr. C. O. Sherwood, 86 Midland Ave., or call H. T. 2875 and someone will take care of them.

Death of Miss Sulzberger

Miss Florence Sultsberger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Sultzberger, was born March 10, 1894; died Nov. 7, 1920; aged 26 years 7 months and 27 days. During her childhood she attended Highland and West Broad Street schools. She has been employed by the Park Savings & Loan Company for five years.

She was an active member of the Glenwood Methodist Episcopal Church where she sang in the choir as well as taking her part in other church activities.

She was a member of the Eastern Star and sisters of that order sit in sadness in their bereavement today.

She was taken sick with the malady which occasioned her death Nov. 15, 1919. She has been a patient sufferer. Her load was heavy and her way was rough, but she bore it with fortitude and trod the road with hope and faith. She declared her faith in her Saviour and to her pastor a few weeks ago when she had participated in the Holy Sacrament she expressed her great love for her master. She has gone to be with Him and to live the life triumphant forever with the blest.

She leaves in their sadness her father and mother, two brothers and two sisters, and other relatives and a host of friends. The funeral took place Tuesday with burial in Green Lawn by Hilltop Undertaking Co.

O Love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee;
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean's depths it flow,
May richer, fuller be.

O light that followest all my way
I yield my flickering torch to thee,
My heart restores its borrowed ray,
That in thy sunshine's blaze its day,
May brighter, fairer, be.

O joy that seekest me through pain,
I cannot close my heart to thee;
I trace the rainbow through the rain,
And feel the promise is not vain
That morn shall tearless be.

O Cross that liftest up my head,
I dare not ask to fly from thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red,
Life that shall endless be.

George Matthewson.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Mary Catherine Dixon of Chillicothe, Ohio, is a guest of her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Murray, of Richardson Ave. Mrs. Dixon will leave for Jacksonville, Fla., to spend the winter, shortly after Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Ella Lyman and sister, Miss Knapp, 199 Whitethorne Ave., visited Sunday with the former's son, Mr. I. W. Lyman, Baltimore, Ohio.

Mr and Mrs Roy C Dixon of Chillicothe, Ohio, and Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Hunter and daughter, of Frankfort, Ohio, motored to Columbus for a Sunday visit with Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Murray, of Richardson Ave.

Messrs. G. G. Schoonover and Alfred Burrnan, Cleveland, Ohio, visited over the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Schoonover, 163 N. Warren Ave., and attended the Ohio State-Michigan football game.

The members of the Burgess Ave. United Brethren Church will celebrate the laying of the corner stone of their new church edifice next Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Rev. J. A. White, pastor of St. Clair Ave. Church, will officiate.

This church was organized Aug. 27, 1916, with 13 members, at which time they dedicated the frame building they have been worshiping in. The membership has grown till now it numbers about 150. The new building, which is now well along in the process of construction, will cost about $35,000. It will be of chocolate colored brick with Indian limestone trimmings and will be finished off in oak on the inside. It will have a seating capacity in the auditorium of 800.

The Sunday School department will contain an auditorium and 16 class rooms, and when thrown together with the auditorium will accommodate about 700 people. There will also be a gymnasium, 30x50 feet in size.

On Thursday, Nov. 18, at 8 p. m. the Hill Crest Chautauqua will have its opening number. We have been fortunate in securing the Robbins-Greiser Concert Company. The company is composed of two of the finest artists in Columbus. Miss Edith Robbins, is a gifted violin player and a wonderful reader. With a repertoire of more than 200 selections thus combining pathos and humor, she gives a wonderful program. Miss Ethel Greiser has studied under the renowned Frederick J. Hoffman, a pupil and exponent of Leschetisky, instructor to Paderewski and Mark Hambourg. She is a pianist of exceptional talent and unusual magnetism.

These two artists have a large music school in Bluefield, W. Va., and a splendid school on the Hill Top. Here is a wonderful opportunity for Hill Top people. Remember the same old policy, no charge for admission. This is not to raise money but to provide something worth while for the Hill Top, just a silver offering for expenses. Reserve the date, one week tonight. Given by Barnes Bible Class.

Ladies of the Third Division of the Aid of Glenwood Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Mary Acker, 105 Highland Ave., on Tuesday, Nov. 16, for an all day meeting. All are requested to be present and bring lunch.

Last Sunday morning at the Sunday School hour at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Sunday School, Miss Frances Oyler's class put on the first of a series of "stunts" which are to be put on this month by several classes of the Sunday School. Six of the girls represented a Sunday School class called the "Late Agains." Another girl took the part of the new teacher of the class, Miss "Right-on-time." The new teacher, not knowing that the class was always true to its name, arrived promptly on time and found only two girls there to greet her. After the lesson had been started, two other girls came rushing in, panting and exhausted. Because they interrupted the lesson by their fidgeting and squirming, the teacher became annoyed. The lesson had hardly been resumed, when the two other late-comers arrived in the same manner as the two preceding. The teacher, Miss "Right-on-time," being interrupted again, taught the girls a much needed lesson in the form of a story of a business man's failure to turn a big deal by being only three minutes late. Having heard this, the girls resolved, then and there, never to be late again and to change the name of their class from "Late-Agains" to "Try-Agains." Let this "stunt" appeal to YOU. Come out to Hoge Memorial Sunday School next Sunday morning at 9:15 o'clock and see the "stunt" which the Primary Department will stage at that time.

Miss Melinda Gschappal, who has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. N. C. Ault, 107 N. Eureka Ave., has returned to her home in Pittsburgh, Pa., where she will resume her duties as a nurse.

7:30—Evening service. Subject: "Is Jesus Really God?" This is a sermon on the deity of Christ. It will answer some questions you have been asking for a long time. There are those who teach that Jesus was not always God, but that He was made God because He died on the cross. They say He was just the next to God before that. Is this true? Or has He always been the very God of Gods from the foundation of the world? Why should we believe so? What did He mean when he said "My Father is greater than I?" You will be enlightened and helped by this message on the Person of our Lord.

PLANNED NEW WAR ON BRITAIN

Kaiser Talked of Second Clash While First Was Raging, Says Erzberger.

SOUGHT WORLD SUPREMACY

Parliamentary Leaders Stunned by Unexpected Display of Imperial Mentality—Was Hardest Blow to Old System.

Berlin, Germany—Former German Emperor William confidently expected to emerge victorious from the world war and then marshal his continental armies against Great Britain in what he termed "the second Punic war," says Mathias Erzberger in his volume of war recollections just published at Stuttgart. The emperor evidently used the term "Punic war" in the sense of a conflict for world supremacy between two great nations.

Herr Erzberger, who was formerly minister of finance but who has temporarily retired from public political activities, set forth in detail the meeting between the emperor, William, and the reichstag leaders after the fall of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and following the adoption of the peace resolution in July, 1917.

"Compromise" Means "Take All."

He says the emperor became enthusiastic over the phrase "peace or compromise," which he assumed was what the reichstag majority demanded.

"Excellent word—'Compromise,'" William stated. "It means that we take the money, raw products, cotton, oil and ores out of the pockets of our enemies and transfer them to our own."

The parliamentary leaders, Herr Erzberger continues, were astonished by this unexpected display of imperial mentality and felt that they were being made the victims of his mockery. The emperor's further remarks were in the same channel, he declares.

William asserted that the United States and Great Britain had entered into an alliance for the purpose of reckoning with Japan after the war. He was also reliably informed that Russia would join Japan in warding off the Anglo-Saxon blow. He admitted that Great Britain would not emerge from the war defeated, but said the final accounting would come when he led his continental armies against her in "the second Punic war."

Promised French Entente.

The amazement of the parliamentarians grew as the kaiser continued. Herr Erzberger reports. The monarch asserted that "a complete understanding would be reached with France when the war was over."

Referring to a battle in Galicia which occurred only a few days previous, the kaiser claimed that the Prussian guard under the command of his son Fritz had "brushed the democratic dust off the vests of the Russians."

"Wherever the guards appear there is no longer any democracy left," he exclaimed.

The Roumanians got their just deserts, the war lord told Herr Erzberger when the latter suggested that the poor Roumanians had probably lost everything but their shirts.

Herr Erzberger adds that the whole meeting between the kaiser and the parliamentary leaders was not only a grave misfortune, but it proved "the deepest cut with the spade that ultimately resulted in the overthrow of the prevailing regime."

He concludes the chapter with the statement that the reichstag veterans, who up to that time were opposed to the parliamentary system, that very night openly avowed that the old system would inevitably plunge Germany into disaster.

Ostrich Chick Whips House Cat and Dog

Vancouver, B. C.—Jonathan, the first ostrich chick hatched in Canada, is progressing under the care of Zoo Manager F. Green in Stanley park. It was at first believed that the valuable bird could not live and it was taken from its parents and placed in the Green home. Appearance of weakness proved deceptive, for Jonathan quickly licked the house cat and secured a decision over the family spaniel.

WHERE THE POET IS KING

Versifiers Seemingly Are Much Thought Of by the Sometimes Ungentle Mexican Soldiers.

Poets enjoy great privileges and immunities in Mexico.

They have a story in Coahuila about this power of poets. In the early stages of the constitutionalist revolution some federal troops had been driven from a wood, but a few of the little brown, pajamaed infantrymen climbed into the trees as easily as the monkeys they resembled. So the rebels went about as squirrel hunters. One party surrounded a tree in whose branches the fawn color of a uniform had been observed. Just as the rifles were raised, a brown hand with an oratorical gesture was thrust through the leaves, and a clipped head appeared.

"Don't shoot," said the voice with a theatrical modulation, "don't shoot me. I am a poet."

The soldier was the regimental poet, composer of the verses for the folksongs in which are related the progress of the campaign. Almost every regiment in the old federal army had its laureate.

"Come down, Mr. Poet," cried the men below, and they made him recite some of his verses, after which each one of the rebels gave him a good, hard hug.

One may not strike a poet, any more than a woman, whether he is up a tree in Coahuila or occupying a city in Dalmatia.—Leslie's.

What Did She Mean?

The curious effect sometimes produced in telegrams by want of punctuation or the omission of a single small word cannot fail to have struck everyone.

A London lawyer had a woman relative in Scotland from whom he had "expectations." She had been ailing for some weeks, when one morning came a telegram asking the lawyer's wife to go at once as she—his aunt—was much worse. His wife accordingly went.

During the evening of the following day the husband received this announcement:

"Aunt Matilda went to heaven at 8:30, returning by 11:50 tomorrow morning."

No Doubt.

"I don't believe there is really one state where all the women want to have a say."

"Oh, yes, there is; the state of matrimony."

SUNSHINE

To scatter rays of sunshine,
As through the world we go,
Over the gloomy heart-aches
Seeds of blessing throw.

To scatter rays of righteousness,
Into some loving heart,
Will help the soul to brighten,
Will heal some aching heart.

To follow in His footsteps,
As through this life we go,
We help to comfort others,
Their sins to overthrow.

And when our Master calls us,
Up to his throne above,
May we leave a wealth to others
Of Christianity and love.

Tinsel Is Gold

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Morella De Lue was at home.

It was rather a dingy room whose keynote was the drab-brown of the conventional cheap boarding house—but there were high lights of color where a gay silk petticoat burst through the swelling curtains of a corner closet, or pink lingerie tumbled carelessly out of a half-open drawer. The wide couch that served as a bed by night was heaped high with gorgeous pillows—and for the rest, there was Morella herself, red-gold hair endowed by nature, sea-blue eyes set beneath a thoughtful brow; a large, sweet mouth that always smiled—oftentime when it wanted to droop with weariness—a tiny mite of a Morella, who could dance like an elf on the brim of the magic fountain, and who could sing cheerily in the dull room as she sewed spangles on gossamer elfin wings that she must wear that night.

Heavy footsteps sounded outside her door, and she heard the plaintive voice of her landlady.

"A gentleman to see you, Miss De Lue—here's his card." The steps wandered away and Morella snatched at the bit of white pasteboard under the door. "Andrew—" she breathed softly. "Andrew Fenton—coming here to see—it's a joke—Nony Waite has played a joke on you and is now giggling in the parlor downstairs." Nevertheless, she kissed the card and tucked it away in her workbasket. In a moment she had changed the kimono for a little gray gown, twisted her glorious hair into a semblance of order and went demurely downstairs to the grim parlor where Andrew Fenton, author of the musical show "The Magic Fountain," was waiting to see her—for Morella was the humblest member of the dancing elves. Sometimes Fenton had talked to her behind the scenes, but this was the first time he had singled her out for marked attention.

"Andrew Fenton—coming here to see me!"

Andrew Fenton was a clever-looking man of thirty-five, with brilliant dark eyes and a fine mouth that smiled down at Morella's astonishment in a very kindly way.

"It's a glorious day, Miss DeLue," he said. "You looked pale last night—my car is outside and I'm going to take you out to the shore to see the waves dancing in the sunshine—perhaps you might learn some new steps, but I believe you could teach the waves to fly!"

"Angelic man!" sighed Morella, twin roses in her cheeks, feeling like saucy Nony Waite.

Later, when the wheels of the powerful machine crunched a sandy shore and the fresh sound breeze had whipped more color into Morella's lovely little face, Fenton brought the conversation around to the play, Morella's part in it, and finally asked her bluntly what she was doing in New York anyway, all alone at her age.

"Born here," said Morella briefly.

"But not bred here," smiled Fenton.

"Well—we did live in a little country town for years—then mother died and father married again—well, I've always longed for New York and Broadway—isn't it wonderful?" She sighed the sigh of the neophyte.

Fenton laughed. "Dear child, what is Broadway?"

"Broadway is New York and New York is Broadway—it is life," she blazed defiance.

"Poor child," he pitied. "New York is a display of fireworks—you are dazzled by it. What you call life is—well, three-quarters of the men and women streaming in and out of the brightly-lighted places are country folk dizzy with the lights and the music and dancing—some day, often too late, they wake up."

Morella was a little frightened. In spite of her bravado she had grown to fear the merciless city.

"But I am part of New York," she protested at last. "I help to make it gay with my dancing—of course I know I am only a bit of the tinsel of life—" all the fresh color drained from her face. "I hope you will pardon me—but I read in the paper the other day of your engagement," her voice became halting. "She is very beautiful."

"You mean Miss Vare?"

"Yes."

"She is beautiful—but we are no longer engaged, and—" he bit his lip viciously and Morella saw that the memory of the other girl hurt him.

"I am sorry," she said, and tried to talk of other things, but her voice failed. She could not help thinking about the girl he loved—a girl who was pure gold and not tinsel of the stage. That night as she dressed for the last scene she hated the glittering elfin dress—creature of the hot lights of Broadway. Once someone asked her if she felt ill, but she shook her head and went on smiling, dancing—starry-eyed, beautiful until the curtain rang down, when suddenly she became a weary, draggled elf—the last to leave the dressing room.

Then, as she was leaving, a sweet feminine voice drew her back again. The great empty space behind the stage was vacant, with here and there a dim light burning in a wire cage and Morello gasped as she recognized the charming girl in a rich evening coat, who had an elusive air of belonging to the gold of life.

It was Andrew Fenton's Miss Vare.

"I couldn't find a messenger," she said plaintively, "and I wonder if you will be kind enough to find out if Mr. Fenton is here—and take a message."

Morella was quite pale. She was wearing the little gray dress and hat and her hair was knotted low on her neck. "I shall be glad to take a message," she said slowly, for she was afraid.

"Thank you," said Miss Vare, "and, now, please tell him that Miss Vare will be waiting for him in the lobby and that she will drive him home—he will understand—tell him she will wait only five minutes," the sweet voice broke a little, and as she turned away Morella saw a triumphant curl of the haughty lips.

"She looks unkind," thought Morella, speeding on her errand, then she suddenly leaned against the wall and cried a little. She wanted to be gold! All at once strong hands gripped her shoulders and turned her around.

"Why the tears?" asked Fenton gently.

"She is waiting for you—hurry—she will drive you home—she will wait just five minutes—I mean Miss Vare," she explained smiling through her tears.

"Is that all?" he asked, searching her face with keen eyes.

"Is it not enough—from her?" she whispered.

He put his hand under her chin. "Morella, shall I go?"

"Yes—before it is too late."

"And if I would rather stay with you—always?"

"Ah! I—I—I am only tinsel—"

He laughed exultantly and drew her close to his heart. "Beloved elf, don't you know that when love, the alchemist, touches tinsel—then tinsel is gold?"

TAKE EVEN VERDUN LIGHTS

Depredations of Souvenir Hunters Cause of Fort Being Closed to Visitors.

Paris.—A lesson to tourists too anxious to take away with them souvenirs of the battle front has just been given by the military authorities of Fort Vaux, which has hitherto been open to visitors to Verdun.

The authorities have decided to close the fort indefinitely. A few days ago a tourist took possession, doubtless as a souvenir, of an electric lamp bulb. He was indiscreet enough to make flourish of the bulb in a Verdun cafe. The military authorities confiscated the bulb, and then came the order making the fort "out of bounds" to visitors.

FIX LABRADOR LIMITS

Discovery of Timber Suitable for Pulp Starts New Inquiry.

Boundary Line Between Newfoundland and Canadian Province of Quebec Long in Dispute.

St. Johns, N. F.—Recent surveys of Labrador which have disclosed immense resources of timber suitable for pulp and paper manufacture have led to a revival of efforts to bring about a determination of the boundary line between Newfoundland and the Canadian province of Quebec.

This line has never been laid down by actual survey, and its various definitions as given in the documents issued at intervals in the last century and a half are so vague that government officials do not know just how much of Labrador belongs to Newfoundland and how much to Canada.

That Labrador is rich in many natural resources, including enormous water power, has long been known, but the practicability of utilizing its forests for paper making was not demonstrated until the world-wide paper shortage led to exhaustive investigations of the territory.

This resulted in applications by promoters to the Newfoundland government for timber limits in Labrador. As these could not be acted upon until it was determined whether Newfoundland owned the land in question representatives of this colony were sent to London later in the summer to discuss with eminent English counsel the preparation of a formal draft of Newfoundland's Labrador claims as opposed to those of Canada.

The coast of Labrador was annexed to Newfoundland in 1763. Ten years later, owing to difficulties arising out of grants made to a number of persons under the French rule, it was changed to Canadian jurisdiction. In 1809 it was again transferred to Newfoundland, and has since been attached to that country.

The difficulty arises over different interpretations of the words "coast of Labrador." One view is that Newfoundland can claim only the coast between Blanc Sablon and Cape Chidley, with perhaps half a mile inland, and that the rest of Labrador belongs to Canada.

As defined in the letters patent constituting the office of governor of Newfoundland, the boundary was described as a line drawn between Blanc Sablon and Cape Chidley, which would pass through the ocean in certain sections and leave large areas of the coast to the westward of the line and therefore not under Newfoundland jurisdiction.

Many Newfoundland officials hold to the view that the correct delimitation was made in a sessional paper issued in this colony in 1864. Under the phraseology of this document Newfoundland would be entitled to thousands of square miles of the interior of the Labrador peninsula in addition to the coast.

PERSONALS

Mrs. John Lambert, 2339 West Broad St., who has been confined to her bed for the past week, under the care of Dr. W. N. Cole, is slowly improving.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Dike, of 184 South Ogden avenue, returned last week from a ten days' visit in the South, taking in Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans, La.

Bernard, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hill, 166 North Harris avenue, is again seriously ill at the home of his parents.

The Rev. Mrs. A. E. Cowley will entertain Mrs. Cowley's mother, Mrs. Anna Williams; also her brother, Mr. Edward Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose and family, sister and brother-in-law of Newark, Ohio, over Thanksgiving.

Mrs. E. Schaible, 147 South Eureka avenue, who is visiting her daughter in Cayce, S. C., a suburb of Columbia, writes: "Most people of the North imagine it is warm here. That is a mistake, for it is very cold and damp in the mornings and evenings. It is now noon, and we are now (November 15) sitting in front of a fire to keep warm."

USE ROYAL ESTATES

To Supply Pension Fund for Care of Invalid Soldiers.

War Victims to Receive Incomes From All Property Left by the Emperor of Austria

Vienna.—The vast estates of the late Emperor Francis Joseph will be devoted to the pension fund of invalid soldiers under a decision just taken by the cabinet council. Certain castles and dwellings in this city and the nearby suburb of Baden will either be occupied by them or the fund will receive the rentals and other accruements.

Included in the arrangement are the splendid estates of Orth, Voessendorf, Maltighoefen, Poeggstall, Augonten, Laxenburg, Hetsendorf and many others, the decision also covering the Laine Tiergarten, near Vienna, on which a group of some hundreds of former soldiers recently squatted.

The income of the Prater, Vienna's most famous suburban park with its numerous restaurants and amusement places, is also included. Many of the estates contain model farms and others are under rentals of much value.

The late Emperor Francis Joseph, who died in 1916, bequeathed 60,000,000 crowns from his private fortune to a fund for wounded soldiers, invalids and relatives of men killed in the war. To two daughters and one granddaughter he bequeathed 20,000,000 crowns of his estate to be divided among several other legatees.

It has since been reported that an American-Dutch company has bought the emperor's summer palace at Ischl, in the Tyrol, for hotel purposes. The hunting estates and lodges of the late emperor in the Tyrol were advertised for sale in January last. Francis considered these the finest in Europe.

RAIL DEATHS AT LOW MARK

Fewer Killed in Railway Accidents in 1919 Than in Any Year Since 1898.

Washington.—Fewer persons were killed on railroads during 1919 than in any year since 1898, and fewer were injured than in any year since 1910, said a statement issued by the interstate commerce commission.

During 1919 a total of 6,978 persons were killed and 149,053 injured, compared with 6,859 killed in 1898 and 119,507 injured in 1910.

Of the killed during the year 277 were passengers and of the injured 7,456 were passengers. Employees killed during 1919 numbered 2,138, and 131,018 were injured.

Fewer trespassers on railroads were killed in 1919 than during any year of the commission's records, which go back to 1890. Last year 2,553 trespassers were killed and 2,658 injured. Railroad officials said there were less persons out of employment and fewer tramps than formerly, because of the war.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Huge Memorial Presbyterian church will hold their annual Praise and Thank Offering Service Sunday evening at 7:30 in the church. A special program has been prepared. Everyone cordially invited.

Mr. Carl Leibensperger and Miss Geneva Westlake were married on Thursday, November 18th, at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. E. B. White, South Warren avenue. They will make their home on the Hilltop, West Broad.

Work is progressing on the new Sullivant Avenue School building, so that the first story is well under way.

We wish all Hilltop people a happy Thanksgiving, and a rapid recovery from the effects of their turkey (?) dinner.

The new bank building at South Park and Broad is now completed and awaits the furniture to make it ready for business.

The Little Story That's True

A prominent Hilltop man relates this one:

"A woman, pushing a baby buggy in which a babe was lying asleep, stopped at my place to make a purchase, when along came a half-drunken man, who, when he spied the sleeping babe, tottered up beside it and stopped, then leaned away over it with hands on his knees and his face but a few inches above the sleeping child, and stood there looking longingly and earnestly for several moments; then as the mother returned to the side of her babe, he raised up and remarked: 'Woman, I wish I could sleep like that,' and tottered on, with the mother looking wonderingly at him.

"Little did she know what was back of that remark. Years ago he had killed another man, was convicted and paid the penalty in prison, but, after his release, the crime he had committed became such a burden on his mind that he could not sleep at nights, because of it. Becoming desperate, nervous and disheartened, he turned to drink with the deluded thought that this would bring him relief, but instead of being a 'cup that cheers' it was one of deeper sorrows, for it had now made an absolute wreck of him and brought him to the state that nothing but a half-drunken condition every hour of his life could seemingly satisfy.

"The last time I saw that man, he made the statement to me: 'I hope Ohio goes dry forever.'"

Mrs. Melvina R Collins, wife of Mr. Homer C. Collins, died of complication Monday at her home in the Franklin Heights Addition, Camp Chase. Funeral will be Friday, at 10:00 a. m., at Franklin Heights Evangelical Church, Sullivant ave and Durr road. Burial in Union Cemetery by Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Now that we have apparently hit the top, and the bottom is in the distance, what do you think of a small place in the country to say three, five, ten, fourteen, twenty-five, thiry or more acres, where there are more jobs than men? The money you have to pass over the counter if you are on your job will be much smaller than it is in the city, and almost as good schools and luxuries as in the city. ## "Oliver Twist's" Gruel Boiler Offered Museum

London.—With other Dickens relics, the iron boiler in which, according to "Oliver Twist," watery gruel was boiled for young Oliver and other inmates of St. George's workhouse, Borough, S. E., has been offered to the Southwark museum. St. George's workhouse, in the yard of which stood a public house kept by the mother of the highwayman Jack Sheppard, has been closed.

Ice-Bound for Months.

Nome, Alaska.—Capt. Joe Bernard and A. Anderson have arrived here with their vessel, the Teddy Bear, after four years spent in the Arctic, during 28 months of which time they were ice-bound at Taylor island in Victoria strait, near King William Land. Captain Bernard brought with him a native of the land of Stefansson's blonde Eskimos, but declared that after two years' search of that district he was unable to locate any of the blonde natives. He found sod houses evidently of great age on East Carnation gulf, he said, and brought back pieces of old ivory and other curios uncovered in the ruins.

Church Doings

Just recently there has been subscribed by the membership of Highland avenue friends an amount close to $2000 to finish the basement of the church so that the much needed Sabbath school rooms will now be a reality. A furnace capable of heating both the church and basement will be installed by the Haslett Bros. furnace company in the next few days. It was no small job to excavate the dirt from the basement in the neighborhood of 800 yards of dirt having been taken out by the men of the church who have been so faithful in this respect working at night in order to accomplish the job and save the church this extra expense.

In view of the gas shortage it would seem we got busy at the right time in order to have furnace heat.

We are glad to announce to the public that we believe the church will be comfortably heated after the furnace is installed.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Our new pastor, Daniel G. Hodgins moved from Brighton, Mich., the past week and is located at 113 Whitethorne avenue. Come and hear him preach the good old gospel, we are sure you will want to hear him again.

Redemption of Doughnuts

By E. RAY BAKER

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Virginia, in her twentieth year, was an accomplished young lady, in addition to being the village belle. She played the violin, was an athletic young woman, and the histrionic ability she displayed in amateur theatricals made many a sage forecast a life of fame for her in the films.

Wayne was the only young man to be shown partiality in her distribution of favors. She treated all her suitors very sweetly, but to Wayne she gave her love, and it was certain that his financial or social standing had nothing to do with his being honored.

Wayne was an orphan, but his uncle had adopted him and left him all his property when death stepped in a few years back. The property consisted of a piece of scrub land on the village outskirts and a ramshackle house on it. Wayne, at twenty-three, dwelt in the shack and clerked in Hannaford's grocery.

The death of Virginia's father put her in the orphan class with Wayne. When the probate court got through Virginia had the family roof over her and that was all. In order to make a living she opened a bakeshop in the front of the house. And that was where the trouble started.

Wayne objected to the bakeshop. He had higher ideas for his fiancee. Why couldn't she teach music or become a gymnasium instructor, or even go to California and get into the films? he wanted to know.

"Because none of those things appeal to me as a means of support," she retorted. "I like music and athletics and theatricals as a pastime, but for making money I prefer mixing dough."

The Haggard bakeshop did a good business, and the big, brown sugared

"Could I Presume Further on Your Charity?"

doughnuts made there proved its principal advertising medium. People came from all over the country to buy Virginia's doughnuts.

The greater the prosperity of the bakeshop business the stronger became Wayne's protests.

"Why don't you get into something else yourself?" she flared up at him one night when he was a caller. "You don't seem to be doing so much. Clerking in a grocery isn't much ahead of mixing dough."

It was Wayne's turn to flare.

"All right; all right. Have it your way. I'll show you," he grated, and he seized his hat and walked to the door.

Virginia protested, but he opened the door and strode out into the night and out of Virginia's life.

The next morning an outbound interurban car carried among its passengers one Wayne Wilson with a dismal looking suitcase in his hand and a fire in his heart. He flung all other thoughts but success to the winds, and in ten years he was owner of a string of prosperous grocery stores in Portland. He had needed just some such taunt as the one Virginia hurled at him to make him get out and hustle.

Fifteen years after he left Carlton Wayne was a sordid money maker. The one romance of his life was all but forgotten. A hardened bachelor of thirty-eight was Wayne Wilson—not a woman hater, because women did not play a sufficiently important part in his life to be hated.

Then he decided it was time to take a vacation and he traveled along the coast from Vancouver to Lower California. On his way back to Portland he decided to visit Carlton—not for any particular reason, but just to look things over and see if he knew anybody. If he gave Virginia a thought it was to vision her indistinctly, perhaps as the wife of Bud Jenkins or Jimmie Upton.

At Rose City he left the steam train and transferred to a decrepit interurban car.

The ancient car rattled and groaned, and shook the ambition out of Wayne and made him sleepy, so he dozed with an elbow on the window sill.

When he awoke from his nap it was night and he felt a sharp gnawing in his stomach. He looked at his watch and saw it was 11 o'clock. To his surprise the car was not in motion. He could hear voices outside and saw two men whom he remembered as fellow passengers, pacing beside the track, cigars glowing in their mouths. Wayne was alone in the car except for a woman who sat some distance away with her back toward him.

Wayne aroused himself, went outside and accosted the two men.

"Have we gone past Carlton?"

"I should say not," one of them answered. "We aren't half way there yet. We haven't any power. The third rail's absolutely dead—has been for five hours. The conductor's gone on a ten-mile hike to the nearest telephone. Believe me, this is a dismal place to be dumped. Right out in the wilderness fifteen miles from any road. We're out of luck."

Wayne groaned. Next to grabbing money he liked eating, and his stomach had been out of a job eight hours.

"I'm starving," he complained. "Isn't there a chance for a feed?"

The two men smiled.

"There's just one way I know of," said one of them. "There's a lady in the car who has some provisions with her, and she filled us up. I've seen her before on this run. She has a store in Rose City and another at Carlton. Perhaps if you'd ask her she'd give you some doughnuts."

Wayne winced and tried to convince himself he wasn't hungry. Doughnuts! Not for 16 years had he eaten one.

He returned to the car and never looked at the lady in front of him. He resumed his place at the window and tried to sleep, but his stomach wouldn't let him. He pictured mentally a nice, large, brown, sweet doughnut with a hole in it, and his mouth watered.

"I'll not do it," he said determinedly, and shifted his position. He closed his eyes, but the action had no effect on his stomach.

"I'm starving," he groaned. "Shoe leather would taste good."

Wayne heard a noise at his side and turned to see the lady passenger holding out a cardboard box in which reposed a half dozen tempting-looking doughnuts.

"Have one," she said with a dazzling smile. She could not have been more than thirty-five.

Wayne still tried to resist temptation."

"No—no, thanks," he said shortly, but she smiled again and held out the box, and he surrendered.

As he munched a doughnut he couldn't help feeling there was something familiar about the handsome passenger. The light had been dim, and except when her radiant smile re-enforced it, he had not got a good look at her. He had eaten two doughnuts, but still he was hungry, and he left his seat and walked to the one in which sat the lady.

"Pardon me," he said, lifting his hat. "Could I presume further on your charity?"

She made room for him beside her and held out the doughnuts.

"Certainly—Wayne," she said. "Won't you sit down and talk it over?"

And so they made up after 15 years—Virginia Haggard and Wayne Wilson.

Doughnuts were the reason.

A Love Set

By FREDERICK HART

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Now what do you think of that?" asked Mrs. Maria Johnson, regarding the athletic set-up figure of their summer boarder as he walked across the lawn in front of the comfortable old farm house. "The young man's taking Carrie out to teach her to play tennis."

Mr. Johnson looked up from the farm catalogue he was perusing and grunted, which was as near as he ever came to making a direct reply to any question of his wife's. Undiscouraged, she continued:

"Tain't right, in my mind, for him to fill the girl's head with a lot o' high-falutin' city nonsense. Tennis! Why, the girl didn't know nothin' at all about it, an' first thing you know she'll be settin' herself up like a regular debbytant like we read about in the papers. Why don't you say somethin', Jobiah?" This last to her spouse, exasperated at his apparent lack of attention.

Thus admonished, Mr. Jobiah Johnson put down the catalogue with a regretful sigh and betook himself to speech.

"I don't see 's it's goin' to do her any harm to get a little knowledge o' a game like tennis," he began. "Sides, that there boarder of ourn 's a real likable young feller. You let them young 'uns alone, Maria; 'tain't no harm goin' to come out o' our Mary playin' with him. You jest let 'em alone."

Mrs. Johnson could think of no adequate reply, so she contented herself with a sniff, which expressed a world of doubt of the correctness of her husband's judgment. But a glance at the two young people showed that they were dolefously batting a ball back and forth without any suspicious actions, so she was forced to conclude that, for once, her husband was right.

Meanwhile, out on the sunny stretch of grass near the orchard fence the young man and "our Mary" continued to bat the innocent ball back and forth. It was Mary's first experience with a tennis racquet, and she displayed a charming awkwardness. They had neither net nor lines, but what did they care? Mary had caught eagerly at the handsome youth's suggestion that she learn a little about the game, and he, on his part, was by no means averse to take the chance to talk to her that his tutelage offered.

He had been at Cold Springs farm for four seasons, and during that time he had seen Mary grow from a shy youngster of fifteen to a charming creature who might well catch the eye of any young man, let alone a youth of Edgar Clark's discrimination. And he, in his turn, was not one to be passed lightly by. Tall, sun-browned, handsome, he was a youth to be looked at more than once, and many maidens of his acquaintance had looked at him several times. But it remained for Mary to capture his heart—although he hadn't told her yet. For once in his life he was afraid.

Not only was he afraid of Mary, with her bright eyes and rippling brown hair, but of her mother. Mrs. Johnson had all the conventional suspicion of the "city man," and though he had striven with might and main to make himself popular with her, he had to acknowledge that she still regarded him with nothing more than tolerance. The tennis idea had been an inspiration on his part; Mary had shown desire to learn the game and he had been quick to seize the opportunity of circumventing the maternal supervision.

Mary, though clumsy at first, showed a remarkable aptitude for the game and Edgar soon found himself regretting that there was no regular court for them to play on. An idea suddenly presented itself to him.

"Mary," he said, "why don't you get your mother to let you come over to the Country club with me some afternoon and practice? You are good enough now to play a regular game, but we have no court here, and I want you to have the experience of playing with the net and lines. What do you say?"

"Oh, I'm afraid mother never would let me go. She—doesn't want me to be with you so much."

A blush and averted eyes accompanied these last words.

Edgar's heart leaped. In her admission that her mother did not approve of their companionship he found an indication that Mary herself did not altogether disapprove. He pressed his point.

"Perhaps your father would drive us over," he suggested. "It's not very far, and surely he's as good a chaperon as one could find. Do ask him tonight and see what he thinks."

Mary waited till after dinner and then approached her father on the subject. What she said and what he said were never known, but bright and early the next morning the buggy was at the door, and a very excited Mary and a secretly thrilled Edgar sat demurely beside Mr. Jobiah Johnson as they started for the Country club.

On the courts Mary blossomed out into a really brilliant player. The lines bothered her at first, but she soon became accustomed to them. "You're a natural player, Mary," said Edgar. "You play as though you were born with a racket in your hand. Now we'll practice for another half hour, and

For Winter Eggs Use it NOW

RIGHT now—today—when your hens are building up after the molt—when your pullets are maturing and developing their laying organs—give them Pratts Poultry Regulator. It costs but a trifle—only about one cent a hen per month—but, as life-long users say, "it does make hens lay." for nearly fifty years has been America's most popular poultry tonic and conditioner. It is a medicinal preparation, not a food—a natural tonic and health builder. Used daily at the rate of a rounded tablespoonful for each ten fowls, it strengthens the weakened molters—hastens the growth of the pullets—starts them laying early—helps keep them at it all winter. The extra eggs are clear profit!

Pratts Poultry Regulator

Try this plan and get that extra profit. But be sure to use the genuine Pratts. Then we take the risk, because

"CLASSES" IN PORTO RICO

American Chief of the Insular Police on Island Identifies Them by Shape of Their Feet.

The American chief of the insular police on the island of Porto Rico divides the people into four categories for the purpose of identification, according to the shape of their feet. The minority, mostly town dwellers, wear shoes. Of the great mass of countrymen, those with broad, flat feet live in the cane lands around the coast. The coffee men have over developed big toes, because they use them in climbing the steep hillsides from bush to bush. In the tobacco districts, according to Harry A. Franck, writing in the Century, where the planting is done with the feet, they are short and stubby.

Despite the ruggedness of the island it is easy to travel about it, as there are hundreds of miles of excellent railroads covering Porto Rico with a network of quick transit that reaches all points. A railroad encircles the western two-thirds of the island, with trains by night as well as by day. It is doubtful if there is any state in the Union that can rival this detached bit in extent of roads, and there is none that can rival it in the scenic splendor that so generally flanks them.

then have lunch; and after lunch I'm going to play a full set with you."

During lunch Mr. Johnson announced that he thought he would go down to the village to buy a little "truck for your ma," as he put it. Mary looked surprised, but Edgar was secretly delighted. Mr. Johnson departed, promising to return early.

The set began. Edgar, of course, had no difficulty in winning game after game, and soon the score became five-love in his favor. As they passed each other to change courts for the next game Mary said defiantly, "I'm going to beat you this game—and you can't take a love set from me."

"We'll see about that," laughed Edgar, and sent the first ball whistling into court. Mary returned it, and there was a fierce but brief rally. The point went to Edgar. He went back to serve again.

Mary failed to return this ball, and the score was thirty-love. In the right-hand court Edgar managed to take the next point, too. Mary went back for her last chance to save the set. Edgar's serve was straight and swift, but she returned it—a high lob that fell well back in Edgar's court. He bent far back and swung his racket; there was a white streak through the air and the ball struck the ground close to the back line. Edgar thought that it was out, and walked to the other court to serve again, but Mary came toward him.

"That shot was in," she said in a faltering voice. "That's game—and set."

Edgar approached the net, and as she came up to him he held out his arms. "Yes," he said. "That's game and set—a love set, Mary. Do you know what that means?"

With a little sigh she rested her brown head on his shoulder.

"Yes, Edgar," she whispered. "It means—I love you."

TRIED BEYOND HIS PATIENCE

Long-Suffering Man Reasoned That He Simply Had to Draw the Line Somewhere.

Lawyer T—— was being solicited for a donation to help bring a child welfare worker to his community. He refused rather brusquely. The woman who was soliciting was amazed. He had always been generous before this time. And because she was insistent he gave his reason for being otherwise now.

"Well, first you came to me for money to bring a specialist on food here. I gave and for almost a year after she was here I ate all sorts of miserable stuff, which my wife learned was healthy at those lectures. Next you brought an interior decorator here. After those talks she moved the furniture in all sorts of positions, changing it every day until I had stubbed every toe and skinned every shin I had. And now—well, I love my children too well to give to this new fund and have them experimented on."—Indianapolis News.

Local Items

The Hilltop Fire Department was called to Highland and Fairfield on Thanksgiving afternoon where an automobile and garage were on fire, caused it is thought, by back firing of the machine. The fire was extinguished with a loss to the owner of about $50.00.

Miss Viola Kuch, 465 S. Warren Ave., entertained with a miscellaneous shower honoring her sister, Louise, a bride-elect. Those present were: Martha Allen, Emma and Margaret Andrews, Helen Baughman, Gladys Engard, Rhea Harris, Mrs. W. H. Hess, Loma Hall, Ollie Halfich, Hazel Hibler, Blanche Kuder, Harriett Kuntz, Mrs. A. D. Metler, Edna Marshall, Mary Queinn, Elizabeth Southward, Mrs. L. R. Schiff, Clara and Edith Nuber, Nora Stoner, Pauline Walker, Fern Williams, Ruth, Viola and Louise Kuch.

Frank L. Loveland, who is to be heard in Glenwood Church Lyceum course, is a combination of thinker, student and orator. Once in a while a man arises who is saturated and fired with some great theme that he is the very embodiment of that theme. Such a man is Dr. Loveland, whose lecture deals masterly with the problems of our national life. The same sturdy Americanism which united our country and led it triumphant through the war is still necessary in these times of social and industrial struggles. Dr. Loveland is in the field preaching the gospel of patriotism and sanity.

Announcement is made of the marriage Saturday, November 27 of Florence O. Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Dunn, 23 S. Terrace St., to Mr. S. Parks Johnson, of Nashport, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson spent Saturday and Sunday with the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. John H. Johnson at Nashpost.

The Ideal Restaurant served their first annual Thanksgiving dinner last Thursday. It included turkey and all that goes with it to make an "ideal" Thanksgiving dinner. About twenty persons took advantage of this special dinner and report being highly pleased. Mrs. Dulgar, the manager, announces a Christmas dinner also.

FACTS ABOUT THE COAL SITUATION

The bold article in Monday Evening's Dispatch charging the retail coal dealers of Columbus with profiteering, is not only erroneous and misleading, but is an absolute lie, as far as we are concerned especially, and we believe the same is true of the dealers in general.

We furnish below a schedule showing the facts as regards the coal we have handled since Sept. 1st.

| Mo. | Avg. Cost Cars at mines | Freight | Price delivered on Hilltop Serv. | top |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Sep. 2 | $6.50 | $1.40 | $2.10 | $10.00 |
| Oct. 4 | 6.50 | 1.40 | 2.10 | 10.00 |
| Oct. 2 | 7.40 | 1.40 | 2.20 | 11.00 |
| Oct. 2 | 5.58 R of M | 1.40 | 1.72 | 9.00 |
| Nov. 7 | 6.30 | 1.40 | 2.30 | 10.00 |

The item Service is the amount we add to the cost of the coal delivered at our yard, for such items as Tax on Freight, Spillage, Leakage, Steelage, Labor at from $22.00 to $30.00 a week, Weighing cost, Office hire, and Expense, Horse and Wagon Expense, Feed, Repairs, etc., Truck Expense, Fuel, etc., cost of delays occasioned by bad weather, rain and being out of coal. These and many other items of cost such as taxes, insurance and the like soon pile up.

It is generally conceded that the coal merchant is entitled to 2.50 to $3.00 a ton for handling coal to pay expenses, insure them against loss and enable them to make a reasonable margin of profit.

We have a few cars now coming that we bought at the mines for $5.00 a ton, that we can sell for $9.00 delivered on the Hilltop. We have for the past two weeks refused to pay over that amount for coal at the mines and have therefore been getting a very limited amount, and if we are out of coal when cold weather comes, it will be for that reason. We want you to read over the above carefully, and if you think we have been charging too much for coal, then we are either profiteers or very poor business men. All we want is a square deal and the responsibility for high prices placed where they belong. There are a few big operators, with offices in Columbus, that have been saying that their price at the mine was $4.50 to $5.50 for several months, but they never had any to sell.

Thanking you for your patience in the past few months, and trusting that we will be in position very soon to handle the trade better than ever, we are,

Sincerely yours,
The West Side Lumber Co.

First Division of Glenwood Aid Society will meet Tuesday Dec. 7th at the home of Mrs. Burkett, 2527 W. Broad St. Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Hutson and Mrs. Wm. Jones will be assisting hostesses.

The men of St John's meet on next Tuesday evening with Mr. Charles Castle, 314 S. Warren Ave.

The Rev. and Mrs. Richard E. Shields of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church were surprised by members of the congregation, Monday night at their home, 2503 W. Broad St. The occasion was a "Pound Social" to which each one brought a gift and stocked the larder with provisions of all kinds. The social was planned in the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Shields who spent the Thanksgiving season in New York City. The manse was crowded with happy people. Games were played and "stunts" practiced on several, which were very kindly taken and which were a source of merriment for all. Refreshments were served after which Elder W. H. Deems speaking for those present told the recipients the reasons for thus coming in upon them so unexpectedly and mentioned among other things the appreciation the members felt for the services of their pastor and family during the last two years. Mr. Shields responded and assured them of his readiness to go on with the work and extended thanks to all for their thoughtfulness. After the departure of the guests the pastor and family felt themselves to have been well "pounded."

Women's brown and black kid lace boots, welt soles and military heels, $10.00 to $12.00.
Misses Heavy Sole Rubbers, $1.00.
Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

There will be a meeting of the Hilltop Post, American Legion, at 7:30 sharp, Friday evening, at Glenwood Shelter House. All ex-service men are welcome. Come and learn of the 48th.

T. E. Smith wishes to announce that he has opened up a shoe repair shop at 259 West Broad St. He will call for and deliver work. Call Hilltop 183.

Plan Legislative Activity in Favor of Kindergarten Work.

National Association Reports Many States as Taking an Interest in the Subject.

Washington.—A wave of interest in early education is sweeping over the country, according to the National Kindergarten association of New York, which says that plans for legislative activity have been reported from Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, New Mexico, South Dakota, Tennessee, Wisconsin and New York.

Porto Rico is also going to work for a favorable kindergarten law.

The latest figures compiled by the bureau of education at Washington show that this country contains 4,000,000 children between four and six years of age for whom no educational provision has been made, though all are entitled to receive kindergarten training.

The kindergarten has long since demonstrated its value as a means of making sturdier bodies, more alert minds, and a finer sense of integrity and morality. Its friends feel that it is quite time that a kindergarten should be in every one of our public schools, and are working to that end.

The people of California have demonstrated that the most effective way to secure this advantage for our children is by legislation. They secured a law in 1913 under which their kindergartens have increased from 149 to over 700.

The law provides that when the parents of 25 children of kindergarten age present a petition for a kindergarten, it should be established.

In speaking of the need for kindergarten training for our children, Commissioner Claxton of the United States bureau of education has said:

"The kindergarten is a vital factor in American education, both for its direct work with young children in the kindergarten and for its influence on the care of children in the home and on methods of teaching in the schools. It ought to become a part of the public system of every city, town and village in the country."

INDIA'S MIGHTY HUNTER

The Maharajah of Bikanir, famous the world over as a big game hunter, photographed in Nepal, India, with the tigress he shot on a recent hunt. The tigress is said to be the biggest on record, measuring nine feet seven inches. The maharajah, who holds a commission of major general in the British army, has shot 104 tigers during his big game hunting career.

GRAFT THERE ALSO

Investigation in Argentina Discloses Dishonesty.

Government Claims That 5,500,000 Pesos Were "Unduly" Paid for "Palace of Gold."

Buenos Aires.—Argentina has been having a graft investigation, as a result of which it has been found that 5,500,000 pesos have been "unduly" disbursed by former government officials who directed payments to contractors for building the capitol here. The present government has announced its intention of bringing suits to recover the money improperly paid.

The building, a magnificent structure of classic architecture, marble facings and broad sweeps of marble steps not unlike the capitol at Washington, is insistently called in the newspapers "El Palacio de Oro," Spanish for "The Palace of Gold." It was begun in 1897, and was originally to have cost 10,000,000 pesos. It is not yet entirely finished and has cost 27,000,000 pesos.

Recently a committee of the national accountancy department completed an investigation of the expenditure of the moneys paid for construction of the building, and reported that 5,500,000 pesos had been "unduly" disbursed.

Buenos Aires newspapers told, years ago, of wagon loads of building material that went in the front door of the structure, soon after came out the back door and then disappeared. Charges were made that marble was paid for, but concrete used for part of the construction, and other accusations of graft were aired. It was then that the newspapers began to call it "The Palace of Gold."

POLICE HERO DECORATED

Policeman Charles L. Mangels of the San Francisco police force was recently decorated by four-year-old Estalle McDaniell for the rescue of little Vera Mihailova after she had fallen from a transport just leaving the dock for a voyage to Petrograd with Russian refugee children some months ago.

Girl Weds in Hospital When Told She May Die

Harrisburg, Pa.—So ill that she is not expected to recover, Miss Clara E. Anderson was wedded in the Harrisburg hospital to John K. Tomlinson, by the Rev. Lewis C. Manges. Miss Anderson was operated on several days ago, and when physicians held out little hope for her recovery, she decided to get married. The bride is employed in the department of internal affairs, and her husband is employed as a chauffeur in the state highway department.

QUEER COUNTERFEIT APPEARS

Secret Service Operatives Discover a $5 Gold Piece Which Contains $40 Worth of Platinum.

Washington.—A queer old counterfeit of a $5 gold piece was turned up by the treasury secret service which is worth eight times the value of the coin it is supposed to represent. It is made of platinum.

The counterfeit $5 pieces were made years ago and bear the date 1869. Several years ago some of these spurious coins were discovered by the scion of a wealthy family in Maine, when he turned out the contents of a strong box that had long been the repository of family heirlooms. The coins were sent to the Treasury department, when their counterfeit nature was discovered and the whole lot was confiscated.

Secret service officials are at a loss to know how the latest specimen captured got into circulation.

Blase California Ducks Lose Fear of Airplane

Yuba City.—R. V. Olds and A. H. Tregoning, both former A. E. F. flyers, now in the employ of the Sutter Basin company with a contract to keep ducks and geese off the 7,500 acres of rice, say ducks have come in by thousands in the last few days. As soon as they frightened the ducks away from one part of the field with their airplane, another flock alights on the opposite side. "The ducks are becoming accustomed to seeing the machine," said Olds, "and it won't be long before even an airplane engine cannot frighten them."

Stole Preacher's Clothes.

Dalton, Ga.—A Chattanooga colored minister recently came here to conduct a revival meeting. He got away with it in fine shape and finally the big baptism was scheduled to take place in Bear creek.

The preacher, after reaching the scene, modestly repaired to the thick bushes and disrobed, donning his baptismal robes and entering the creek. After the baptizing he ventured to the bushes and found while he had been engaged in the Lord's work some one had stolen his clothes and he had to return to Dalton in his wet garments.

The Little Story That's True

This happened during the war, says a Hilltop resident: I was passing, one noon-day, a tent inhabited by a Gypsy family consisting of father, mother and several children. The mother was busily engaged cooking the family meal on the outside of the tent. Returning shortly after, I saw the dinner was ready—a tablecloth was spread upon the grass with the various dishes, etc., on it. The family sat on the ground, with a plate at each one's place; then there were two vacant places with a plate at each one. The children sat with bowed heads while the father and mother were both weeping and praying. Thinking I might be of some service, I asked them if there was anything I could do for them, when the father replied: 'We have two sons in the army, across the seas, and we do not know where they are or whether we will ever see them again.'

"I walked away slowly with my heart deeply touched, thinking, 'How deep and wonderful is genuine parental love.'"

URGES FUR ANIMAL FARMING

United States Department of Agriculture Would Provide for Increasing Demands.

Washington.—"Fur farming" is urged by the Department of Agriculture to provide for the increasing demands in this country.

In one section of Maryland muskrat farming is a well established industry. The meat is served at one hotel as "marsh rabbits." One hundred thousand to 125,000 skins a year are harvested by Marylanders. The department finds that silver foxes, black foxes, blue foxes, skunks and muskrats can be farmed with success.

The United States government through the bureau of fisheries takes sealskins on the Pribiloff islands. Last year the sealskins numbered 27,821, which were worth nearly $4,000,000.

Here are some of the prices that were paid last spring for skins: Weasel, $1½; muskrat, [illegible]; skunks, $12.25; raccoons, $80; lynx, $66; red fox, $71; mink, $75; otter, $105; marten, $201, and fisher, $365.

The new bank building at South Park and Broad is now completed and awaits the furniture to make it ready for business.

This Marriage Not a Failure.

Lawrenceburg, Ind.—Though all the original guests were dead, the bride, Mrs. Nicholas H. Probst, and her bridesmaid, Mrs. Katherine Haag stood together again when the marriage ceremony between Nicholas Probst and his wife was repeated after 50 years. They were remarried in the same old church, and the old-fashioned wedding dinner was duplicated.

PAYS EX-KAISER $25,000,000

Prussia's Contributions to William Since He Fled From Germany Are Disclosed.

London.—More than 62,000,000 Dutch florins (about $25,000,000 at the normal rate of exchange) have been paid to former Emperor William of Germany as king of Prussia by the Prussian government since he fled to Holland, according to an official statement made to the legal committee of the Prussian assembly, says a dispatch from Berlin.

The former emperor also received money to pay for the building of his house at Doorn, while various sums were paid by Count Bentinck, owner of Bentinck castle, where the one-time monarch first made his residence in Holland.

New Play Grounds

An ordinance was passed in the City Council, introduced by Councilman M. W. Westlake, authorizing the purchase of the balance of that tract of land in Hill Crest addition lying in the hollow west of Eureka Ave., to near Ogden avenue, taking in the land where the Chautauqua was held last summer. This plot, with the additional strip in that locality which was donated to the City by Heed & Holten, will be used for park and playground purposes. It is hoped through the Recreation Department to have it developed into an ideal place for Hilltop children to use as a playground. Also that the run passing through there may be utilized by the making of a bathing pool for the kids. It would be a fine place, not deep enough to be dangerous, having a rock bottom, also containing running water. The Hilltop is fortunate in the possession of such a place like this, and one has but to take a look at it to see its possibilities for an excellent recreation center as the Hilltop grows in population.

Councilman Westlake also introduced another ordinance in Council for the purchase of the properties on the east bank of the Scioto river from Broad street to Town street, as far east as Scioto street. This is occupied mostly by a lot of old shacks that would better be torn down than standing. This would give the city the ownership of all the land on the east side of the river from the railroad tracks north to the Hocking Valley Railroad on the south, with the exception of Ide Terrace, which at present is filled up with residences which are needed at this time. The outcome will undoubtedly be a beautifying of this locality at the completion of the bridges and widening of the Scioto.

Helen Rhoads, 363 Whitethorne avenue is just two years from "sweet sixteen." That says she's fourteen—which event was celebrated last Monday evening when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Rhoads sneaked a bunch of youngsters in one Helen when she wasn't looking. Games, music and refreshments were the stunts which made the affair a high spot in the social events of the following: Thelma Blosser, Martha Ranney, Lodema Fox, Beatrice and Marie Braskett, Dorothy Harrison, Esther Owens. Margaret Stith, Alberta Porter, Irma Williams and Marie Looks.

Communication

PRE DESTINATION

Rebecca was the mother of Jacob and Esau,—Twins.

Before they were born, the Lord said to her; "Jacob have I Loved, but Esau have I hated."

Neither had done any wrong; neither had then known good nor evil. This decree left no acceptance or rejection to either of these Two.

Jacob was the beneficiary of acceptance—Esau of rejection. Neither good works nor any other thing could help Esau, for it is written "I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy."

It was a part of the plan of predestination and fore-knowledge; for again it is written—"For whom he foreknew he did also predestinate."—"Whom he did predestinate, them he also called."

He knew the end from the beginning. He also declares the same; for we find in Holy Writ this language, "I am God, there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, my counsel shall stand and I will do all my pleasure."

God is characterized as enduring, unchanging and possesed of all knowledge of things past, present and to come, for it is writen that not a sparrow falls without his notice, and hairs of our heads are numbered. A God so endowed with power and all knowledge will not be surprised by finding some Soul in heaven that he had not expected there.

If a soul is heir to life eternal, God has known it from the beginning of time. How then can this Soul be lost?

If, through all the years, God knew that Jacob was to be glorified in, and after death, is there possibility of altering or changing this known fact?

If Jacob could be lost and God's knowledge and information fail, well might the devil say: "I have conquered heaven,—I have broken the eternal covenant ordered in all things and sure,—see here is a soul,—tis mine,—twas thine,—for thou hast said thou knowest all things and doeth all things according to your good pleasure."

Rather we shall accept, as true, that God does know the end from the beginning, and that he does command and it does stand fast; that he does know when a soul will be born into the world, and when the body will die, and where the soul will go at death.

This, we really all believe. Then if he knew a child will be born, and that it will live to be Seventy years of age and then die, and that its soul will go to the Glory World, will some one explain how any of these things can be changed?

With this acceptance of truth, we can understand that which is written "Hath not the potter power over the clay of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor and another unto dishonor."

It is easy to reconcile this utterance with the words of the Master, "My sheep hear my voice and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."

"My sheep," The people whom he foreknew, saved by grace—The Jacobs of the Earth. DAVID.

APPOINTMENTS

We cannot but admire our Governor-elect for his prompt action in appointments. It shows that he has none of the vassiliating character about him, that destroys the efficiency of so many public men. They try to please their political friends at the expense of their own record. We have on the Hilltop an applicant for the position of Chaplain of the Ohio State Penitentiary, Rev. John Berry, whom we know is exceptionally well qualified for the position. He has had training that specially fits him for the work. He has had over ten years active practice as a lawyer in criminal law, was a booze fighter until converted, over twelve years ago. He has been about four years in the work of the ministry, during which time he has had 132 conversions, raised the money and built a church. He is now District Chaplain of the Sons of Veterans, embracing five counties in Ohio: Franklin and four others and an honorary member of the old Guard. He has had experience in Evangelistic work in the City Prison Jail and workhouse of Franklin County. He understands how to reach the criminals heart, and lead him into a better life, which few preachers do. He is an ordained Presbyterian minister. Had 23 conversions under one sermon in the chapel of Franklin county jail, voted the straight republican ticket; he is a republican, has been many years. He was not in the preacher combine against the Governor-Elect, but was a strong supporter of the Republican Governor-Elect, believing the stories told against him were political lies. We believe that his appointment would be a public benefit in the reformation of men that have gone wrong and most sincerely hope that our Governor-Elect may see his waf clear to appoint him.

Councilman M. W. Westlake and family motored through different points in West Virginia, spending Thanksgiving Day at one of these. They returned home last week.

An Appeal

Have you been reading the Literary Digest the past few weeks? If so you have read the touching stories about the three and one-half million starving children in Europe because of war's desolation, and the effort that publication is making to raise a fund to give relief to them. As we were reading one of these a few nights ago, we could scarcely keep back the tears, and the thought came to us, "How can we plan and prepare for, and have a happy and satisfying Christmas in our own home this year if we do not do our part in helping these poor unfortunate millions of children," who will not even get so much as a big Christmas dinner, but are holding out their hands, beckoning to us for simply enough to keep body and soul together during the winter. What can be more apepaling to our hearts and charity than the fact of this awful existing condition; and this thought came to us. Wonder if there are not lots of Hilltop people who feel the same way, who can not give largely, but could give something. So make this appeal in these children's behalf for all who can to send to the Record office, between now and Christmas an offering of relief. Much or little will make no difference, and we will at that time forward this to the Literary Digest who will get it to the needed ones as soon as possible. The Record will start the list with $10.00 which amount will keep one child. Let us hear from you dear reader.

SACRED DAY FOR THE BABIES

Never deny the babies their Christmas! It is the shining seal set upon a year of happiness. Let them believe in Santa Claus or St. Nicholas or Kriss Kringle, or whatever name the jolly Dutch saint bears in your religion.—Marion Harland.

A CHRISTMAS WISH

Father—What were you wishing?

Johnny—I'd like to be the janitor's little boy, 'cause his father has to be polite, too.

Cat Traveled Home.

Bangor, Me.—Mrs. Fred Ford of Winterport went visiting at her mother's in the town of Wesley and there was presented with a fine big tomcat, which she brought home. After staying around a few days the cat disappeared and three weeks later turned up smiling at its old home, having traveled more than 100 miles in all weathers over the worst roads in Maine.

ITALIANS EAGER TO RETURN TO U. S.

Men Who Served Under Pershing and Returned to Native Land Disillusioned.

WIVES ALSO DISSATISFIED

Lower Wages and Lack of Modern Dwellings Bring Longing for America—Food in Country Districts Higher Than in Cities.

Rome.—All over Italy, in villages and towns, there are hundreds of Italo-American ex-soldiers longing to get back to the United States, and only waiting until the vendemmia, or harvesting of the grapes, is over. How they came to return to their native land when they loved America, American cities and American ways is through one of the mistaken ideas of many ex-soldiers, who imagined that once war was over they would be happy in Italy, although they had fought in France under General Pershing and had lived and made good money in America for many years.

When the armistice came and these Italo-Americans were given a chance of being demobilized in France they jumped at it, because at that time there was a rumor that fabulous prices were being paid to workmen in Italy. This fairy tale was true at that time, as the government had still in operation her ammunition factories, and, of course, wages were kept at a high level, but, as the wages of farmhands and workmen of all sorts had also increased, the cost of living had increased more than three times in price compared to pre-war schedules.

Suffer a Great Disillusion.

Impulsively they sent for their families, who very often had to sell all they owned in order to pay for the steamship ticket to Italy. Then many families settled down to live with the parents of the husband or wife, and after a short while suffered a great disillusion, as things were not what they had imagined. While they had been away from their native land they had thought of it as picturesque and beautiful, with an ideal climate and congenial conditions. They forgot the discomforts of the old home with its lack of running water and modern improvements which these Italo-Americans had grown accustomed to in the new land of freedom.

The husband could put up with it, but the wives could not, as in many villages—in fact, in nearly all those of Central Italy—the water must be carried from the village fountain. Whenever any washing was to be done the clothes in most cases had to be carried often a mile to the river, as the supply of water in the villages is never sufficient for washing clothes. Naturally to the many who had not only become accustomed to running water in their houses, but also to modern washing machines, this way of washing did not appeal and they would not walk down to the washing place, but paid a woman to do their work. This meant a great deal of money every week, as Americans are considered to be millionaires or very near it, so the prices asked were always very high.

Food Costs More Than in Cities.

Then the cost of food now is sometimes higher than in the cities, as the produce in villages is generally what is left over from that exported to town. Besides, plumbing in Italy, except in the big cities, is absolutely unknown; only primitive ways of bathing are indulged in and a bathroom in a village house is unknown. This is due to the great lack of water in villages all over Italy, although in reality in out-of-the-way woods there are wonderful springs, but the water runs to waste, as these sources are far removed from the villages and towns.

In one small village, in the province of Rome, called San Felice, nearly all the male adult population over twenty-five years old had been to America, made a little money, returned to their families and bought a little vineyard, which they worked until a longing to return to the new country forced them to take ship and leave for New York. Some of these men have been four or five times in America, speak English and are longing to go again.

Many of them returned to Italy to serve their time during the war, and only now wait an opportunity to get away. Emigration now is not so easy, as one must have a job ready to step into as soon as the ship reaches New York. Many of them, who have their families growing up and whose wives have never been to America, are planning to leave their families and go over for a year or so. Those whose wives have been to America and have lived there are returning with their families, as the wives refused to remain behind, as they find Italy too dirty.

COLD-BLOODED WITH GIFTS

Program for Those Persons Who Think Santa Claus Deception Should Come to End.

We have tried to work out a little Christmas program for those who object to Santa Claus. We respect the opinions of all who think the deception should be stopped and feel that we ought to help them to arrange a disillusionized and thoroughly harmless Christmas—what you might call a germless and renovated and disinfected and veracious joy season—which the children will take hold of with enthusiasm without in after days wishing to upbraid their parents and hiss at them, "You lied to us!"

We suggest, therefore, that the children be called together on Christmas morning by the governor and addressed as follows:

"Kids: We shall now enjoy our gift giving. I tore off a few scads from my roll the other day and handed them to your mother, and she dived headlong into the bargain counter flood and for two whole days appeared not again, and when she did crawl out, battered, jammed, ragged, torn, bruised and old, she clutched to her bosom these few gimcracks, fol-de-rols and highly unserviceable articles. We have placed them upon these chairs so as to divest the business of any stage effects that might heighten the pleasure in any way or give a false impression. You are to understand that I had to give up for these things, and I wish to forget about it before I feel real good inside again, and with these few remarks we will now fall to, and you want to be quick about it, for I want to read my paper in peace."—Judge.

WONDERFUL SPIRIT OF GIVING

Another year is nearing its close and with its ending comes that glad time, the Christmas holiday season. The absent ones are home again or if they cannot come there are the letters and tokens to be sent and received. The remembrance need not be expensive as to money value, to be very much appreciated.

Christmas is pre-eminently the children's day. Do not insist that Santa will not remember them if they are not good. For we all know that Santa Claus will surely come and the children know it, too. He did not forget us in our own childhood whether we were very, very good or not. Let us teach the children about the wonderful spirit of loving and giving that brings a happy Christmas time.

FIRST CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCE

It is said that Christmas was first observed in the year 98 and that it was not until the year 137 that it was made a solemn feast. Pope Telesphorus decreed that [illegible] be celebrated by all Christians in that year. On one early Christmas day the Roman Emperor Diocletian, hearing that the Christians assembled in their church were engaged in celebrating the birth of Christ, commanded that the doors of the church be closed and the building set on fire. This was done and six hundred persons lost their lives in the burning church.

A BRAVE SOLDIER

Jack-in-the-Box: Ha, ha, you're a brave soldier, to be scared of me.

A THRIFTY SAINT

"Don't you think holidays tempt us to extravagance?"

"Not at all. If you will study the pictures of Santa Claus, you will observe he has on the same old clothes he has worn for years."

The Heart of Christmas

"I fear we are going to have a very poor Christmas at our house," said Jane to Florence as they were walking home from school.

"You know father's been out of work on account of the strike, and mother's long illness will make it next to impossible to buy gifts for the children. And we may not even have a Christmas tree!" And at the thought of a Christmas without a tree, her voice which had been tremulous, broke into a half stifled sob.

Florence looked very thoughtful, then said in comforting tones, "But your father's at work again isn't he?"

"Yes."

"And your mother's health is much better."

"Yes, we expect her downstairs for Christmas day."

"Well, then I think, Jane, that you should have great cause for rejoicing at your house—Christmas tree, or no Christmas tree."

"I had not thought of that Florence, but you are right."

"Sometimes, I think we lose the real spirit of Christmas," continued Jane, "by thinking that Christmas comes from what we get or give instead of realizing that it is right in our hearts."

By this time the friends had come to the parting of the way, and with a friendly nod and "Goodbye," went to their homes to vision anew the possibilities of Christmas.

You Can Have Eggs All Winter-If

you give your flock a little help. It isn't a matter of chance—you'll get eggs if you work for them. And if your birds lay heavily this winter you'll take in a lot of egg-money because prices will be high. The extra eggs you can get will pay for many things you want and need.

Give your layers a chance to do their best work. Feed a good ration and include the original poultry tonic and conditioner. It makes hens lay because it puts and keeps them in condition to lay—healthy and vigorous. Its natural tonics, appetizers, digestives and laxatives strengthen and regulate the internal organs—make hens healthy—then they lay. Nearly fifty years of successful use by the world's leading poultrymen proves it. And our money-back guarantee is your protection. Sold in packages, pails and sacks up to 100 lbs.

Pratts Poultry Regulator

Pratts Roup Remedy

is another big aid to winter layers. Put it in the drinking water occasionally, especially during spells of bad weather. It heads off dangerous colds and deadly roup, and aids in overcoming these troubles if they appear.

OPPOSED TO CHRISTMAS PIE

The Puritans were not alone in their opposition to mince or Christmas pie. The Quakers also fought against it, and at length even many good people of the Church of England began to think that clergymen should abstain from it, against which prejudice Bickerstaffe thus remonstrates: "The Christmas pie is, in its own nature, a kind of consecrated cake or badge of distinction, and yet it is often forbidden the druids of the family. Strange that a sirloin of beef, whether boiled or roasted, when entire is exposed to the utmost depredations and invasions, but if minced into small pieces and tossed up with plums and sugar it changes the property, and forsooth is meat for his master."

FUN IN PLAYING OLD CHRIS

Amusement for Both Young and Old in Impersonating Blustery, Present-Laden Santa.

THERE is great fun in impersonation and none more than in taking the part of that prince of good fellows, jolly old Kris. Several little brothers, sisters or cousins should make up the audience to be amused, all of them young enough to believe implicitly in the whole story of the journey in reindeer sleigh from the North Pole toy country to one's own particular chimney. Parents and other big folks must, of course, be in the scheme and coached to play an active part.

You will be missed from the company, to be sure, and dad and mother should search the house and look up and down the street and make all sorts of excuses for your absence. And if your voice cannot be continually and very successfully disguised you had better not talk, but convey your meanings by nods and motions, not forgetting to shake hands all round repeatedly and to laugh, silently but heartily, with much shaking of sides and bending over.

Santa may play at being late, and after he has filled the stockings he is caught by dad, who loudly notifies the household and insists that the old fellow pay a visit and distribute the gifts. Questions are asked about the sleigh, which is supposed to have gone on without its driver, so that the youngsters won't want to run out and look for it.

At the end of the ceremonies, which should not last over half an hour, a sudden disappearance may be arranged by calling the children to the window with the supposed discovery of the returning sleigh, and Santa may slip out of the room door, shed and hide his duds and get out of the house by the back way, returning presently, with much noise, by the front way, as though having been gone for a long time and, of course, much disappointed to have missed seeing Santa.

As for the costume, that is a matter of varied opportunity, except that the white whiskers and wig, the funny little old tassled cap and the fat stomach are essential.

If you are looking for a home, large or small, I have a list of bricks and frames on the Hilltop, I think cheaper than you can build them next spring. See Fippin, 2346 W. Broad St. Phones, Hilltop 1620, Cit. 17982.

SANTA CLAUS

Beyond the ocean many a mile,
And many a year ago,
There lived a wonderful queer old man
In a wonderful house of snow;
And every little boy and girl,
As Christmas times arrive,
No doubt will be very glad to hear
The old man is still alive.

In his house upon the top of a hill,
And almost out of sight,
He keeps a great many elves at work,
All working with all their might
To make a million of pretty things,
Cakes, sugar-plums and toys,
To fill the stockings, hung up, you know,
By the little girls and boys.
—Sunshine Bulletin.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

Come back to Bethlehem,
The year is on the wane;
A truce to strife that wearies life,
A truce to grief and pain.
Oh, heart, return to Bethlehem
And hear its song again!

If siren voices luring thee
Have turned thy thoughts aside,
If thou hast quaffed the bitter draft
Of envy or of pride,
If thou in agony of shame
Hast thy dear Lord denied,

Come back today to Bethlehem!
Though thou hast wandered far,
No rest shall fill thy yearning breast
Until thou see the Star.
Oh, heart, return to Bethlehem,
Where yet the angels are!

Helping Mother

The boy or girl who was willing to "help mother" was called a "good boy" or a good girl".

Today "helping mother" may mean providing her with the new home she has gone without these years while farm profits went back into farm improvements.

It may mean the new porch, or an extra window to light up the kitchen, or an additional room, or any of a dozen things which would make her work lighter or her days and nights more pleasant.

Whatever it is, we shall be glad to be of assistance in "helping mother."

Obituary

Martin Bernard, youngest son of James and Jessie Hill, 166 N. Harris Ave., was born June 6, 1912 and went home to be with Jesus Nov. 24, 1920, aged 8 years, 5 months and 12 days. During his short stay here he was sick most of the time. Skilled physicians and kind hands and hearts did all they could to minister to his necessities and baffle the disease, but all to no avail. He slipped away so quickly into the realms of joy and bliss where no doubt he is playing on the streets of the New Jerusalem with the little boys and girls. He was always very playful and cheerful winning for himself many little friends. He had won his way into the hearts of many people. Just the day before he went away from us Bro. Seesholtz and I baptized him, dedicating him anew to Jesus. He loved Jesus. He would talk so much about Him. In his childish way he liked to preach about Jesus, and now he has gone to be with Him. It was always his delight to take some part in the children's exercises of the church, either to speak or sing. One of his favorite songs was "Oh, that will be glory for me." Another was "My Saviour comes and walks with me."

He leaves to mourn a father and mother, three brothers, and uncles and aunts who were very dear to him and many other friends' and relatives.

Heaven will be more real to these parents and friends, because little Bernard is there. He cannot come to you, but you can go to him. Good-bye little Bernard.

A NEW LITTLE BOY IN HEAVEN

"Oh, what do you think the angels say?"
Said the children up in heaven.
"There's a dear little boy coming home today.
He's almost ready to fly away
From the earth we used to live in;
Let's go and open the gates of joy—
Open them wide for the new little boy."
Said the children up in heaven.
"God wanted him here where his little ones meet,"
Said the children up in heaven.
"He shall play with us on the golden street.
He has grown too fair, he has grown too sweet
For the earth we used to live in,
He needs the sunshine, this dear little boy,
That glids this side of the gates of joy,"
Said the children up in heaven.
"So the King called down from the angel's dome,"
Said the children up in heaven.
"'My little darling arise and come
To the place prepared in the Father's home—
To the home my children live in.'
Let's go and watch at the gates of joy,
Ready to welcome the new little boy,"
Said the children up in heaven.
"Far down on the earth do you hear them weep?"
Said the children up in heaven.
"For the dear little boy has gone to sleep.
The shadows fall, and the night clouds sweep
O'er the earth we used to live in:
But we'll go and open the gates of joy.
Oh, why do they weep for their dear little boy?"
Said the children up in heaven.
"Fly with him quickly ,angels dear,'
Said the children up in heaven.
"See he is coming! Look there! Look there!
At the jasper light on his sunny hair.
Where the veiling clouds are riven
Ah, hush, hush, hush, All the swift wings furl,
For the King himself at the gates of joy
Is taking his hand—dear tired little boy—
And leading him into heaven."

A SAFE AND SANE CHRISTMAS

Societies are being organized whose members are pledged against giving Christmas gifts outside their immediate families. Christmas giving has been overdone, and if the intemperance can be checked in that way, well and good. But let us hope the "reformers" will not try by legal enactment to impose their views upon others. There are many things in this life to be remedied, and most of them should be remedied without resort to legislation.—Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger.

WHY JIMMY PRAYED SO LOUD

Dick and Jimmy were visiting their grandmother. One night when they were saying their prayers Jimmy voiced his petitions for Christmas presents in a tone that could be heard a mile.

"Why do you pray for your Christmas presents so loud?" interrupted Dick. "The Lord ain't deaf."

"No," whispered Jimmy, "but grandma is."

The Little Story That's True

An incident which recently occurred on the "Hilltop" is fittingly illustrative of the scriptural text, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them."

A little 3-year-old girl and 1½-year-old boy were playing with their individual toys in common. A doll, the possession of the 3-year-old, was receiving some rough handling at the hands of the little boy who, boy-like, regarded all toys worthless unless they could be violently thrown about. The 3-year-old remonstrated with her strongest vocabulary and being unsuccessful in making the boy understand her displeasure, and no longer able to endure his treatment of her treasure, picked up the dolly, carried it across the street and deposited it on a neighbor's doorstep. Retracing her steps she resumed her play with an expression on her little face which seemed to say, "Now, the offending article is removed we will proceed to play in peace."

Is not this an appropriate lesson to adults, who, if, when differences arise, would only put harsh words, malice and hatred aside, might resume their associations and friendships, there by making the passing day pleasant and congenial for all concerned?

Make Every Day a Christmas

Too prone are we all to allow our Christmas sentiments to evaporate with the day, forgetting that there are other days in the year for a sympathetic hand clasp and an encouraging word. If Christmas is better than other days in the year, it is because the feeling of brotherhood and fellowship belongs to it.

Why not have every other day in the year filled with brotherliness and fellowship? Why not soften the asperities of life, speak the kindly word, and extend the helping hand for the other 364 days? In a word why not make every day a Christmas? Carry the Christmas spirit with us throughout the year and say, with Tiny Tim, at all times and seasons, "God bless us, everyone."

Let us keep Christmas in this spirit, then, forgetting not to whom thanks for the many blessings and privileges of this great country of ours are due, looking forward to the age that is coming:

"When the common sense of most shall hold the fretful realm in awe
And the kindly earth shall slumber lapt in universal law."

SIMPLE HOME-MADE GIFTS

Handkerchiefs, neatly hemmed and an embroidered initial adorning one corner, may be made from a stray remnant of linen or lawn.

Canvas or denim gloves for the woman who hangs out wet clothes are a boon—and so easily made on the sewing machine.

Night slippers are a joy to children who must walk upstairs after preparing for bed. Any material of downy texture is adaptable, and they are made as simply as a stocking foot.

Every country woman should have a knit, woolen corset-cover. A worn sweater, by removing the collar and lower part of the sleeves (parts, by the way, most likely to show wear) serves beautifully for this purpose.

Knowing the size of any little girl's doll, it is a simple matter to make a dress, a bonnet or cloak for it.

Mittens are neatly and quickly made on the sewing machine. Use any flexible woolen material.

A child's fur set can be made from an out-of-date fur piece, or if you have only a trifle of fur use it simply for the rim of the muff and the scarf-end.

To an invalid friend is sent your cheeriest house-plant to gladden the Christmas day.

The New Bank

A brand new bank, in a new building, with new modern furniture and equipment, a courteous gentleman for a manager with a polite lady assistant—that's a broad new Hilltop possession we're all "puffed up with pride" over. And why not?—We needed it, and we're going to help it be a success, too.

The Hilltop Branch of the Citizens Trust & Savings Co. opened its doors for business Saturday, December 11th, 1920. From the crowd that thronged the banking room all day one would think the natives of this neck-of-the-woods had been "saving up" for a long time for this event, as 808 accounts were opened that day, of which fifty-five were checking accounts and 253 were savings accounts.

There seemed to be a scramble for "firsts" to do business among some of our enterprising business men. Whether he was a faster runner, or staid up all night to do so, L. M. Seiller "beat W. L. Millikin to it" for No. 1 savings account book, but J. H. Kramer, whose money burned his pocket all night, got up before breakfast that morning and deposited the first savings. C. J. Kohn got it in his "noodle" that he'd get the first checking account, and did make the first application, but J. M. LaDow, being more used to covering real estate, got there on the first deposit on a checking account.

Councilman W. L. Millikin started the business on safety deposit boxes, he having Box No. 1.

At this writing there have been 78 checking accounts and 294 savings accounts opened, the bank has given out 350 pocket savings banks and 292 Liberty Bell home savings banks. Also 39 Christmas savings accounts for next year have been taken out to date.

The Manager, Mr. J. W. Worrel, and Miss Iris Clover, stenographer and assistant, invite all Hilltop people to come and get acquainted.

Communication

PRE DESTINATION

According to my understanding of "David's" clear and concise communication in the last issue of the Hilltop Record, he gives predestination three elements:

thing before it happens.

1. Foreknowledge—God knows everything before it happens.

2. Predetermination—On the basis of this foreknowledge, God predetermines what the final state of each human being shall be. (Rom. 8:29, 30.)

3. Domination—From day to day, God so dominates each human being (as the potter does the clay) as that those whom He has predestinated for salvation shall be saved, and the others shall be lost.

Accepting "David's" statement of the case that "what's going to be will be, and we needn't think it won't," we see the following conclusions:

1. There is no such a thing as Freedom of the Will. That is, practically speaking, every man is elected or rejected before birth and no will of his can change the result.

2. God is a party to every one of the deceptions of Jacob and the sins of His chosen ones.

3. God is responsible for every saved soul and consequently for every lost soul. Everything must come out according to His will. He cannot be surprised.

4. There is no need for a devil or his equivalent. God is both God and Devil. This is a hard saying but true under the doctrine of predestination. The devil's business is to lure souls to ruin. If God has predestined that the Jacobs shall be "beneficiaries of acceptance," that "they shall never perish," and that the Esaus shall be "beneficiaries of rejection,"—where then is there any place for a devil?

There is no use denying that there are passages which distinctly teach predestination as "David" has clearly demonstrated, also there are passages which distinctly teach the opposite doctrine. This is true about other teachings in the Bible, as for example, "an eye for an eye," etc. All scriptures are not on the same level. Some are higher than others. Revelation of truth in the Bible is as an ascending mountain range. A low beginning, then a peak, now a lower level, then a higher peak, and finally the overtowering peaks. We are guided by the higher peaks in reaching the highest altitude. The higher passages are those which teach that every one may choose for himself and that whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely.

We often make a distinction between foreknowing the end and the act of influencing toward that end. When God is the subject foreknowing, this distinction vanishes because He also is the Author of the influences. Here we are face to face with the vital question in Predestination. God is an Absolute Sovereign in the realm of the natural world. Is He also an Absolute Sovereign in His dealings with men? In the belief that God is an Absolute Sovereign in His dealings with men, many have been led to a belief in Predestination just as the writer of Romans seemingly was (from whom "David" quotes so often) as well as others in the Bible. God has limited Himself in His dealings with men. This is the meaning of the passage, "Let us create man in our own image." And, by implication, in the passage, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" God limited Himself in giving to man Freedom of Will. This doctrine of limitation is not a strange one. Did not the Divine Saviour limit Himself when He voluntarily took upon Himself the form of man?

The predestinarian seems to have the conception that God sat down in the fastness of His Heavens before time was and planned all things. (This plan is often referred to as His Will.) That is, He predetermined all things. Then He proceeded to create according to His plans. After finishing, He withdrew and let all things work out according to an absolute regime for both human beings and the natural world. Among His plans were those for the creation of human beings. He made a list of them; the date, place of birth and nationality, the number of hairs upon their heads, and the number of years they would live. Also, He went over the list checking those He would have mercy upon and would receive into His Glory World. Laws and forces were then set in motion that would bring about these results (for God must experience no surprise) and then He rested from his labors.

Over against this is the conception of the man who believes in the Freedom of the Will. God not only did create but is creating. He never withdrew from the world—He is in it today, Now. He created man in His own image. He deals with him not as an Absolute Sovereign would but as a Father. He is Father to all men. He is concerned about every being. He is seeking, teaching, admonishing, helping, comforting day by day. It is His will that all men everywhere shall be saved. This conception has the greatest upward pulling power upon human beings. This is the highest doctrine about God in the Old Testament. Choose now whom ye will serve. What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justice, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God. This is the revelation about God by His Son, Who knew Him best. Come unto me all ye that labor, etc. It is the highest teaching of the New Testament about God. Work out your own salvation with the help of God. By faith are ye saved. He that endureth to the end shall be saved. And the last chapter of Revelations contains these wonderful words, "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And he that heareth let him say, Come. He that will, let him take of the water of life freely."

Paul.

As an answer to our last week's appeal for Christmas contributions to the starving children in Europe we have received the following:

$10.00, Hilltop Record, Miss Elizabeth Blackburn, $10.00.

$1.00, Mrs. Walter, Mrs. H. W. Kirker.

$4.00—Mrs. W. E. Spencer.
50 cents, Chas. Shover.
25 cents, J. H. Kramer.

If you have not made a contribution through any other channel for this worthy purpose send in your contribution this week to the Record office. Some of our churches and Sunday schools, also school, are intending to take offerings for this purpose. If you prefer to give it that way, it is just as good. Only let's each one give something, somewhere, that this awful condition may be helped by Hilltop people.

New Boys Organization

At the call of Mrs. M. M. aMrshall, 35 Hilltop boys gathered at the Glenwood M. E. Church last Sunday evening and signed pledges to abstain from the use of cigarettes and to lead a clean life from henceforth. Another meeting will be held there next Sunday when there will be another opportunity to do so by Hilltop boys. It is intended to form a branch of the "A. C. L." International Society, and we hope it will be the means of bringing every boy on the Hilltop into its ranks.

We would like to urge the parents of boys to help in this matter. We know of many instances where mothers of boys who are smoking cigarettes have expressed themselves as being willing to do anything they can to relieve their boys from this habit. Here is your chance to cooperate and not only help your own boy, but others also.

It is intended to find a way whereby certain places that are illegally selling boys cigarettes can be found out and dealt with; also older boys or men who are buying them for boys or giving cigarettes to them.

Franklin County Intermediate Christian Endeavor rally was held last Sunday, Dec. 12, 1920, at Wilson Ave. Church of Christ. A very interesting program was given. Two Intermediates spoke, one about the Pocket Testament League, the other about the Quiet Hour. The Hilltop Church of Christ sang for us.

Mr. Whitney, President of Franklin Co. Christian Endeavor Union, gave us some very good points about Christian living. Mr. Love, a missionary from Africa, emphasized the necessity of the love of Jesus to reform Africa, not civilization. The meeting was quite good, and most every one went home feeling greatly repaid.

Church Doings

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

The Hilltop English Lutheran Church, W. Broad and Terrace Streets, Rev. J. M. Weurich, Pastor.

The time for dedication of the new church is at hand. We are glad to invite all the people of the Hilltop to the following feast of good things:

Sunday services:

10:30 A. M., sermon by Rev. A. J. Holl, pastor of the First English Lutheran Church (the Mother Church), Columbus, Ohio.

2:30 P. M., sermon by Rev. J. Sitler, Lancaster Ohio, Conference President.

7:00 P. M., sermon by Rev. H. L. Yarger, D.D., Chicago, Ill., General Mission Superintendent. The vested choir of the First English Lutheran Church will sing at all of these services.

Monday, 7:30 P. M., Community services. This will be an entirely informal service. We want you to get acquainted and to hear a number of very brief addresses by a number of the pastors. Prof. Gill, the noted Hilltop teacher of various musical instruments, will furnish the music for the evening.

Tuesday, 7:30 P. M. Short sermons by Rev. Clyde E. Xander, pastor of Indianola Lutheran Church, Columbus, O., and Rev. W. E. Guchholts, Roseville, Ohio.

Wednesday, 7:30 P. M. Short sermons by Rev. E. L. T. Engle, pastor of Monroe Ave. Lutheran Church, Columbus, O., and Rev. Harry R. Merle, Stoutsville, O.

While we cannot accommodate you all at one and the same time, we have arranged a series of services and hope to see you at at least one of them.

The Friendly Church on the corner.

The Luther League of St. John's meets with Ernest and Clarence Schuman, 28 S. Ogden Ave., on Friday evening, December 17th.

There will be an important congregational meeting at St. John's after Sunday morning service.

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Public Worship at 10:30. The subject of the sermon is, "The Appeal of the Christmas Season." The Quartet will sing the special Christmas music.

The League services will be held at the usual times. Miss Lowie Mitchell will be the leader at the Epworth League service. The subject will be the Epworth Herald. All the young people should attend.

Evening preaching service at 7:00. The subject is, "The Suffering Saviour." The Christmas music will be a special feature.

Teacher Training and Bible study classes Friday evening at 7:30.

There will be a meeting of the A. C. L. League at the church at 2:00 next Sunday. This is the league standing for a clean life and anti-cigarettes. All the boys and young men are invited.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30, Morning Worship. A special Christmas sermon by the pastor on "Three Wise Men." The service will be very appropriate for the season.

7:30, Evening Service. Special Christmas music by the choir. You will enjoy this music under Mr. W. E. Knox. The pastor speaks on "The Man Who Disappoints His Future."

6:30 P. M. B. Y. P. U. The pastor's group leads. The subject is, "The Spirit of Generosity." What do you know about it? What's the difference between shopping and giving? We'll sing the Christmas hymns and tell you how they came to be written.

Children's Christmas program of Hill Crest Sunday School will be Wednesday, December 22, at 7:30. A splendid program is being prepared and you will not want to miss it. There will be music, readings and exercises by the children, also the White Cross service will be given. A Christmas tree and another surprise. Come to see.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. G. R. Robbins will preach on Sunday from the following topics: A. M., "Christmas Joys Indescribable on Earth and Immortal in Heaven." P. M., "Give God a Chance and Behold the Amazing Results in Christians and Churches." The services of last Sunday will long be remembered by the increased congregation. The deep, spiritual messages from our pastor will bring results, obtainable in no other way.

Chicken Foils Speeder.

Bloomsburgh, Pa.—Passing a farmhouse at Forks, near here, John Magill of Danville struck a chicken with his automobile and put on full speed to escape, thinking he had killed the bird. When he stopped his machine at Danville, 16 miles away, the chicken, with its feathers slightly ruffled, jumped from the running board of the machine, where it had apparently been from the time he thought he killed it.

Now that we have apparently hit the top, and the bottom is in the distance, what do you think of a small place in the country to say three, five, ten, fourteen, twenty-five, thirty or more acres, where there are more jobs than men? The money you have to pass over the counter if you are on your job will be much smaller than it is in the city, and almost as good schools and luxuries as in the city. Have a talk with Fippin, 2346 W. Broad St. Phone, Hilltop 1620; Cit. 17982.

CARVE HISTORY ON TOTEM POLE

Indian Chief Engraving Tribal Records on Skyscraping Cedar Pole.

HAS ENTHUSIASM OF ARTIST

When Work Is Completed the Pole Will Stand in Front of the School for the Tribe to Keep Fresh Legendary History.

Portland, Ore.—In these days of profiteering and wild scrambles for the almighty dollar, it is a consolation to find one man in the world who is not money mad and who is working and has been working assiduously for the last five years all for an ideal and with no ulterior thought of pecuniary gain spurring him on. The remarkable part of it is that this artist, for he is an artist of the highest type, is a full-blooded American Indian chief. He answers to the name of William Shelton, and when not busy perfecting his life work, a monstrous and skyscraping totem pole upon which is inscribed the history of the Snohomish tribe, he supervises the running of the Indian reservation school at Tulalip.

Although Shelton is well educated and thoroughly familiar with the world of business, he prefers to devote his time and attention toward the fulfillment of an ideal. Generations ago Indians lost the art of totem carving, and he is the only known totem pole maker in the world today.

Five Years Consumed.

To date Shelton has worked during his spare time more than five years on the gigantic post. This work has been accomplished aside from his duties as head of the reservation school. Early every morning before he begins the duties of directing the functions of the schools he is at work on his historic pole. At the close of the school session each day finds him again hard at work with chisel and mallet. It can be seen therefore that all of the many hours he has devoted to his pet project might be termed overtime.

When finished the pole will stand more than 100 feet in height and will measure nearly seven feet in diameter. It has been selected from the greatest of the big cedars which grow on the reservation at Tulalip. When the work is completed the pole will stand in front of the school for the tribe, where for generations to come it will keep fresh their hereditary history.

"One of the principal reasons for my devoting so many years to the making of this gigantic history pole," said Shelton recently, "is to shatter the persistent belief among so many Americans as well as others that the totem pole originally had for its purpose mainly the idea of worship. I'll make a wager that two out of every three white persons who view totem poles in parks, or who go to visit the gigantic pole at Seattle, Wash., have the idea that the pole at one time was worshiped by some Indian tribe.

Pole Only Historical.

"Such is not the case. The totem pole is nothing more nor less than a history done in wood carving. Those persons who are writing or who will write the history of the recent great conflict in Europe are, in the eyes of many Indians, in reality totem pole makers. In short, a totem pole maker is a historian. The historians of the war will for years keep alive for future generations the story of the rise and fall of the much-despised kaiser, of the rape of Belgium, of the coming of the Yanks, of the battles of the Marne, the Somme, the Argonne and of the armistice and the peace table. For centuries to come people will read about those great twentieth century events from the printed pages of many books. Totem poles are in reality Indian books, and the marks and curious carvings upon them take the place of the printed words in the white man's books and are quite as readily translated by the Indians of the tribe to which the pole belongs."

Shelton is filled with enthusiasm about his work, the enthusiasm of a real artist. His face lights up at the opportunity to talk of his work, and his black eyes flash. He is about forty-five years old and in full Indian regalia he looks as if he might have just stepped from the printed pages of wild western fiction. In his store clothes, however, although he would not be mistaken for other than a redskin, he resembles an acute business man of today. During the war, although he was too old for active service, he showed an amount of patriotism that won him commendation from the government. At that particular time he proved himself to be a "really" American. Appearing in full Indian regalia he was a great aid at swelling subscriptions to all of the Liberty loans, and also played a conspicuous part in other war work.

Best Christmas for a Boy

It was exactly a back yard they wanted, but what they wanted was some place they could play ball and no landlord of a king could come along and tell them to stop because they might break some of the royal windows. You know old King George did come along and try to make them stop—and you know what happened to the royal windows. Zam!

And then there is this matter of snow. You know some people don't think it is much of a Christmas without snow. Now, I know quite a lot about snow because I've been acquainted with a lot of it. I have tramped through it up in the Hudson Bay country, and I've wallowed around in it in the summertime on top of the Rocky mountains. And I want to tell you that there is a great difference in snow—that is, there is a great difference between country snow and city snow.

We may not have snow this Christmas, but we'll just suppose we do. Isn't a good, old lively snowstorm great? Perhaps it is one of these lazy snowstorms, with the big, white flakes just floating down like feathers and slowly turning the roads and roofs to white, like a coat of good white paint. Maybe there will be enough of it to make good coasting on the hills and good sleighing on the roads.

And, by the way, do you know there are boys in the big cities who have never seen a sleigh? Because a sleigh is getting to be a scarce article in the cities. You see, as soon as a little snow comes the street-cleaning department gets busy and sweeps it up, before it gets a chance to melt into slush.

In the country the winter wheat needs it, and the ground takes care of it. But in the city it just means slop and slush. So they sweep it up and carry it away and uncover the ugly pavement as soon as they can.

But they let you keep your snow in the country. When a warm wind comes along it will pack fine, and you can have your snow-men, and your snow forts, and your snowball battles. (Only please don't use your artillery on older folks, or girls, or me.)

Or perhaps this snowstorm is one of the blizzardy kind, with the wind sipping around the house and piling the snow up in the corners—why that kind of snow doesn't seem to come down at all, but just goes slanting by until it runs up against something it can't pass.

I remember being on a night train one time; and when we woke up in the morning, and the train was running over the smooth prairies, a little girl from a big city in western Pennsylvania (I won't tell you what city it was but maybe you can guess) exclaimed as she looked out of the window:

"Look, Mamma! The snow out here is white!"

I don't need to say much about the Christmas dinner. But if you have your Christmas dinner in the country, the turkey perhaps is one your folks raised, or that was raised in the neighborhood—anyhow, it is pretty likely to be a native, and not a resident of a cold storage plant somewhere. Or maybe you'll have a goose or a brace of chickens. Anyway, you'll know their pedigree, and that they're fresh and good.

And it will be the same way all down the line—vegetables, and pies, and everything. And cooked!—cooked to a turn—just long enough—just short enough—just right.

And you will more than likely have one thing that they won't have at the Christmas dinner in the city, because you know the cost of living just now is mighty high, in town especially, for both rich and poor. So you will have one thing that the city boy probably will not have—Enough!

So I could go on and show you a dozen other ways in which a Christmas in the country puts it all over a Christmas in the city, but I am going to mention just one thing more: the Christmas tree.

Of course they have Christmas trees in the city. In New York trainloads of them come down every season from the Adirondacks, and in Chicago boatloads come from Michigan's upper peninsula. You can buy them for fifty cents or a dollar, and they make very good Christmas trees indeed.

I don't know what you think about this either—but I have always thought that things I did myself and for myself were just twice the fun of things I bought myself or hired myself. And I think that especially about a Christmas tree. If you are lucky enough to be able to go out and pick your own tree, and chop it down, and bring it in—well, that's what I call a real Christmas tree!

Because that is really and truly your Christmas tree. You selected it with your own eye and chopped it down with your own axe and brought it home with your own muscle. The Christmas tree—that is your job:

Bringing in the Tree.

Father gets the turkey,
Mother makes the pie—
Each one has a Christmas job
To do, and so have I.
Sister strings the popcorn
To decorate—but, gee!
I have got the biggest job—
Bringing in the tree!

Turkey is important,
Pie and such are great.
Popcorn strings you have to have
When you decorate.
But I guess a Christmas
Christmas wouldn't be
If you didn't have a boy
Bringing in the tree!

Give Your Hens Needed Energy

"Energy:—power, force, vigor, efficiency." That's what the dictionary says. Some folks call it "vim, pep, punch, kick." But whatever the name, it's the thing your hens must have in order to do a full day's work every day—in order to digest enough food to maintain their bodies and regularly shell out the high-priced, profit-bringing eggs.

Perfect health and great energy go together. You can easily make your flock healthy, vigorous, energetic, by adding to any good ration. The reason is plain. This great poultry tonic and conditioner is a natural health-builder. It makes the hen-machine work right—prevents a break-down from some part going wrong. It helps the good layers to do better—it turns loafers into layers.

If you have used the genuine Pratts Poultry Regulator you know this. If you haven't, it will pay you to let your birds prove it—at our risk. A start right now—today—means money for you.

Pratts Roup Tablets

(or Powder) should be put in the drinking water occasionally to protect your flock against dangerous colds and deadly roup. These diseases check laying—may kill the layers. Prevention is best. You can depend on this preparation to overcome these troubles if they appear. It's a good business to regularly use it. You can't lose—because

Best Christmas for a Boy

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

(©, 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

AS ONE boy to another—for I have never gotten over being one, although I am getting as gray as a billy-goat around the ears—I want to give it as my opinion that a Christmas anywhere but in the country is no Christmas at all!

A city Christmas is a make-believe, a hollow mockery, a false alarm, an imitation. I have tried both kinds, and so I know. A city Christmas has all the tin and tinsel, and that is all. By the time you get as old and feel as young as I am, you find most of the plate worn off.

Honestly, boys (and girls), I don't think Santa Claus himself ever feels very much at home except on a rural route! He has a mighty poor job in a big town, with flues instead of chimneys, and everything. And it is hard to see where he gets room to turn a sleigh and eight reindeer around, tiny reindeer though they may be. He'll be pretty certain to bump into a hydrant or tip over on a curb.

And with twenty families all using one flue (and, what is worse, a soft coal flue at that) how in the world is the most experienced Santa going to find which is Brown's and which is Smith's, and where the Greens live? Even if he dared rap and ask (which no Santa Claus is ever supposed to do) nobody could tell him. For perhaps the Browns and the Smiths have never "met," and the Greens might live across the hall for a month before anybody thought to inquire their name.

For that is one thing you don't get much of in the city—neighbors. Sometimes when the woman across the road keeps running in just when your mother is canning, or baking, or treating a shirt-bosom kindly but firmly with a flat-iron, your mother may almost wish that they weren't quite so plentiful in the country—but she wouldn't. She would miss them, just the same as you would miss having the same boys to play with year after year.

For in the city you are always getting a fresh lot of playmates—and sometimes they are a mighty fresh lot, too. Of course there are some good kids, also; but it always seems that just when you get to liking some fellow up the street or across the alley, the landlord boosts the rent and his folks have to move, and you never see him again. He may move only from one side of the city to the other, but it might as well be to another state. It is five or ten or twenty miles—miles of houses, no, miles of flats, and streetcar tracks, and railroads, and factories—and you never see him again or any of his folks.

The boys you know this Christmas probably won't be around at all next Christmas, if you live in the city. That is a funny thing about city folks: they are always going somewhere and never getting anywhere. Why, even if the landlord didn't raise the rent October 1 or May 1 or whenever the lease expires, they might move anyway! People who live in flats instead of homes are always looking for something better and getting something worse. They have the most wonderful collection of rent receipts, but not a foot of ground, not a roof or rafter, they can call their own.

Now, I don't know what you think, but I think that every family ought to have a house of its own, a house it lives in year after year. That is, of course, unless the father has some sort of job that makes it necessary for him to move to some other town every other year or so. But it is a great thing to live in a home, not just a house, and that is about the best place, and the only place, to have a Christmas, a real, sure-enough, honest-to-goodness Christmas.

Most of you boys who live on the farm and in the small town have that kind of home, and I wonder if you know how lucky you are? Wouldn't you hate to wake up Christmas morning and look at the ceiling and realize that someone else owned it, and then get up and go out in the front yard and realize that someone else owned that, too—why, you'd get so after awhile that, everything you saw, you would wonder who owned it!

I tell you, boys, it's a great satisfaction to have a back yard and to know it's yours, and that you can invite people into it, or invite people to stay out of it, just as you please. Why, that is what brought the Pilgrim Fathers to America—they wanted a spot they could call their own. I don't say that

Building Conditions

There are three fundamental principles that regulate building cost:

The laboring man's standard of living is steadily improving and he will not be content to accept smaller wages under existing conditions.

America's forests are gradually being depleted and the distance between the remaining timber and the saw mills is becoming greater each year.

The demand for Lumber is greater than ever before. Right now we are facing the serious condition of a housing shortage of over 4,000,000 homes.

It is not reasonable to exteud a reduction in building cost for many years to come.

DEED OF HEROES IS PERPETUATED

Monument Erected in Montreal in Honor of "Thermopylae of Canada."

EXPLOIT LIKE FICTION TALE

Adam Dauiac With Sixteen Companions Face Overwhelming Force of Indians in Attempt to Save Montreal.

Montreal.—The magnificent heroism of Adam Daulac, or Dollard, Sieur des Ormeaux, and his 16 brave companions at the Long Sault—which has been called "The Thermopylae of Canada"—has been perpetuated in granite and bronze, and a handsome monument added to the public treasures of the city of Montreal. The monument, the work of Alfred Laliberte, stands in Lafontaine park. Unveiling ceremonies took place recently.

The exploit which has made the name of Dollard immortal in Canadian history, occurred in May, 1660. Dollard at that time was commandant of the garrison at Montreal or Ville Marie. Paul de Chomedy, Sieur de Maisonneuve, who had founded the city in 1642, was governor. For some months the colony had been in danger of extinction at the hands of the Iroquois. Dollard, who had come to the colony three years before, at the age of twenty-two, asked leave of Maisonneuve to lead a party of Volunteers against the Iroquois. It was known that hundreds of Indian warriors lay at the mouth of the Richelieu river, below Montreal, while hundreds more were on the Ottawa river, above Montreal. Three Rivers and Quebec were to be wiped out. Dollard's plan was to meet the Indian warriors on their way down the Ottawa and give battle, regardless of numbers.

Sixteen men joined him in his desperate enterprise. All took an oath to accept no quarter, made their wills, and attended a religious service. They proceeded up the St. Lawrence, entered the Ottawa, at the head of the Island of Montreal—where the swift currents baffled them for a week—crossed the Lake of Two Mountains, and passed Carillon, 50 miles above Montreal.

At the Long Sault.

Finally they reached the foot of a swirling torrent of waters, barring the way. The Indian warriors had to pass that way and that was the place to meet them. Dollard and his men took possession of a palisade fort near the river's edge, built by an Algonquin war party some months before. They were soon joined by 40 friendly Hurons and four Algonquins.

In a day or two the Iroquois made their appearance. Their advance guard, while making an attempt to land, was fired upon. Those who escaped reported to the main body, 200 strong, about the Sault. The Indians quickly descended the rapids in their war canoes and fell to the attack.

They rushed upon the little garrison, but were driven back. Capturing the birch canoes of the Frenchmen and their Indian companions, they set them ablaze and attempted to do the same with the palisade. A withering fire greeted them and they retired in defeat. During the next attack, immediately after, one of their great chiefs fell. For five days and nights the struggle continued. The defenders were without water and were unable to swallow the crushed Indian corn they had for food. Their Indian allies deserted them, with the exception of four Algonquins and one Huron.

On the fifth day re-enforcements to the number of 500 reached the Iroquois, and a savage assault was made on the palisade. The French were on the alert, and the Indians were once more compelled to retire. Other attacks were made in the three following days, but with no success.

Last Grand Assault.

The Iroquois then determined upon a general assault. Great shields of wood, four or five feet high, were made, and under the cover of these the warriors came on. In the face of a heavy fire they succeeded in reaching the palisade, crouching low, and attempted to cut their way in with hatchets.

At this point Dollard crammed a big musketoon with powder, and plugged up the muzzle. Lighting the fuse, he tried to throw it among the Iroquois without, but it struck the top of the palisade, fell back among the defenders and exploded with disastrous effect. Pressing the assault at this moment of confusion, the Iroquois thrust their firearms into the loopholes and fired. A breach was made in the fort and Dollard and his men sprang forward to the defense. Other breaches were made, and Dollard met a soldier's fate. His followers threw themselves upon their assailants, but the end had come at last.

The 17 young heroes from Montreal gave their lives, but not in vain, for the Iroquois abandoned their enterprise, having had more than enough of battle, and Montreal, Three Rivers and Quebec were saved.

EXCUSE FOR CEASING WORK

The Russian working people have always seized upon Christmas as an excuse for ceasing all work for a somewhat lengthy period—sometimes for a month. Before the recent revolution "Kolenda" was the celebration on Christmas eve, when the peasants gathered about the houses of the nobles, sang carols and scrambled for the coins tossed to them from the windows. Then came a great masquerade, when peasants of all ages dressed themselves to represent animals, the idea being to perpetuate the memory of the lowliness of the Saviour's birth in the stable.

The Little Story That's True

One of our Hilltop residents tells this one:

"It was at a county fair not far from here. A blind man was singing and playing a small organ, with the hope of gathering in a few nickels and dimes from sympathetic passers-by. Then a forlorn-looking fellow, with no coat on and with clothes and shoes all full of holes, sauntered along, stopped, and joined in the singing, with a voice which was one of the most beautiful I ever heard; then started to whistle and warble in the most wonderful manner, attracting a great crowd about the little organ-grinder and himself. I stood and listened till he was through, then I turned to him and asked him where he was from, and he said: 'from anywhere.' I asked him why it was he was living such an apparent existence, and he answered: 'Drink.'

"Two years after, I was at the same place. Another blind couple were singing and trying to play a violin and poor little organ, but no one seemingly paid any attention to them. A well-dressed man approached the blind couple and looking sympathetically at them stepped, and selecting a piece for them to play, he began singing: 'Silver Threads Among the Gold,' in such a beautiful manner that in a few minutes a great crowd had gathered around the little place. Then after whistling and warbling most wonderfully, he stopped and told the great crowd of the need of the poor blind couple, saying: 'I do not want a cent, but give to them, now kick in,' with the result that their collection cup was soon full to running over. Then the singer walked away to the art hall where he was engaged at a good salary. It was the same man of two years before, but was freed from the curse of drink."

The Tree of Love

I Am
The Tree
Of Love
I am the light
That Christmas-tide
Brings. I am ever green
My limbs are yearning to Bear the burden of gifts of Noel. I live in the high, open Spaces where God smiles brightest on the world, where his light
Keeps the memory of Christ's birth
Refreshed. Years ago men fought and Know no time to think of the Gentle
One who spoke of Love. And then one Night a star beamed in the east and filled
Me with a sweet grace. My soul quivered,
And I was born again. And now I come
With the Christmas time to remind you of Love—Love, that fades, but lives again. I am
But a dream unless you know me. I wish
To ache under the burden of love gifts.
Yes, I am ever green; I live forever, but
You do not know me always. I ask
You to remember the little ones
Whom Love has passed when some Forget me. I pray the light that Never dies shall flame out again
In your heart. For this I live.
For this I ask. I wish
To live and serve.
I am
Love
Hope
Life
I am the Tree of Love.

Christmas at Dugans

By Mary Rhinehart, 12 years old, 7th grade Highland Ave.

CHAPTER I

It was Christmas at the Dugan house. Everyone was thinking what they wanted from Santa. There were four Dugan children in all: Tom, twelve; Mary, ten; Dick, eight, and then Baby Sue who was only three. Then too there was Papa and Mama Dugan. As I was saying it was Christmas and of course everyone was very anxiously waiting. At last Tom broke the silence. "Well I can hardly wait can you?" "No! Tom but you must," said Mary. "Yes and I want Santa to bring me a big base drum so I can beat a role as father does," it was Dick who spoke this time. "My children, I guess you had better go to bed as it is getting late and you will all want to be up early in the morning," said father. So all the children retired and father and mother soon followed them.

It was early in the morning and Mary was the first to awake. She sent up a glad "hurrah," which awoke the other children and they all pronounced themselves ready to look at their stockings. "Come," said Tom, "Let's see what Santa brought." So all ran down stairs at a high speed.

CHAPTER II

"Oh," look at this wonderful doll," said Mary. "Oh I say Mary look at my new "bic" I must say I'm a lucky guy," said Tom with the air of a master. "But would you look here a bit," said Dick, "I got an. "Injun suit," said at this minute a shrill piped voice called out, "Oh Santa bringed me a "Kiddie Kar." By this time mother and father were down stairs and said the children must not go in where the "Christmas tree" was as there were many surprises there and they must wait until later.

CHAPTER III

After breakfast father opened the parlor door, there stood a big Christmas tree, "Oh," breathed all the children at once. There was for Tom, a cravat, a tie, a football, a bat, and for Mary there was silk handkerchiefs, a new dress, a pair of skates, a tea set, a ribbon, and some books; for Dick there was a drum, a wagon, a train and a sled, then too little Sue had a dolly, a piano, a sled, a buggy and oh much more! At last the children brought out father's and mother's nice little presents. Father got from Tom a wonderful book about inventory, from Mary a tie, from Dick a cap, from Sue a handkerchief, and from mother a nice red wool sweater. Then, too, mother had gotten from Tom a flower blooming in a pot, from Mary an apron, from Dick a cap, from Sue a handkerchief, and then father came forward and handed mother "a nice new silk dress."

Now let us leave them in the homly atmosphere of a "Jolly Christmas Day," and may we have as happy a one.

THE HILLTOP RECORD joins with all others in wishing all our readers a very MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Dedication

The dedication services of the Hilltop Lutheran church last Sunday was a solemn, impressive and glorious event. As the clergy, followed by the Church Council bearing the Bible, sacred vessels, cross and candle sticks, then the council of the Mother Church followed by the large vested choir, moved slowly up the center aisle; it presented such a majestic scene that the congregation felt they were in a holy place indeed.

All the services and sermons of the day were of an unusually high order. Perhaps the most impressive and inspirational part of the service was when twenty-four nearly all adults marched to the altar to be received as communicant members of the church, the superintendent of construction leading to be the first to be baptized from the baptismal font which he had built. It so impressed Dr. Yarger, the General Mission Superintendent, who travels from the lakes to the gulf and from the western boarder of Pennsylvania to the Pacific, that he referred to it as one of the most remarkable incidents he ever witnessed in connection with a dedication. More than $4,100.00 was raised in cash and subscriptions. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Wenrich and his faithful band are to be congratulated for giving the Hilltop such a church.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schumann of 28 S. Ogden Ave., entertained the Luther League of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church, Friday evening, December 17th, and also in commemoration of the 14th birthday of their youngest son Ernest. After the business of the league, and some readings on the life of Luther were read and explained by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Loss and matters came to a close. Refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was spent very enjoyable with plenty of music and all departing very happily. Those who enjoyed the evening were as follows: Lucille Friend, Catherine Grossman, Edith Ott, Mildred Perry, Ruth Schults, Eleanor Wehrle, Leo Baeeman, Edwin Beh, Elvin and Lester Bruckelmeyer, Russel Friend, Clarence Kenner, and Carl Clarence and Ernest Schumann.

The amount resulting from the enthusiastic work of the boys and girls of Highland Ave. School in selling Christmas Seals to promote health and happiness during the New Year was $267.00.

The pupil selling the most seals was Faryana Pritchard, of the 6-A, whose sum was $12.62, making the 6-A a total of $26.00, the highest of any grade. The 7-B schools followed closely; the girls leading with $23.46; the boys bringing the 7-B total up to $34.40.

Mrs. D. H. Ellis, 2614 W. Broad St., and Mrs. Ezra Hill, 52 N. Ogden Ave. were guests at a reception at Mrs. Mary Lee's home in Westerville, Ohio, Thursday, Dec. 21, in honor of the President-elect Harding and Mrs. Harding, U. S. Senator-elect Willis and Mrs. Willis and other leading Republicans and their wives also. Republican Glee club and the Franklin County G. O. P. organization.

Communication

PRE DESTINATION

Opposing the article on predestination, one signing "Paul" writes contra to my views. I like his beautifully written, concisely stated and learned presentation.

This "Paul" says, that the writer of Romans, was seemingly a believer in Predestination. This writer of Romans, was Paul, the Apostle. The same Paul who was taught at the feet of Gamaliel; born out of due season; who arose triumphant from a persecutor on the Damascan road; who became the mightiest advocate for Jesus; fearlessly presenting God's messages.

He says in his message to the Ephesians; "According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we might be holy and without blame before him in love. Having predestined us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself according to the good pleasure of his will. * * In whom we have also an inheritance, being predestined according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will."

My friend says that God limited himself, concerning man. He then argues that God turned loose a created Devil, who was and is the keenest and most powerful and resourceful and never sleeping creation, endowed with all means and education and device. My friend argues that he then turns poor, weak man, loose, against this creature, and says: If you win, I will accept you in my kingdom,—if you lose, you are "his property," and don't you complain. Its your job, by your works, to win, for I, God, have no fixed plan about you at all.

But this same Paul, the apostle says, contra to this, "For by Grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is a gift of God, NOT OF WORKS, lest any man should boast."

Predestination, my friend indicates is unfair, to man. We are admonished.—"what is man that thou art mindful of him."

The beautiful illustrations which my friend so well presents, in "the Peaks" and the "Levels," are comforting advances in the moral and educational life and experiences. But we can; we must differentiate between the merely moral man and the saved man. The saved man follows humbly where his master trod. Hope of eternal life is in his heart, and he has heard the still small voice that has spoken peace his troubled soul.

Through God's grace (an unmerited reward) and the propitiation on Calvary he is heir of the inheritance of life, eternal. Those old lines are ever new to him.

"Through many dangers, toils and snares,
I have already come,
Tis Grace that's brought me safe thus far,
And Grace 'twill lead me home."

These promises are to all his children, promises that he foreknew in the making and there was no element of chance entering into it. For he has said of his children that he will visit their iniquities with stripes, but that he will in no wise cast them out. It is written—"that for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament that by means of death for the transgressions that were under the first testament they which were called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."

These promises are as aptly described in the old as in the new testament. "For he saith unto Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion,—so that it is not of him that willeth, nor him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy."

Finally my friend quotes "The Spirit says come and the Bride says come, etc." To understand we must know who is speaking,—to whom,—and when. This was written by John, the Revelator. He is describing the vision of heaven, he witnessed at the end of time. At that time, the spirit in the saints of God, says come,—The Bride, (the church) says Came. All the glorified of God are to partake of the water of life freely.

It is in keeping with the description of the judgment in the 25th chapter of St. Matthew, where the Christ says to the saved, "Come, ye Blessed of my Father, and inherit the kingdom prepared for you, FROM THE FOUNDATION OF THE WORLD." For whom? His children, whom he foreknew, saved by Grace, and thus heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ.

DAVID.

Tuesday evening was the occasion of a pleasant time at the United Evangelical church. A congregational meeting had been called for the purpose of considering the financial end of the work. In spite of the rain, sleet and icy streets a nice audience was present. A program of song, readings and addresses was the order. We were royally entertained by little Miss Josephine Brewer who was formerly a scholar in our Sunday school. We have this to say: It will be hard to find one to equal her in reciting. She was encored again and again. All were more than delighted with her part of the program. Come again Josephine.

The pastor explained the budget and the plan for paying $1,000 on the church debt during the year. The first $100 is to be met by each member earning $1.00 or more beside their regular income during the month of January, in any legitimate way. A get-together meeting to follow in which each will tell how the dollar was earned. Prizes awarded the one earning it the easiest way, also the most difficult way, and the one earning the most dollars, etc. After the financial talk all were invited to go to the basement and partake of the refreshments prepared by the ladies. The refreshments were donated by Hill Top's enterprising and generous-hearted groceryman, to whom we all say, "Thank you, Mr. Haunts." Now comes the surprise—I presume the pastor was wondering why the folks were looking so pleasant while he was talking about money for the church. The speech was all right, but I guess they didn't hear all of it for they had something else up their sleeves. For after refreshments, the genial Mr. Baker called the house to order, and said, "you were urged by the pastor to attend this meeting, and told you had nothing to bring but yourself, no money, no offering. But you have utterly disregarded the pastor's announcement. Then holding up a jar of jelly as a forerunner of what was to follow. Potatoes, sugar, coffee, canned fruits, vegetables, nuts, pop corn, etc. [illegible] things as are handy to have about the cellar and culinary department. That the surprise was complete was visible to all. In broken remarks the pastor thanked the friends for their gifts and the beautiful spirit back of the giving. After wishing each other "A Merry Christmas," all went home feeling that the evening had been well spent. Without authority we take the liberty to invite you to come and hear an old time gospel sermon at U. E. church.

The Elite Embroidery club met at the home of Mrs. W. H. Spangler, 120 Eldon Ave., Thursday 16th. The meeting was in the form of a Christmas-party, each guest bringing a gift. Each one then drew a package. Many pretty gifts were received and everyone had a good time. These members were present: Mrs. Melvin Bents and son Marshall, Mrs. G. Ryan, Mrs. Dwight Cox, Mrs. Robert Bigler, Mrs. Frank Mifkins and Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt and son Kenneth and the hostess.

Miss Carrie Anna Benham of the General Hospital, Cincinnati, spent several days last week the guest of her uncle, William Bradfute and family, while attending the Nurses Registration and Examination before the State Medical Board.

"Shore Acres," the powerful American drama that has dominated the stage for nearly 30 years will be at the Empire Hilltop theater Christmas afternoon and night. "Queens Up," a Vanity Fair girl comedy will also be shown.

The Beta Lambda Class of Glenwood M. E. Sunday school will have a Christmas party at the church in honor of their husbands, Thursday evening, December 30. There will be good eats and a splendid time. All members be sure and be there.

Mr. and Mrs. Raab, of 2144 Sullivant Ave. happily announce the birth of a son, Comrade Junior, at Mt. Carmel hospital, Dec. 21st. Mother and baby doing well. Daddy all smiles.

TURK TAXES ARE HIGH

Levy $229 on Cheapest of United States Automobiles.

Sugar and Liquor Rates Are Away Up—School Books Are Only Things Exempt.

New York.—Turkish tax collectors spare nothing from levies except schoolbooks, and the assessments run so high that 10 cents a pound is exacted on all sugar, while a tax of $229 recently was demanded on an automobile that sells for $595 in the United States.

These unterrified tax collectors have boisted the rates to such an altitude that the Near East Relief injected a protest, its headquarters here was informed in a letter from one of their workers in Samsoun, Armenia, about 300 miles from Constantinople.

Liquor, blighted by prohibition since October 1, is taxed a certain sum per bottle, irrespective of quality, the letter said. The time limit for exporting all intoxicants from the county terminates December 1. After that the Kemal government will confiscate the balance of stocks.

For thirty years special taxation has been exercised to fill a swamp that has caused malaria to blossom and flourish constantly, but, the writer said, "these hundreds of thousands of Turkish pounds have filled official pockets while the marsh still remains unfilled." The Near East Relief has a hospital only a mile away, and has persistently requested that this "plague-spot" be removed.

Dr. K. J. Marden, head of the Near East hospital at Marsovan, has "performed many minor operations to remove tatoo marks from Armenian girls," continued the letter. These girls are tattooed on the hands, forehead, cheekbones, chin and on or between the breasts. Many girls are deeply ashamed of this mark of their slavehood.

"Some of these girls will vanish sooner or later from the protecting home, as some have done before them, to find their way back to the Turkish or Kurdish harem which contains their child. One cannot blame them. They are mothers first and Armenians afterward. There is tragedy there, for the Armenian men will never understand this thing. To them the child is a Turkish child. To the mother it is her child."

DRESSED FOR COMPANY

BOY, 12, STARTLES SINGERS

Another Prodigy Reaches Highest Note Ever Reached by the Human Voice.

New York.—Among boy prodigies Edward Rochie Hardy, 12-year-old Columbia freshman, may boast the mastery of a dozen languages, and Samuel Rosochewski, 9-year-old Polish chess wizard, recently checkmated nineteen West Point strategists in a row—but neither of them can sing.

Robert Murray, 12, of Tacoma, Wash., can. Recently before a group of famous Metropolitan stars, including Mme. Frances Alda, who "discovered" the youth last summer, Murray not only reached with ease the high notes in arias of Galli-Curci and Tetrazzini fame, but, to the astonishment of his hearers, he transposed those high notes to a higher key and breathed them with equal facility and resonance. The singers who heard the performance asserted that this was the highest note ever reached by the human voice.

Heavy Girl Baby.

Oil City, Pa.—Oil City is the home of the largest baby girl in the world, a 14-pound daughter being born to Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Brown. Both the mother and baby are doing nicely. Physicians and medical men state that the baby is not only the largest girl ever born in Oil City, but one of the largest in medical annals. The weight is vouched for by the doctor and does not include clothing.

A record sized baby boy, weighing 17 pounds, was born here nine months ago.

You Can Have Eggs All Winter-If

you give your flock a little help. It isn't a matter of chance—you'll get eggs if you work for them. And if your birds lay heavily this winter you'll take in a lot of egg-money because prices will be high. The extra eggs you can get will pay for many things you want and need.

Give your layers a chance to do their best work. Feed a good ration and include

Pratts
Poultry Regulator

the original poultry tonic and conditioner. It makes hens lay because it puts and keeps them in condition to lay—healthy and vigorous. Its natural tonics, appetizers, digestives and laxatives strengthen and regulate the internal organs—make hens healthy—then they lay. Nearly fifty years of successful use by the world's leading poultrymen proves it. And our money-back guarantee is your protection. Sold in packages, pails and sacks up to 100 lbs.

Pratts Roup Remedy

is another big aid to winter layers. Put it in the drinking water occasionally, especially during spells of bad weather. It heads off dangerous colds and deadly roup, and aids in overcoming these troubles if they appear.

DEVIL'S ISLAND WORST PRISON

Nothing to Match, for Horror, French Convict Settlement in South America.

FEW SURVIVE IMPRISONMENT

Punishments Are Frequent and of Fearful Severity, and If Man Lays Hand on Warder the Penalty Is Death.

London.—We have heard ugly tales of Siberia. The Spanish penal settlement at Fernando Po is no health resort, while Italy was obliged to close up her prison colony at Massowah because wardens as well as convicts were dying by the score.

But of all prisons existing today, there is nothing to match, for horror the French convict settlement of Devil's Island, a writer in London Tit-Bits asserts.

Devil's Island lies off the coast of French Guiana or Cayenne, the one colony which France owns in South America. This settlement is reserved for the worst cases, and few survive a term of imprisonment there.

A prisoner sentenced to Cayenne is usually given six months' solitary confinement in a French prison before being sent away. The term varies according to the length of time required to collect a cargo of unfortunates.

Arrive at Devil's Island.

For a week or two before leaving the prisoners are given some meat and wine to prepare them for the ordeal of the voyage in a convict ship. The 'tween decks of the ship are made into one long passage with cells on either side closely barred in front. Near the boilers are two punishment cells in which a man can neither lie nor stand and where the heat is almost unendurable.

Arrived at Devil's island the prisoners are stripped and searched. They are then divided into large barracks, each of which holds 50 prisoners.

These large rooms are perfectly bare, and paved with stone, and the unfortunate prisoners are obliged to lie on the floors all through the sweating nights, tormented by mosquitoes and other insects.

The food consists of provisions condemned by the military and naval authorities. The only exception is the flour, which is of fair quality.

Roll call sounds at five in the morning, after breakfast the gangs go out to work in the sweltering sun. They clear the land and cultivate it. Yet if one is caught picking up a cocoanut or any other fruit he is at once ordered 60 days in the cells.

"Cells" means confinement in an airless place, sleeping on a plank bed, and only one meal a day, that being bread and water. Punishments are frequent and of fearful severity, and if a man lays hands on a warder the penalty is death.

Sea Swarms With Man-eaters.

Devil's island was first used as a prison about 70 years ago. At that time there were no guards. Since the tepid sea teems with man-eating sharks, the authorities thought it needless to take other precautions.

Then came the escape of Henri Chabanne, one of the most wonderful instances of prison breaking on record. Under his directions his companions built a large raft. They made oars, a mast and sail; they even constructed casks to hold fresh water.

Seven in all started away. They left at eight in the evening, and next morning were out of sight of land and in a rough sea. They were up to their waists in water, with hordes of sharks around.

After four days and four nights of indescribable horror, they landed on the coast of Dutch Guiana, but there was no fresh water. Chabanne and another plunged into the forest, and after five days reached a plantation where the owner received them kindly. Chabanne asked for assistance to go back and fetch his friends. This was granted, but of the five only three were alive.

This was the first of a long series of escapes, or attempted escapes. One man, Adrian Demerian, possesses the amazing record of having made three separate escapes from Devil's island.

TEDDY BEAR SAVES CHILD

Clasped in Her Arms, Toy Shields Body From Wheel of Automobile.

Defiance.—A fuzzy, brown Teddy bear which she held clasped in her arms, probably assisted in saving the life of the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvert Degler. As the father backed his automobile out of the garage one of the rear wheels passed over the body of the little girl.

She was still holding the Teddy bear in her arms when picked up. The wheel of the car also passed over the toy bear, which shielded the child's body. Indications are that the girl will recover.

POLAND IS DESTITUTE

War With Russia Has Left Country in Serious Condition.

United States to Be Called Upon to Feed and Clothe 1,250,000 Children.

London.—One of the aftermaths of the Polish-soviet war is that Americans will be called upon to feed and clothe more than 1,250,000 Polish children this winter through the American relief administration.

Up to the time of the latest outbreak of hostilities, destitution had been so reduced that the relief administration officials believed that Poland, with the organization the Americans had perfected would be able to carry on the work after this autumn. That is considered impossible now and preparations are under way for caring for as many children as during the dark days of last winter.

This decision came after receipt in London of reports of a complete survey of the country begun immediately after the Bolsheviki were driven back. Trained observers report that the Poles themselves have not painted the picture black enough. After two armies had fought over the ground there was little left for the children they report, and each requested immediate shipment of food and clothing. As far as possible, distributing agents for the administration are complying with these requests.

The organization by which about $19,000,000 worth of food and clothing was distributed in Poland in sixteen months at a cost of approximately $80,000 is virtually intact. It includes between 15,000 and 18,000 Poles whose services are paid for by Poland but who worked under the direction of a few American administrative officers.

The Poles also pay for transportation from the ships, warehousing and distribution. In addition, they supply all flour received by them through a $200,000 credit granted them by the grain corporation.

Although the distributing organization was considerably disarranged during the recent fighting, officials here say they can get into working order again very quickly after railroad repairs have been completed.

"And It Cannot Warp"

Being a uniform sheet of pure gypsum rock, Sheetrock takes any decorative treatment. It can be papered, painted or paneled. Or, it can be left in its own finish of soft mist gray.

Here, indeed, is what you, as a home owner, have always wanted—walls and ceilings that stay put, year after year, regardless of climatic conditions.

Then too, Sheetrock is fireproof; it protects the building. An insulator of heat, Sheetrock makes the building cool in summer, warm in winter, and cuts fuel bills.

You will also be glad to know that the cost of Sheetrock—for new constructios, alterations and repairs—is actually less than that of frail, unsatisfactory wall boards. We suggest that you call on us today and see for yourself what a wonderful material this standard wall and ceiling unit really is.

"SLEEP" SICKNESS IN EUROPE

Strange Malady Sweeping Eastern and Central Districts, Say Medical Authorities.

Geneva.—A kind of sleeping sickness is said by medical authorities to be spreading throughout eastern and central Europe and the International Red Cross is seeking to have preventive measures adopted.

In Switzerland, statistics show 991 cases of the malady have been treated in the first half of the year.

Take the Safes With Them.

Lafayette, Ind.—There's a new outdoor sport in Indiana. It consists of stealing safes and hauling them away from the store to be opened at leisure. A lot of yeggs have become experts. Edward Spangler of West Monora found his safe in a field, after it had been rifled of $250.

WHEN MADRID IS GAY

Presence of King in Town Cause of Wonderful Spectacle.

Brilliant Daily Display in the Palace Yard as the Guard Changed.

Madrid.—More color is to be seen in the palace yard of Madrid when King Alfonso is in residence than is to be found in any other part of Spain. The military spectacle alone is brilliant, with the striking uniforms of red and blue hussars, the dark blue of the artillerymen and the red trousers and blue tunics of the infantry as the old and new guards face each other at 10 o'clock, with the flags unfurled in the center and the two regimental bands drawn up in circles playing martial airs.

The customary brilliant sunshine makes the fixed bayonets and unsheathed swords flash in the air as the various units carry out the smart military exercises.

Thousands of civilians, mostly visitors to Madrid, gather around the precincts of the palace to watch the spectacle. Numbers of them are from the Spanish provinces, and their bright shawls and scarves mixed with the more prosaic dress of the Madrilenians form a fit setting to the bright picture.

Further details are added by the itinerant venders of peanuts and hot butter rolls and other delicacies loved by the children, who under the eye of their nursemaids in their picturesque costumes of varied hues run hither and thither.

Sometimes the king himself comes out on the balcony to salute his guard and then all is hushed while he faces the regimental flags, and after bowing his head raises his hand to his kepi.

The picture is on view for about an hour every morning.

VOLCANIC MUSHROOM

One of the strangest and most interesting of all Mother Nature's children is the Lycoperdon. At a tender age it is deliciously edible, but growing older loses its gastronomic appeal. By the time it reaches pension age it is so doggoned rambunctious that, should the midday sun find the top of its bald head, it just up and busts itself, as shown in the photograph.

Meeting this Thursday evening, December 30, 7:30

F. E. Bowers, C. C.,
C. W. Rutledge, K. of R. and S.

On Christmas day, at four P. M., Miss Mabel Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dunn, was married to Mr. Oscie Steele, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride, 23 South Terrace Street. Rev. Mr. Seesholtz, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Church, officiated. The newly-wedded couple will make their future home at 35 South Harris Avenue.

Out of town guests at the wedding were: Mr. Chas. Steele, Grove City, father of the groom; Miss Laura Presgrave, Fremont; Mr. Will Presgrave, Cleveland, and Mr. Vinton Parr, Ellis. Other guests were Rev. and Mrs. P. E. Smoke, Mrs. S. F. Seesholtz, Miss Lottie Stump, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sullivan, Mrs. Decker, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. S. Parks Johnson, Mr. Ralph Dunn, Ivan Sullivan, Carl Sullivan, and Howard Dunn.

Miss Mildred Negus acted as bridesmaid. Mr. Keneth Smoke was best man to Oscie Steele, and Miss Roma Day played the wedding march.

Miss Sarah Louise Kuch and Mr. A. B. Rice were married on Christmas night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Kuch, 465 S. Waren Avenue. Rev. E. B. White was the officiating minister. The newly married couple will make their home at 460 S. Waren Avenue. Mr. Rice is an electrical constructor, employed at the Ohio Elevator and Machine Co.

About noon Christmas day the decorations in one of the rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Dunn became ignited by coming in contact with an electric wire, destroyig a cedar arch, also window shades and curtains, and scorching some of the woodwork. The damage is estimated to be about $100.

Obituary

Frank Robert Ellison was born near West Union, Ohio, November 7th, 1862, and died December 15th, 1920, age 58 years, 1 month, 8 days.

He was the eldest son of William Jasper and Mary Jane Ellison, both of whom have preceded him in death. He is survived by two brothers, and four sisters: Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth Kepperling of Laura, O.; Mrs. Mary Martha Shoemaker of Arcanum, O.; Mrs. Cora Ella Davis and Mrs. Lucy Emma Kirkpatrick of Cherry Fork, O.; Dr. James William Ellison of Denver, Colo., and Dr. Samuel Jasper Ellison of West Union, O. One sister, Margaret Laura Winkle, departed this life four and one half years ago.

He leaves a widow, Nellie Francis, eldest daughter of Rev. J. W. Willis, to whom he was united in marriage at Mawryatown, O., April 11th, 1889. To this uninon were born three sons and three daughters, four of whom survive him: Earl Willis, Floyd Leslie, Mrs. Bertha Mary Price and Ruth Delphine. One daughter and one son have preceded him: Mable Clare who died at Clarksville, O., Nov. 12, 1903, and Homer Franklin at Dayton, O., Oct. 25, 1918. He is also survived by three grandchildren: Bartha Jean and Vivian Eileen daughters of Floyd, and Edwin Homer surviving son of Homer.

He entered the teaching profession at the age of 21, which he followed until the fall of 1906, at which time he removed with his family to Columbus, O., and became connected with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which connection he kept until the beginning of his illness two and one-half years ago.

He united with the Friends' Church at Ogden, O., in 1894, and at the time of his death was a member of St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, Columbus, O., and for several years was superintendent of the Sunday school, director of the choir and trustee at this church. He was a member of Westgate Lodge of Masons No. 623, Columbus.

Mr. Ellison was an independent thinker, and was well informed far above the ordinary man on almost any subject, and reached his conclusions and opinions by definite accurate reasoning. Hence with Paul he could say, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded he will keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." A few days before his death he said so earnestly: "I have not a shadow of doubt regarding the future." He was a true "pal" with his family, a progressive citizen, espousing every good cause. His place will be difficult to fill in the church and the community. He was a great lover of music and was never happier than when singing with choir or quartet. We lay his body to rest believing that ere this his spirit has joined the choir of the redeemed in heaven.

I want to thank the good people of the Hilltop who so liberally patronized my

The Personal Workers' Bible Class of Hoge Memorial Sabbath school will hold their regular business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. Brokaw, 2381 W. Broad St., Monday, January 3, at 7:30. Come and make the first meeting of the new year a large gathering.

The Hillcrest choir will repeat two of its Christmas numbers Sunday night: "There Were Shepherds," by Vincent; "Hark! Hark My Soul," by Shelley; and Mrs. Howard will sing a solo.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ferguson celebrated their third wedding anniversary Christmas day with a dinner at home on South Terrace St. Those present were: Herschel, Hazel, Myron, Marjorie and Dorothy Louise Ferguson, Russell Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ferguson

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Glenwood church will meet at the home of Mrs. Richard Hughes, 57 Terrace Ave., Monday evening, January 3, at 7:30. The "Mystery Box" in the November Friend will be used. Members requested to bring a pocket of pennies, or come prepared to answer queer questions.

Mr. C. C. Staiger, 72, died of pneumonia, at 5:30 Wednesday morning at his home, 134 S. Hague Ave. He had been sick for five weeks. He is survived by a wife, two sons and daughters. The funeral will be held Friday. Burial at Amanda, O., by the Hilltop Undertaking Co. Mr. Staiger was a member of Amanda Lodge I. O. O. F.

Owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. C. F. Bowman, there will be no watch party next Friday night at the church.

We desire to express in this manner our sincere gratitude to the friends and neighbors for the many kindnesses shown to us during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father. We also wish to thank the church and Sunday school and the Westgate Lodge of Masons for their beautiful services and floral tributes; also our pastor for his helpful message and words of comfort and the many others who so kindly showed their interest in us.

Mrs. F. R. Ellison and Family.

We wish to thank all those who had a part in sending the beautiful basket with blooming primrose with card signed, "Neighbors and Playmates," as a Christmas cheer to our little son William, who is ill with diphtheria, but is now recovering slowly. William is grateful to his little playmates. It did bring him cheer as well as to the rest of the family to know the joy of living in a splendid section of thoughtful neighbros.

Mr. Chas. W. Walton, who for a number of years was superintendent of Glenwood Sunday school, but resigned several years ago, is now to fill his old position again in that school, beginning next Sunday. Mr. Walton's friends will be all pleased to see him again at this post, as he is a hustling and enthusiastic leader. This Sunday school gave as a Christmas offering $241.50 to European Child Relief, also over $200 to other benevolences, such as worthy poor, Protestant Hospital, etc.

Hill Crest Baptist Sunday school also gave $40 to Child Relief, besides an abundant white gift to needy.

Mrs. Clay Gain, of Wheeling, W. Va., spent Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Gain, 62 N. Burgess Ave., returning home Tuesday.

SHE SLEEPS IN BATHROOM

Requires Influence of Four Officials to Get Quarters for American Woman in Vienna.

Vienna.—Like nearly every other city in Europe, Vienna's rooming accommodation is taxed beyond capacity.

The hotels are overflowing at exorbitant rates (in crown values). Every train unloads its quota of newcomers to travel in taxicabs and fiacres from one end of the city to the other in search of sleeping quarters, while even the government room requisitioning system fails to house many thousands.

An American visitor wishing to go from Vienna to Budapest telegraphed daily for a week, receiving daily the reply, "Nothing available."

An American woman, wife of a consul, arrived the other day, and it required all the influence of four American officials to obtain for her a bathroom in which to sleep.

TORTURE TALE ROUSES TOWN

Ridgeway, Pa., Probes Woman's Alleged Cruelty Toward Adopted Daughter.

Ridgway, Pa.—At an "indignation meeting" of more than 1,000 residents of Ridgway a branch of the National Humane society was organized and a committee appointed to investigate the story of brutal treatment at the hands of the woman who adopted her, said by the authorities to have been told by 20-year-old Julia Hector.

Mrs. Rhines Gergel, defendant in the case, was charged with assault and battery with intent to maim, at a hearing, and bail was increased from $1,500 to $3,000.

Miss Hector, who is recovering from the effects of the alleged ill-treatment at the home of Deputy Sheriff Joseph May, told authorities, they said, of being tortured by Mrs. Gergel with hot irons and boiling water, and in other ways.

Three Babies Killed by Missouri Woman

Gorin, Mo.—Mrs. Grover Buford stabbed three of her four children to death with a butcher knife at their home near here, then attempted to kill herself.

The other child, a boy of 9, who witnessed the tragedy, ran to a neighbor for assistance. Mrs. Buford's husband, a farmer, was at work at the time.

The ages of the dead children ranged from 2 to 7 years.

Pays for Slow Time.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Louisville & Nashville railroad must pay Mrs. Ellen Carey of Decatur, Ala., $500, because the clock in the railroad station at Decatur was slow. She was accompanying the body of a son, and missed her train because the clock was four minutes behind time. She sued for $3,000. The court figured that her anxiety was worth $500

A Dimpled Milkmaid

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"So you think yourself a beauty!" young Maben sniffed. "And you can't help agreeing with me." Lorraine giggled, twining an unmistakably premeditated curl about her forefinger. Maben sniffed again, saying:

"What I think doesn't matter—not the least. But if my name were only Wainright—" pausing significantly. Lorraine smiled elfinly, clasped her hands behind her head and murmured, apparently to the breeze:

"It is nice to be found pleasing by a person who knows." Then, sitting up, head thrust forward: "Tell me, Dicky, does the exalted one really think anything about me? The frozen truth—there's a good fellow."

Young Maben smiled craftily. "Afraid you couldn't bear it," he said, looking past Lorraine to her reflection in the mantel mirror.

"Oh, it won't quite turn my head," she laughed back at him, yet with a deep note under it that hurt Maben to hear. But to be madly jealous at two-and-twenty is to be also entirely ruthless. "He says you are a type—the dimpled dairymaid—mighty fetching here on the farm—but civilization would spoil you utterly," Maben answered slowly.

"Would it, I wonder?" Lorraine answered calmly, with a meditative smile, but something at the bottom of her eyes that was disturbing to her sometime sweetheart. They had grown up together into an illusory love—and grown out of it, they thought, by help of school and college. But since love's possessive case is nearly an immortelle, Wainwright's advent had made Maben furious. All the more so that he himself was responsible for it—Wainright, a fellow of Maben's college, specializing in sociology, had taken a fancy to the lad from the wheat country, had helped him in many ways—in return for all of which Maben had almost bullied him into coming to Earable for the holidays.

The farm name had pleased him mightily when he sensed its derivation. It was the old form of arable and doubtless meant adapted to cared crops. Place names, you see, all hold glints of sociology. Thus Wainright to himself. The basic truth was—wearied of sophistication, he felt a longing for life next to the ground.

He said openly he "collected summer girls," thereby assuring his harmlessness. It was thus he had classified Lorraine, with no thought of slight or slur. Maben knew as much—knew that his quotation, actually veritable, was spiritually false. But in a losing battle one takes any weapon handy.

Lorraine, in front of the tall mirror, scanned herself narrowly, turning and bending to see herself at all angles. A new and specially wicked dimple played hide and seek in her left cheek. Maben, watching it, yearned to kiss it away, but felt somehow as though he had forfeited all right even to think of such a thing. Presently he said awkwardly: "I'm glad you don't mind, 'Raine. The old boy meant no harm, but most girls couldn't understand—"

"God Almighty made 'em to match the men," Lorraine quoted with a twinkle. "But me! I'm the best little understander going. If you doubt it, just you watch me."

"I'm sure you've said things of him," Maben began defensively. She nodded, interrupting again. "Not a patch on the things I shall say to him. Beloved, listen, it will be worth while."

"Going to ask him if a dimpled dairymaid wears her finger in her mouth?" Maben bantered.

"Why didn't you let me think of that?" Lorraine sighed. "You know original sin gets there first always—"

"Shut up! There he comes," Maben admonished over his shoulder, as he rushed to meet a tall, thin person with a scholarly droop of eyes and shoulders, who came up the path between brilliant flower borders. Lorraine flung after after him an inscrutable smile—then vanished, not to reappear until very late afternoon.

Maben stared at her. She was transfigured. Not a curl, hardly a wave broke the sweep of her red-golden crown. She had banished every dimple, gentled her dancing feet to a softer rhythm. All in white, clinging and vaporous, she seemed to float rather than walk across grass already cool with dew. Lifting her head deerlike from her low garden seat, she smiled up at Wainright, a smile of primal allurement, saying softly: "Now is the time for wonder stories. You must tell me one—the one I most care to hear."

"What is it?" he asked.

"You promised to tell it," anxiously.

"If I know it," he said indulgently, in his best elder brother voice.

Lorraine smiled again. "If not you—who does?" she murmured. "It is the story of yourself—tell it from the very beginning."

Wainright gasped. Has a minute before he would have sworn to himself and walked off. Now instead he flung himself on the turf, set his chin in his palms—and made the beginning of the end.

* * * * * * *

It was a profound social observer who said: "There are no such troublesome ghosts at maturity as the uncommitted sins of our youth." Wainright proved the saying. His youth had been hard and driving, untouched by merry dalliances, unsweetened by saving follies. Naturally his ghost dancing made him a spectacle for gods and men. But he cared nothing for that. Men might scoff, women sneer: all he wanted was to bathe himself in the sunlight of Lorraine's eyes and let her gentle feet dance over his heart if they chose.

Maben tried rescues many and various, partly on his own account, partly also because of real friendliness. But one of them got him anywhere. He dared not risk open expostulation—the habit of reverence was too strong in him. Lorraine would neither talk nor listen to him—no more than she would to her mother or the minister.

Now and then she held chuckling conferences with her father—who never since the day she was born had seen anything wrong in her. But even he at length grew, not anxious, but compassionate. "Put 'im out of misery gently, honey," he counseled.

"When you don't want a fish throw him back, instead of leaving him flopping and messing up the bank."

A cryptic saying—perhaps it was in obedience to it that a month after Wainright's beguilement Lorraine again sat in the low chair, bending toward him on the grass at her feet. But instead of saying anything she spread her hands, palms downward—palms all pink and satin-smooth, melting into round baby wrists. Wainright caught them—she did not draw them away. As he made to lay one against his cheek she said softly: "Pity they are so smooth and weak—they quite spoil my type."

"Nothing can spoil your type, whatever it may be," Wainright murmured, trying to kiss a wrist. She drew it gently away, saying roguishly: "Fie! You are not going back on yourself, surely! Remember—you called me a dimpled milkmaid!"

"So I did!" Wainright said sitting up suddenly. "Where's Maben, I wonder!"

"Here," said Maben looming through the dusk. "But don't swear—there's a pair of us. She's going to marry Heath Maclay next month."

WATER MOCCASIN HIS CATCH

Truthful Fisherman Tells Rather Remarkable Story of an Experience He Had.

Here's a fish story that is not a fish story. It's a snake story. It comes from a fisherman's lips in a time when snake stuff is supposed to be unobtainable. Moreover, it comes from a truthful fisherman's lips. Therefore, behold the marvel:

Herman Schlender went fishing on Cicero creek above Noblesville. He threw out a minnow bait, and dropped off to sleep. When he awakened he saw his line was pretty well out. He began drawing it in, but it soon drew taut, caught on a snag outstream. Schlender noticed that the line apparently led from the snag to the bank. He walked over to a tree on the bank to observe more closely and saw a water moccasin fast on his hook.

Some time during his sleep the snake hooked itself, swam ashore, crawled around the tree three times and so entangled the line that it would go no further.—Los Angeles Times.

New Use for Flivver.

Fred Hawkins, a farmer in southern Thayer county, Nebraska, has discovered a new use for the flivver. Grasshoppers are plentiful in this section and it is necessary to kill them off now before they can lay their eggs. He attaches to the front of his car a trap-like device made on the principle of a vacuum cleaner. It takes in a 30-foot swath and will function at any speed up to 40 miles an hour. He has cleaned 500 acres of alfalfa by this device and gathered in about three-fourths of a ton of hoppers in the once over.—Sioux City Tribune.

Greek Harbor Rising From Sea.

The remarkable tilting of Crete within historical times has been lately described by Professor J. L. Myres in a Royal Geographical society discussion. The eastern half of the island has sunk and the western has risen, and as a consequence the ancient quays and harbor works at Hierapetras are submerged, while at the west end of the island the Greek harbor of Phalasarna has been entirely lifted out of the water, making it possible to walk about on the dry floor of the ancient inlet.

Give Your Hens Needed Energy

"Energy!—power, force, vigor, efficiency." That's what the dictionary says. Some folks call it "vim, pep, punch, kick." But whatever the name, it's the thing your hens must have in order to do a full day's work every day—in order to digest enough food to maintain their bodies and regularly shell out the high-priced, profit-bringing eggs.

Perfect health and great energy go together. You can easily make your flock healthy, vigorous, energetic, by adding to any good ration. The reason is plain. This great poultry tonic and conditioner is a natural health-builder. It makes the hen-machine work right—prevents a break-down from some part going wrong. It helps the good layers to do better—it turns loafers into layers.

If you have used the genuine Pratts Poultry Regulator you know this. If you haven't, it will pay you to let your birds prove it—at our risk. A start right now—today—means money for you.

Pratts Roup Tablets

(or Powder) should be put in the drinking water occasionally to protect your flock against dangerous colds and deadly roup. These diseases check laying—may kill the layers. Prevention is best. You can depend on this preparation to overcome these troubles if they appear. It's a good business to regularly use it. You can't lose—because

PANAMA CANAL SHOWS PROFIT

Closes the Best Year, Financially, in Its Six Years of Operation.

MARKED GROWTH IN TRAFFIC

General Harding, Governor of Canal, in Report Predicts Revenue of Over $6,000,000 Annually Soon.

Washington.—The Panama canal has closed the best year, financially, in its six years of operation, with an excess of $2,587,590 in revenue over the expense of operation and maintenance.

Brig. Gen. Chester Harding, governor of the Panama canal, predicted in his annual report to the secretary of war, that within a reasonable period of normal world conditions, the canal will earn an actual profit on its cost, which has been $366,650,000, exclusive of expenditures for its military and naval defense. In the meantime, the general added, the canal is performing an important commercial service by stimulating American trade with the west coast of South America and the Orient. More than 25 per cent of the cargo handled through the canal since its opening was in transit between the United States and South America, and 14½ per cent was between the Atlantic coast of the United States and the Orient.

Traffic Has Increased.

Within the six years of operation, General Harding's report said, there has been a marked increase in traffic through the canal notwithstanding the fact that the World war interfered with the normal development of ocean-going commerce. After the entry of the United States into the war there was a decrease in commercial traffic, due to the diversion of certain lines of ships to the transatlantic service, but this was more than offset by the increase in traffic growing out of the war, chiefly on account of the development of the nitrate trade with the Pacific coast of South America.

Discussing the amount of money expended by the United States on the canal, Governor Harding said:

"In the year 2,745 vessels passed through the canal, of which 2,478 were commercial transits. Tolls and other revenues amounted to $8,935,871, while current expenses of operation and maintenance totaled to $6,548,272. The excess of revenue this year reduced to $2,231,091 the excess of expense and maintenance over revenues for the six years the canal has been in operation."

At the rate of revenue this year it is expected that by June 30, 1921, the collections for tolls and other canal revenues will exceed by $1,000,000 or more the total current expenses of operation and maintenance from the opening to that date, after which, the canal authorities argue, there should be an excess of $5,000,000 or more each year.

Auxiliary Services Utilized.

The auxiliary services of the canal have been largely utilized and are of great value in carrying out the policy of making it attractive in all of the incidental services that are considered by shipping interests in routing their vessels, General Harding said, adding that it has not been the purpose to make larger profits on these activities, but rather to regulate the charges so as safely to cover the cost. From these miscellaneous services the receipts for the year were: Coal, $6,032,578; water, $55,412; oil, groceries and miscellaneous supplies, $1,274,566, and mechanical repairs to ships, $3,863,933.

Angry Farmer Hanged Balky Horse; Fined $25

As a punishment for balking, Edward Byrne, a farmer of Crum Elbow, N. Y., tied one end of a rope around the neck of one of his horses, threw the rope over a tree limb and fastened the other end to the bridle of another horse, which became frightened and pulled so hard that it strangled its mate to death. Members of the S. P. C. A. investigated and Byrne, pleading guilty, was fined $25.

MILLION A YEAR CLASS LOST 74

Internal Revenue Statistics, However, Show Decrease in Taxable Incomes.

AVERAGE TAX PAID $254.85

Personal Returns Filed During 1918 Numbered 4,425,144, and Tax, Both Normal and Surtax, Was $1,127,721,835.

Washington, D. C.—Despite the loss of 74 members of the country's million-a-year income class, the taxable income of the United States increased in 1918 by over $2,272,000,000, as compared with 1917, according to the income statistics issued by the bureau of internal revenue.

Income reported for 1918 amounted to $15,924,630,335, against about $13,700,000,000 in 1917, though 141 persons filed returns for incomes of $1,000,000 or over in 1917 and only 67 in 1918.

Average Tax Paid $254.85.

Personal returns filed during 1918 numbered 4,425,114 and the tax, both normal and surtax, amounted to $1,127,721,835, the average tax for each individual being $254.85. As compared with 1917 a growth of 962,234 was shown in the number of returns filed. The increase in the total tax was $434,228,881.

Returns for incomes of $500,000 to $1,000,000 were filed by 178 persons, while 1,516,838 persons filed returns for incomes from $1,000 to $2,000. Incomes from $2,000 to $3,000 were shown on 1,406,878 returns and there were 610,695 returns on $3,000 to $4,000 a year incomes.

For incomes of $5,000 to $10,000, 319,306 returned and from incomes of $10,000 to $15,000 there were 69,902 returns. More than 30,000 persons made returns on incomes from $15,000 to $20,000, and 16,000 on incomes from $20,000 to $25,000, while 9,996 persons reported incomes of from $50,000 to $100,000 and 2,358 made returns for incomes between $100,000 and $150,000.

Those Paying the Most.

The largest tax, amounting to $147,428,655, was collected on incomes from $50,000 to $100,000, with $142,448,679 collected on incomes from $10,000 to $25,000 coming next. Incomes between $1,000 and $2,000 paid $26,481,000.

The number of wives filing separate returns from their husbands was 35,942, the income represented being $333,218,749.

Of the industrial groups from which income was derived agricultural and related industries led, with 372,336 returns, reporting a total net income of $1,122,532,163.

Income derived from investments for the year was $4,847,014,000. Rents and royalties paid $975,670,666; interest on bonds, notes, etc, including fiduciaries and foreign sources, $1,403,485,691; and dividends, $2,468,749,244.

Rawlings, Wyo.—An onion diet for four days, without water, was all William Smith, convict, could stand. When he left his hiding place over the ceiling of the prison bakery for a drink of water and a breath of air he was captured and returned to his cell. Smith escaped from the prison by placing a dummy in his cell to deceive the guards. He climbed through a small hole in the bakery ceiling. For four days Smith suffered as the hot sun beating upon the prison roof made his hiding place almost unbearable from heat. A small bunch of onions was his only sustenance.

LANDSLIDE COSTS A MILLION

Nine Steamshovels Battle to Keep the Railroad Tracks Clear at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Damage, estimated by engineers to vary from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, will result from the great slide of earth and stone which for the last two weeks has been steadily moving down the hillside from Bigelow boulevard to the downtown passenger terminal of the Pennsylvania railroad here.

Nine steam shovels are working day and night to move the earth, as it reaches the railroad tracks, and approximately 5,000 tons are sent out on special trains every 24 hours.

The slide began when the city attempted to straighten a curve in the boulevard which follows the hillside high above the railroad terminal and connects the business section of the city with the east end residence district.

Lightkeeper 72 Hours Alone With Dead Wife

Midland, Ont.—Held to his post by the menacing storm which raged on Lake Huron, though nearly prostrated by the death of his wife, for 22 years his sole companion, Alfred H. Griffiths, keeper of the lighthouse on "Giant's Tomb," stood solitary vigil over his lights and his dead for three days and nights.

After the storm subsided, he summoned help from the mainland, 12 miles away.

Scientists Puzzled Over Latest Freak of Ocean, Caught Off British Columbia.

New York.—Capture off the coast of British Columbia of a humpback whale with two hind limbs became known here when the bones of the unique appendages arrived at the American Museum of Natural History.

Scientists cudgeled their brains and concluded the legs might have been a singular reversion to primitive type.

Back in prehistoric ages, they said, whales may have strutted about on land. But, so far as they know, no other whale with bones outside the body has ever been seen by man.

There was no reason for the legs on the whale found off the British Columbia coast. It couldn't walk on them, as they were but four feet long, while the whale weighed several tons. It couldn't use them for swimming.

Athletic Doings

The West Side Church League, under the supervision of the Recreation Department and under the leadership of "Cap" Hoover, opened its season Tuesday night at Glenwood Shelter House.

Ten teams will be represented in the league, which includes West Broad, Glenwood Tri-Mus, Glenwood Kap-Sig, St. Johns, Holy Family, Friends, Gift Street, St. Paul, Hoge Memorial and West Park.

Before the games short talks were given by Councilman Milton Westlake and Frank Holycross. An orchestra from Friends' Church added stirring music to the occasion.

The games were hard fought throughout, and from the turnout of material, the season in this league promises to be one of the best in the seven years of its existence, and the attendance of about 350 to 400 spectators shows that the West Siders intend to support their various teams to the limit.

The winners of the three games scores approximately the same number of points over the leading teams, the scores being: Gift St. 20, Friends 10, Glenwood 48, West Park 12, St. Paul 17, Hoge Memorial 11.

Mr. M. W. Westlake was chosen as President of Columbus Amateur Base Ball Association this week.

Notice—Election of officers West Side Athletic Club, Friday evening, Jan. 7th, at 8 P. M. Every member requested to attend. Location, 1346 W. Broad, which is the new club room.

At the meeting of the Hilltop Athletic Club, Tuesday night, Mr. Richard Jennings was elected president.

A birthday party was given on December 30 to Leurs and Ruth West at their home, 505 Waren Ave., in honor of their eighth birthday. Ice cream and cake were served and many beautiful presents were received. Those present were: James and Hugh Hugnes, David Sweeney, Earl White, Nelson Calendine, Laurence George, Frank Emrich, Lewis White, Stephen and Earnest West, Frank Holyerosa, Dorothy Ritter, Mildred George, Ruth Wes., Florena Layni, Mildred and Mable France, Betty Barrell, Louisa and Doris Hoon, Dorothy Burgert, Leota and Beulah West.

PRE DESTINATION

In the Hilltop Record of December 23rd, my friend "David" has used his clear writing pen again on the subject of Predestination. If I were as gifted in writing as he, I am sure he would have gotten my ideas more nearly as I intended them.

First, David brings forward another strong array of scriptural quotations. He will recall that I admitted that there were many passages in the Bible teaching Predestination. I will go further and admit that the main Jewish conceptions of God and of the attitude of their God to their race not only lead logically to, but actually teach, the doctrine of Predestination. Paul, the writer of Romans, was filled with these conceptions as the result of sitting at the feet of Gamaliel.

Because Christ taught opposite conceptions He was not received by His own. For that reason also Paul persecuted Him at first. The marvel of it all is that he ever became a follower of Jesus Christ. It is no wonder that he carried over many of the old conceptions and injected them into his interpretations of the Christ. What I would like to see "David" proceed to prove is this: That the passages of scripture supporting predestination are the mountain-peaks of truth instead of the ones supporting Free Will or Choice; that they more nearly conform to the life of Jesus Christ as He went about seeking the LOST, and even dying to save the LOST. (Note this word LOST. In the predestination theory the chosen ones are never LOST, or can be); that these predestination passages more surely interpret the spirit of Christ's teachings and revelations of the Father; and that they stir in men greater initiative and activity, resulting in greater development, than the passages supporting Free Will or Choice.

Second, David intimates that I said God turned loose a created Devil who is a marvel of efficiency and power. Afterward He turned loose created man to be the prey of this Devil. I said that if the doctrine of predestination be true then there is no need of a Devil. What is the origin of this Devil according to scripture? He was once one of the angels of light. He used the prerogative bestowed upon him in creation and chose to throw to the winds the leadership of God. He chose to be his own master rather than have God as his Lord and King. That was the cause of his fall from the heavenly courts. That is how he came to be the angel of darkness. That is how any man comes to be lost—choosing to be his own law rather than follow God's laws.

I did say that God limits Himself in His dealings with men. He does not limit Himself in His power to help the man who will choose Him as his Helper; who will turn to Him for guidance and strength; who will make God his God. God does not turn man loose to "root hog or die." He sumply refuses to save man willy nilly. He refuses to impose upon him His imperious will. He is ever "mindful of man," ever has him in mind, setting before him the merits of the right and the uselessness of the wrong; showing him by a thousand ways the paths which lead to the Glory World; calling to him to look up and to walk up.

The predestinarian says that God does it all. The Free Will doctrine teaches that man in the light of facts must choose—that the supreme choice is to choose to form a partnership with God; that together God and man work out the matter of salvation.

How does my congenial disputant "David" interpret the parable of the lost sheep? Let him read Matt. 8:14 and make reply. "Paul."

Did you attend the meeting of the Personal Workers' Class at the home of Mrs. Brokaw Monday night? If not you missed a rare good time. Every one present was filled with enthusiasm and plans for the year 1921. Twenty-one members responded to roll call. Every one of these heartily pledged themselves to earn one dollar before our next meeting.

The place is at the home of Mrs. Burnside, 78 S. Richardson Ave., February 7th. You are to bring to that meeting the dollar you have earned and tell how you earned it. Will that be an interesting meeting? Just come with your dollar and see. This is not all. On Thursday, Jan. 13, the class is to go to Mrs. Lears, 78 N. Eureka Ave. to quilt. Come in the morning and bring a box lunch and your thimble. You say, Are you working entirely for money? Oh no! Many things were planned to try to brighten the lives of the "shut ins."

Old members, come back. We miss you. We need you. New members we welcome you; we love you. Women of Hoge Memorial Church who are not members of this class, we extend to you a cordial welcome and a hearty invitation to attend our Bible study class every Sabbath morning at 8:15. Come.

Lest you forget, cut this out for the dates and places of meeting this month.

Troop Number 21 of The Boy Scouts of America, which meets at the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church, enjoyed New Year's eve and Saturday in camp. Eleven of the thirteen members left the Hilltop shortly after noon on Friday, for the log cabin of Troop No. 26 at Flint, near Glenmary Park. A real watch party was observed and the New Year was given a rousing good welcome. The next day was spent in Scout work and games. After breaking camp, the scouts hiked to Worthington, two miles distant, and finished the trip via C. D. & M. Traction. Those who enjoyed the trip were: Raymond Kadel, Scoutmaster, Robert Nowell, Patrol leader, Fred Dean, Wendell Hooper, Ralph Montgomery and Jack Merriman of the Eagle patrol; William Cussins, Patrol leader, John Bickham, James Finley, Heber Kellar, Cecil Neff and Raymond Simson, of the Fox Patrol. Troop No. 21 has only been organized about three months, but they are doing real scout work, and are bound to make a name for themselves and the Hilltop.

A very pleasant New Years party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Glick of Malinta, O., was had at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Glick, 497 S. Harris Avenue. There were present beside the honored guests, the aged father, Noah Glick, aged 88 years, Mrs. Mary Haffey, Thaddeus Glick, wife and son Emmett of Canal Winchester, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hain and son Milton of Ashville, Mrs. Sophia Glick and daughter Bessie of 238½ S. Dakota Ave., Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Glick, family, and G. W. Peters, 62 S. Warren Ave., Otto Glick, wife and son Roberts, 853 Penn. Ave., and Mr. Harry Doty and son Herschel, 53 N. Oakley Ave.

The Women's Society of Hill Crest will meet at the home of Mrs. Montgomery, 177 N. Wheatland, Tuesday, Jan. 11, at 2 P. M. All the ladies are very urgently requested to attend. An interesting program has been arranged. Mrs. Fullerton and Mrs. Goddard of the First Baptist Church will speak, giving a report of the East Central District Missionary meeting. Mrs. Howard will sing.

A series of revival meetings is in progress at the United Evangelical church under the pastorate of Rev. Seesholtz, whose plain terse messages are not lacking in convincing properties. The Sunday evening subject, "What Must I Do to be Saved," was taught in such straightforward language that no person could fail to grasp the main theme: Belief on the Lord Jesus is nothing short of mockery unless accompanied with service and obedience. On Tuesday evening his discourse on "Revival Hindrances" conveyed to his congregation the truth that inconsistent living was the root of an unsuccessful campaign in a revival.

These meetings will continue for the following four weeks and it is hoped a goodly number will be in attendance at each service and much good will result attesting the laborer's fruits.

KING SPLITS ROYAL ESTATE

Spanish Monarch to Parcel Out 2,500 Acres of Land in Small Farm Plots.

Madrid.—Instructions have been given by King Alfonso for the formation of an agricultural syndicate, the object of which will be the parceling out of the king's royal estate at El Pardo, nine miles west of this city, for cultivation under the auspices of the Catholic Agrarian federation.

The property contains nearly 2,500 acres and will be divided into small plots.

A plan has been devised which will permit laborers to acquire the land allotted to them.

"The Yellow Ostrich Feather."

Booneville, Ky.—Nancy and Cynthia Hale, aged fourteen and fifteen, respectively, who cook and wash and sew for six little motherless brothers and sisters, have made a quilt which they have christened "The Yellow Ostrich Feather." Neighbors thought so much of it that it was sent to Louisville to be sold for the benefit of women of the mountains.

MOUNTAIN GOAT WAS READY

And Eagle Knew Better Than to Force the Issue With Such an Adversary.

"The writer once witnessed a fight between a golden eagle and a full grown mountain goat. This fight took place on a high divide in the Bull river country in British Columbia," says Charles S. Smith in an article in Boys' Life, entitled "The Rocky Mountain Sheep at Home."

"I was stalking the goat at the time for the purposes of taking some photographs as close up as I could get, and was working my way cautiously from rock to rock, keeping concealed from the goat, who was feeding on a little flat space on the top of the mountain. As I peered around the projecting point of a crag I saw the goat suddenly wheel and look toward a small point sticking up on top of the ridge and there, coming over the top of the point was a very large golden eagle, flying just above the surface of the ground and coming directly at the goat. The goat stood with head lowered and when the eagle came within about ten feet of him, it suddenly swooped into the air about fifteen or twenty feet high, turned completely over and dropped like a plummet at the goat. I wondered what the goat would do, but evidently he had it all figured out, for as the eagle descended he reared on his hind feet, stood straight up and slashed his head from side to side, his horns describing a circle in the air, their sharp points upward; the old eagle evidently knew better than to try to drop on a thing of that sort or to try to seize it, so he caught himself in his swift descent and volplaned over the side of the ridge; here over a deep, dark canyon he circled several times, the goat standing watching until he disappeared over the shoulder of the mountain."

Use for Knot Holes.

That a use has been found for the knot hole, which is regarded generally by lumbermen as of about as much value as the squeal of the hog, is vouched for in a story published by the American Lumberman.

Chicago packing houses are said to use all of the hog but the squeal, but a Yankee has gone this one better. Taking a piece of board one inch thick which has been cut off in some factory because of the knot hole which the piece contains, the Yankee squares the pieces with the knot hole centered, sets it upon a one-half inch wooden base, glues the two together, smooths the surfaces of the piece and gives it a bath of varnish. Behold, the piece is a wooden novelty suitable for the desk as a receptacle for paper clips, fasteners, pins, or the like!

Even Tempered.

She was well advanced in years, and had always been a fretful soul—never happy except when she had something to worry about. Notwithstanding, she was well liked by all who knew her.

One day, to a niece who was a frequent visitor at her home, she said: "Berta, do you know that I believe I am the most even-tempered woman in the world."

"Why, Aunt Manda," said the niece in unfeigned surprise, "how you do talk!"

"Yes," said she, "I believe I am the most even-tempered woman in the world, 'cause I'm as mad as the devil all the time."

Baby Recovers Voice.

Galesburg, Kan.—Helen Reed, two-year-old daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Reed of this city, has recovered her voice, after a tracheotomy operation in a local hospital. The little girl lost her voice five months ago, after what seemed to be an ordinary attack of tonsilitis. An X-ray picture revealed a wire paper clip in the trachea, or wind pipe, just below the vocal cords. An opening was made in the trachea in order to insert a silver tube through which the baby could breathe. The paper clip was removed and the little patient is now well.

PEN SHRINE TO DEAD EMPEROR

Strange Ceremony in Japan, Including Vaudeville, Marks Two Days of Worship.

BUILDING COST $10,000,000

Impressive Manifestations of Loyalty Featured the Solemn Shinto Ceremonies—Voices Silent During Worship.

Tokyo.—After six years' labor and an expenditure estimated at $10,000,000, the national shrine to the late Emperor Mutsuhito was opened recently with solemn Shinto ceremonies, and amid impressive manifestations of loyalty. For three days the populace of Tokyo celebrated the occasion. Every street was decorated with bunting, and from the humblest door lanterns were displayed at night.

The municipality gave a flower show and open-air performances and theatrical performances in Hibiya park, but for the most part the festivities were co-operatively organized by the citizens in different wards. At hundreds of central points stages had been erected, where vaudeville shows were given and there were fireworks both night and day.

Thousands From Country.

Over 250,000 persons from the country districts visited the city during the festival.

The shrine is a typical Shinto building of plain wood, and of the simplest possible construction. The opening ceremony was attended by over 2,000 persons and officials, and lasted about three hours. The central feature was the delivery to Prince Ichijo, warder of the shrine, of the name tablets of the late emperor, and their installation in the inner sanctuary.

Prince Kujo, a relative of the emperor, delivered a commemorative oration to which Prince Ichijo replied. The shrine was thereafter opened to the public and at least 500,000 people worshiped before it during the remainder of the day.

The scene where these multitudes of people were paying their respects to the memory of the dead emperor was impressive. The main entrance to the shrine is by means of a new and very broad road about two miles in length. Along this road all the day and evening two great strings of people poured, one going to the shrine, the other returning.

The whole of this roadway was brilliantly lighted and decorated with flags and ornamental lanterns. But once the torii at the entrance to the shrine had been passed a great change came over the scene. The modern world was left behind, the gold and red ornamentation ceased and the rest of the way was made under the shade of gigantic pine trees, which might have been part of the virgin forests of old Japan.

Pilgrims were admitted in groups of about 200. Their journey ended in a small paved courtyard inclosed with a low wall. The shrine, a low, severely plain building, was opposite the gateway, and by the dim light of two large paper lanterns about a dozen white-robed priests were seen moving slowly back and forth within the doorway. They were sweeping up the coins that rained continually on the steps of the shrine.

Voices Are Silent.

Not a sound could be heard except the light hand-clapping of the worshipers calling on the enshrined spirit of the emperor. No human voice was heard. There was not even an audible prayer; in complete silence the multitude paid their respects to the spirit of Meiji and passed on.

On the two following days the shrine was again visited by hundreds of thousands, and the proceedings were enlightened by wrestling and other public entertainments near the shrine. The crown prince, on behalf of the emperor, worshiped at the shrine on the second day.

It is intended to associate the young men of Japan especially with the Meiji shrine. A huge stadium will be built in the grounds of the shrine, and it is expected that the principal athletic events of Japan will be contested there in the future.

BONES OF PILGRIMS MOVED

Taken From Canopy Over Plymouth Rock, Which Is Being Reset to Shore Level.

Plymouth, Mass.—The bones of some of the Pilgrim fathers were exposed for a time when the box in which they have been kept was taken from the canopy over Plymouth rock where it had rested since 1880.

The records do not identify the bodies, but the two relatively well-preserved skulls and other bones found in the casket are reputed to be those of members of the colony who died during the ordeal of the first winter.

The canopy is to be removed and the rock reset under conditions that will bring it again to shore level.

Heart in the Right Place.

Anderson, Ind.—Firemen hoisted a 40-foot ladder to rescue a pigeon suspended over a high ledge of St. Mary's church. The pigeon was entangled in twine. Women in the crowd which watched the rescue applauded.

Give Your Hens Needed Energy

"Energy:—power, force, vigor, efficiency." That's what the dictionary says. Some folks call it "vim, pep, punch, kick." But whatever the name, it's the thing your hens must have in order to do a full day's work every day—in order to digest enough food to maintain their bodies and regularly shell out the high-priced, profit-bringing eggs.

Perfect health and great energy go together. You can easily make your flock healthy, vigorous, energetic, by adding to any good ration. The reason is plain. This great poultry tonic and conditioner is a natural health-builder. It makes the hen-machine work right—prevents a break-down from some part going wrong. It helps the good layers to do better—it turns loafers into layers.

Pratts Poultry Regulator

If you have used the genuine Pratts Poultry Regulator you know this. If you haven't, it will pay you to let your birds prove it—at our risk. A start right now—today—means money for you.

Pratts Roup Tablets

(or Powder) should be put in the drinking water occasionally to protect your flock against dangerous colds and deadly roup. These diseases check laying—may kill the layers. Prevention is best. You can depend on this preparation to overcome these troubles if they appear. It's a good business to regularly use it. You can't lose—because

Tom Fisher's Bargain

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(© 1931, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was the large advertisement in Brown's window that was Tom Fisher's undoing. He was a young man with large ambitions and small income and he lived in confident hope that some day the income would equal the ambition, but for a while it seemed impossible for the income to keep pace with his ambition and his appetite.

"A man must eat," he told himself ruefully as he finished his breakfast and went down the street toward his little laboratory where his wonderful invention was taking form. "A man must eat and sleep and wear clothes—and have socks!" At this moment he saw the sign in Brown's window. "Silk Socks—specially priced, 59 cents pair" —"Lisle Socks—bargain, 29 cents a pair."

"The invention will be set back by 29 cents," he decided, entering the shop.

He found the socks presided over by a very demure damsel in a dark blue dress. There was a little white frill about her throat that made her look very young and she had delightful shining hair that wanted to curl and almost didn't.

"Socks? Silk or lisle—fifty-nine or twenty-nine?" she asked in a birdlike voice.

"Why do bargains always run in nines?" he asked irreverently.

She flushed. "I'm sure I don't know, but they do—and sevens and threes and ones."

"Nine is a magic number," he said. "I'll take a pair of nines."

"Fifty-nine or twenty-nine?" she inquired again.

"Which are the cheapest?" Tom, the inventor, the man of science, was losing his wits, just because a girl had such tender blue eyes and hair that almost did not curl.

"Nine Is a Magic Number."

"Twenty-nine," she said patiently, without smiling. "These are lisle thread."

"I'll take two—two pairs," he said, idiotically.

"Color?"

"Oh—anything—anything, just as long as it's black," and the wretched youth flung himself out of the store without waiting for his change. He told himself afterward that he needed that forty-two cents change—he might have bought another pair!

That night he tried on the socks and found they were too small. He was a big young man and generously proportioned. The socks must go back again. He wondered if the girl would be there—hoped she would and hoped she wouldn't, and she was.

She looked quite blankly at Tom, just as if her heart hadn't quickened at sight of him—he did not recognize her but she had gone to public school with him three years ago; she secretly admired him.

"I'm sorry, but these socks are too small," said Tom, as he stopped before her.

"You said nines," she remarked, as she pulled out a red box.

"I meant tens," he explained.

"You also forgot your change," she said, taking some money out of a stunning little box. "Forty-two cents."

"Thanks," said Tom, dropping it into his pocket.

She took down another box, picked out two pair of black socks and wrapped them up.

"Thank you," said Tom dizzily, and walked out of the store. At his laboratory he opened his bundle and found—two pairs of black silk socks. He smiled rapturously. "I'll have to take those back," he muttered with a miserable attempt at vexation.

It was lunch time then, and he stopped at a nearby cafeteria for a bite. Tom's appetite was robust and he picked up various plates of delectable viands on his way to a vacant table. As he set down his tray he saw that a girl had sat down. The Girl, with a tray containing crackers, a bowl of milk and a small cake. "Bless her dear heart; she's starving herself," he worried as he hastily swallowed his meal. After a day or two he went back to the store.

The girl was there. She was wearing a little blue ruffle around her throat, and one strand of her bright hair had really managed to curl. She blushed a little when she saw him.

"I'm sorry," he declared mendaciously. "But these socks are silk—I bought lisle, you know."

"I made that mistake," she admitted, as she substituted another pair for the silk ones. "It is too bad you had to come again."

"I did not mind—not at all," he said emphatically, and this time she smiled at him, and when she smiled as she turned around to put the red box back on the shelf he was reminded of school boy days and a little curly-haired girl facing the blackboard, reaching up to write something. The chalk had dropped from her fingers, and he recalled the frightened look on her face as it dropped. But his deft hand caught it in midair, and her bird-like voice had whispered a thank you.

Now he leaned across the counter with glowing face. "Say," he said, "you're Nannie Lane, aren't you?"

She gave him a startled look, but she nodded. "Nancy Lane, now," she said.

"Remember me?"

"Yes."

"Remember the chalk?"

She dimpled a little and nodded again.

"Live in the same house?"

"Yes."

"I'm coming to see you! I know your brother Sam."

"All right," she said in quivering voice, and he shot out of the store, nearly upsetting a rigidly smiling floorwalked, and at the same time apologizing to a wax figure wearing a palm beach suit and minus a head.

Of course you want to know how it turned out. Tom married Nancy Lane and of course the invention was a success, and Tom's income expanded to meet every expense that came along. The Fishers trade exclusively in Brown's department store, for Tom says jovially: "Wonderful bargains there—got my wife there; yes, sirree!"

...OR PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS

Wonderful Progress Made by the National Committee in That Direction.

WORK IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Conservation of Vision Classes Growing in Number as Educators Discover It Is Practicable to Open Classes in Small Cities.

New York.—More than 4,000 supporters of the work of the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness were reported at the sixth annual meeting in this city. This report shows a remarkable increase from the 65 charter members in 1915. The work for the last year showed much progress for the conservation of vision in the public schools and colleges.

The report continues:

"Conservation of vision classes in the public schools are growing in number as educators have discovered, through the efforts of our committee, that it is practicable to open such classes even in cities smaller than the largest. The present census of such classes is 62, of which 12 have been established within the last year. So far as known, the classes which now support such classes include Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Washington. There is no more hopeful part of our work than this, and we are proud to have contributed a considerable part to the establishment of these ...ses.

considerable work has been done by them toward eliminating this cause of needless blindness."

H. F. J. Porter of the Society for Electrical Development delivered the annual address. The subject of Mr Porter's address was "Through Life's Windows." He showed the great dependence of man on healthy and well-cared for eyes, which he compared to a pair of motion picture cameras. "Indeed, the motion picture camera is made in imitation of the eye," he continued. "The better the condition of the lens and the better the illumination of the object the better the result of the photographer's effort. Just so with the more perfect instrument the eye, and it behooves every one to see that his eyes are kept in good condition and free from eyestrain due to improper lighting. As it takes a longer time to take a good picture in poor light than in good light, so it takes longer to obtain a good conception of what is before us with poor eyesight and in poor light. Employers are wise who provide against accidents from poor lighting."

Return Hero Medal.

Connellsville, Pa.—While a negro woman held up Mrs. Annabelle Gemas along the West Penn street car line, near the Gemas home, two negroes searched her, took her pocketbook, containing about $30, but returning a gold service medal which the woman's husband, the late George Gemas, had been awarded for service in the Spanish-American war. The trio halted Mrs. Gemas with the request, "Please give us your money, lady."

Something Funny, All Right.

Tiltonville, O.—There was something funny about the chicken dinner served Mayor Charles Beswick. He was guest of honor at a stag party where the chicken was served in liberal portions. On returning home Beswick found that 16 of his choice pullets had disappeared.

Blindness in Children.

"The chief cause of blindness among children is due to ophthalmia neonatorum. The percentage this year is 22.5 per cent as compared with 15.7 per cent for last year of those who have newly entered the residential schools. This disease is an inflammation of the eye usually contracted by newly born children. The percentage is even higher in the public classes. We have reason to regret this unfortunate relapse. This is the first year but one that has not shown a considerable decrease, but we are quite sure that our figures are more accurate than in the years gone by, and possibly some of this increase is due to the greater accuracy of our reports. We must faithfully and persistently pursue our fight against babies' sore eyes and continue to reduce the number of children who need not have been blind.

"Trachoma's victims (one of the most dreaded of contagious eye diseases) have been discovered in several states where it was not suspected this scourge could be prevalent. Not less than nine states have during this year initiated or renewed their fight against the spread of trachoma. In Illinois, particularly, there has been a marshaling of the forces for systematic operation in the stamping out of this disease. In all cases it has been the function of this committee to serve as a helpful agency in this work.

Caused by Wood Alcohol.

"Wood alcohol poisoning still causes much blindness through drinking this substance masquerading as a familiar stimulant. This condition was not a surprise to us, and we had issued a warning which was used throughout the United States. Much activity resulted because of the newspaper accounts of the dreadful situation, and Run Big Bill in "Libre" Taxi.

Mexico City.—In the belief that they were graciously being extended the freedom of the city, several Texas excursionists halted a taxicab marked "Libre" and toured the city half a day.

When presented with a rather large bill they protested, telling the driver his car was labeled "Free" and was part of an entertainment committee's courtesies.

The bill was paid when they were reliably informed that every taxicab "at liberty" or "ready to hire" is marked "Libre."

Buried in the Wrong Town.

Deaths

Infant Shaffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shaffer, died Monday at the home of his parents, 130 Lechner Ave. Burial in Green Lawn Cemetery by the North Side Undertaking Company.

Robert Walter, the 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs John W Bauman, 198 S. Wheatland, died of appendicitis Tuesday night at Grant Hospital. He leaves his parents, one brother and one sister. Funeral at 2 p. m. Thursday. Burial in Green Lawn Cemetery.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Home Producers Milk Co. held at the Odd Fellows Hall last week, the following officers were elected: President, H. R. Gibson; Vice-Pres., Albert Seeley; Secretary and Treasurer, L. C. Cline; Directors, Harry Linebaugh, S. S. Chambers, Albert Seeley, Willis Cline, Antone Patzer, Wilber Barnhart, H. R. Gibson. 125 were present at the meeting.

The company declared a 10 per cent dividend paid for 1918-1919.

The following was received from the Literary Digest Co., in reply to the amount sent them on their fund for European starving children:

"Literary Digest Child Feeding Fund" hereby acknowledges receipt, with thanks, of the sum of $40.25, friends on the Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio. Your contribution will be duly acknowledged in the first available issue of The Literary Digest.

The Rev. C. E. Mechling conducted services at St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church last Sunday morning and evening, conducting holy communion service in the morning. He was greeted with an attentive and appreciative congregation at both services.

Is your pocket knife good? Keen Kutter Knives are. You find them at M. H. Prior Hdw. Co.

"He told me all things whatsoever I did" thus spoke the woman concerning Christ's teaching at the well, and truly does Rev. Seesholtz paint a word picture of your life and mine. "When that one you have led to Jesus meets you at Heaven's gate and introduces you to Jesus, say you will be more than repaid for the sacrifices made." We believe there are 1000 homes in the vicinity of St. Paul's United Evangelical church whose forefathers walked more miles than you live squares from the church, and we know they did not hear more interesting or helpful messages. Try it just one evening, then decide for yourself.

Who Buys Your Product

No matter if you are a farmer selling crops, a worker in a factory, mine, railroad, store, etc., selling your labor somebody else must buy what you have to sell, or you lose.

Who is the buyer but yourself?

You consume food, wool, cotton, which the farmer raises; clothing, shoes, stoves, coal, furniture, etc., which some of you produce.

How can you keep on working unless you keep on buying? You can't.

Do not buy what you do not need—that's extravagant and wasteful.

Keep on buying what you need now—or the man who would buy the things you depend on for a living cannot buy.

Each helps the other.

Are you doing your share?

Keep on buying—carefully—but now.

Boys and Cigarettes

On Oct., 27th the principal of the Greene School, 36th and Paulina Sts., Chicago, asked that one of our representatives call with reference to dealers selling cigarettes to minors. Following is copy of the report rendered;

John H—, age 14, 3rd grade, has smoked since he was 7. "I knew that something was wrong with me because I never passed my examinations," said John. I didn't sleep and I couldn't eat. I just wanted a cigarette. If I didn't have the money I picked them up on the streets. I was sick to my stomach every day and my teacher said it was because I smoked cigarettes. When I sold papers I had money. One summer I smoked fifty packages of cigarettes. I always bought them from Mrs. N. on Ashland."

And the pathetic little dwarf (3-ft-4-in) pale, emaciated and dull eyed, a victim of ignorant parents and commercialism, went back to his class room, and Walter B— came forward age 11. Walter has been attending school regularly is only in the 2nd grade. Walter, pale and emaciated insisted that he picked his cigarettes up on the streets, but a classmate interrupted—"No he doesn't I have seen him buy them at Nick's. In spite of his befogged brain, which would not get him beyond the second grade, Walter was well versed in protecting the law-breaker.

HAS LIVELY EVENING

Alleged Thief Leaps 40 Feet and Lands on Auto.

Then He Tries to Take 30-Foot Plunge to Railroad Tracks, but Policeman Gets Him.

New York.—This is how Alex Urbanuk, twenty-six, an unemployed tailor, accused of having robbed a woman of her pocketbook containing $10, spent an evening.

First returned the purse containing the money at the Bridge Plaza elevated station in Long Island city, where he is accused of perpetrating it, when his alleged victim confronted him.

Ran when his accuser, Mrs. Mary Howell of 322 Crescent street screamed for the police.

Leaped from the end of the station platform to the tracks.

Made record speed for four blocks when pursued by a special policeman and a crowd of men.

At a point over the Diagonal street viaduct he almost ran into an approaching train.

To save himself he leaped 40 feet for the street.

He landed on top of a swift passing automobile and was bounced off to the roadway.

He saw Mounted Patrolman Kavanaugh coming toward him, ran to the railing of the viaduct and was about to leap to the tracks of the Long Island railroad, a distance of 40 feet, when he was intercepted.

Taken to Hunter's Point police station he was finger-printed.

Suffering from shock and other injuries, he was removed to St. John's hospital.

Here he was found to have sustained a bad injury to his left leg and shoulder and possibly internal injuries.

'OLIVER TWIST'S' JAIL CLOSED

Cruel Pot of Famous St. George's Workhouse in London Goes to Museum.

London.—St George's workhouse just south of London bridge, where Oliver Twist had the audacity to ask for a second helping of thin gruel, has been closed by the poor law authorities and the inmates have been transferred elsewhere.

The gruel of which Dickens' child hero and his fellow sufferers partook was made in a copper cauldron, which is to be presented to the Southwark borough council's museum.

"Floating Crematory" for Japs.

Tokyo—Tokyo will soon have a "floating crematory," the first of its kind in Japan.

Two specially constructed vessels of 150 tons each, with facilities for cremating 30 bodies at a time, will be used. The vessels will be anchored at a wharf at Shibura, and, after funeral services have been held on board, they will leave for a point about seven miles off the bay for the cremation.

Revival services are still in progress at St. Paul's United Evangelical church. While the small congregations are not convincing of any great interest being manifested on the part of Christian people, the pastor, Rev. Seesholts, continues to pour out his spiritual messages toward reaching he hearts of mankind through the word of God.
His sermons contain such plain and practical statements as the following. "Tithing and consecrated service that God's promises to his children are many times given at the altar of sacrifice.
The Altar is the place where God and man meet.
Humility is one of, if not the most convincing factors of religious virtues.
The church stands as a monument to the memory of Jesus.
The pastor and his faith-membership will appreciate a goodly attendance at these services.

INCREASE OF ALIENS

Net Growth in Immigrant Population for Year 193,514.

Total of 633,371 Sought Entrance to United States in Last Fiscal Year.

Washington.—Establishment of machinery overseas in co-operation with foreign governments through which aliens before breaking up their homes may determine whether they will be admitted to the United States and legislative consideration of the proposals of the second industrial conference are outstanding recommendations in the annual report of Secretary of Labor Wilson.

The report shows that 633,371 aliens arrived in this country during the last fiscal year, as compared with 237,021 the year before. Of the total arrivals, 11,795 were excluded at the ports where they sought to enter. Of those arriving 430,001 are classed as immigrant aliens and 195,575 as nonimmigrant aliens. Departures of aliens totaled 428,062 including 288,315 immigrant aliens and 139,747 nonimmigrant aliens, making the net increase in the immigrant population for the year 193,514.

Japanese admitted number 16,174, as compared with 14,904 the year before. The total number of Japanese departing is placed at 15,633, making the report says, the indicated increase in Japanese population, 521. Of those admitted, 9,193 were males and 6,981 females.

Besides the immigrants turned back at the port of arrival, 2,762 were ordered deported during the year on departmental warrants, as compared with 3,068 the year before. Of those deported, 489 were classed as anarchists and criminals. In addition 740 others are awaiting deportation.

During the year 519,003 aliens took the initial or final steps toward citizenship.

Mr. Wilson urges legislative action to carry out the recommendations of the second industrial conference, proposing joint organizations of management and employees for prevention of industrial disputes and a comprehensive plan for adjusting such disputes when they occur.

DIGGERS TURN UP TREASURE

Sewer Workers Find Collection of Rings and Watches in a Boston Slime Pit.

Boston.—A sewer gang quit work at noon the other day with a valuable treasure trove. In the slime of an old pit near the Quincy house they had found three gold rings, coins, watches and other valuables.

Hotel employees suggested that the hotel had a claim on the articles, as the property probably of guests of bygone days. The police suspected that they were part of the loot of thieves. But when the men showed coins dating back to 1787, stamped with a pine tree on one side and "Massachusetts" on the other, they insisted that the statute of limitations made the property theirs.

With the ancient coins they found beer checks, which the foreman of the gang said he intended to keep with a "pine tree shilling," as a souvenir of the past. The foreman estimated that the deposit of mud in which the valuables were found had not been disturbed in 75 years.

It's No Fault of Mint If You're Shy of Coin

Washington.—The mints established a record in coinage during the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of Director Ray Baker made public. A total of 809,500,000 coins were executed, which, Mr. Baker declares, is a world's record. The figures show an increase of 446 per cent over 1915.

Public demand for smaller coins, particularly pennies, is reflected in the report, which discloses that more than $12,500,000 coins in the record output were 1-cent pieces.

RAVAGED BY LOCUSTS

Province in Argentina Swept by Plague of Insects.

Disappear as Suddenly as They Come, Leaving Desert of Country They Pass Through.

Buenos Aires.—A plague of locusts, like that which in ancient Egypt "covered the face of the earth," this year descended upon the province of Santa Fe. Similar offensives are almost annual events in one part or other of Argentina.

The locusts come suddenly and without warning. Where for a year or several years perhaps not one of the insects has been seen, a veritable cloud of them will one day appear and settle on the ground. These usually come from the northwest, from the vast almost uninhabited tracts in Bolivia as is supposed. They cover the earth like a moving carpet, gradually moving on.

At first little damage is done, aside from the inconvenience of having literally millions of the insects covering everything and even penetrating the houses. But as they progress through the country they bore holes into the earth, preferably in hard spots such as roadways, into which they deposit their eggs. Within a short time the larva are hatched and come forth. At first these cannot fly and it is at this stage that they devour every living plant within their path, with the exception of a few species such as willow trees.

A little later the insects develop their wings and, leaving the country through which they have passed a desert, they disappear almost as suddenly as they came. Where they go to has never been discovered.

Argentina has had recourse to many methods of fighting the locusts. The nation maintains organized locust fighting squads, something like those formed to fight fires, and these are sent every year to the sections invaded. In addition, every rancher is held responsible for fighting the pest in his own locality.

One of the methods employed is to dig trenches in which the insects are collected afterward being burned. But no matter how many millions of them are made away with in any such manner, it is impossible to block the pest, owing to the great extent of Argentina, much of which is still very sparsely settled.

Tiffin, O.—The Seneca County Historical society has discovered a prehistoric mound along the Sandusky river south of Tiffin. Geologists call it a sacrificial mound. It is sixty feet square and seven feet high, and erected in a deep depression. The surrounding banks, nearly 100 feet high, form a huge amphitheatre.

WRITERS TOO SELF-CENTRED

Err in Making Members of Their Own Profession Heroes, Is Charge Made by Critic.

Someone is always explaining what is the matter with American literature. American drama and even American poetry, and the latest diagnosis is that they are suffering from in-breeding.

The critic who has made this discovery says that the literary and dramatic world has become too self-centered; is going around in a circle in a manner which produces wheels within wheels; and for this reason authors and playwrights are forever flying off at an inartistic tangent and producing jazz literature and drama.

The favorite hero of the novelist is the novelist, and he writes too much about his early struggles with a cold and hard-fisted world; the dramatist takes the poor, oppressed writer of plays, or for a diversion, the poor but gifted actor, as his hero and draws out their life story of discouragement and suffering and final triumph to a fearful length.

The poet is even accused of preferring to write of a poet rather than of anybody or anything else on earth; of the poet whose sorrows have pressed so heavily upon him that he is forced to cry out in sounds which, being interpreted, are poetry. To one who gives this criticism consideration there seems to be something in it.—May Stranathan in the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Alike.

The head of one of the departments in a certain downtown store is inclined to be plump. She spends a great deal of time and also money in reducing, and as she calls it "grooming and dressing so that I look more slender than I really am."

Now, the janitor of the store is a large, fat colored woman, who has never heard of reducing, and whose dresses are built on even more ample lines than her figure. Also she is very fond of the head of this department. The other day when she happened to be near her she noticed that she seemed rather tired. "Oh, Miss T—," the old janitor exclaimed, "do sit down and rest a minute. Most of these people don't understand how you feel. It just takes us avoirdupoises women to understand each other's feelings.—Indianapolis News.

When Will Building Costs be Lower?

There are three factors necessary to bring about a reduction in building costs:

1. A reduction in demand for buildings
2. A reduction in wages of labor.
3. A reduction in prices of building material

This country is short nearly three and one-half billion dollars worth of normal building construction Until this shortage is made up there will surely be a continual demand for buildings.

It does not seem probable that the laboring man will be content to accept any reduction in the size of his pay envelope.

It has been estimated that about 90 per cent of the cost of an average frame house goes back to the laborer who cut the timber, prepared the raw material for the market, transported it over the railroads and fimally built it into the structure.

There are other fundamental causes for the high prices of commodities in general. Considering the above factors, does it seem reasonable to expect any further reduction in building costs soon.

Let us talk the matter over with you.

Picnic Lunch for Two

By FREDERICK HART

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Pretty Marguerite Stanley looked discontentedly out of the window at the slanting lines of the rain that beat the dust in the road to lathery mud and dripped musically from the gutters around the broad piazza of her home.

"Of course," she said to her mother, who was sewing in the next room, "of course, it had to rain—on this day of all days! I believe nature has a special grudge against picnics. Yesterday was clear, and day before yesterday—and I'm sure that tomorrow will be. But today—"

"Well, dear, if tomorrow is clear, you can have your picnic then." Mrs. Stanley's voice was absent. She was considering a problem in embroidery and was not just sure how to attack it. Her daughter's petulant voice replied: "Well, if we put it off till tomorrow it'll rain tomorrow—that's sure." Mrs. Stanley made no reply and Marguerite turned to contemplation of the dreary rain.

Suddenly her face changed from an expression of woe to one of wonder. Through the driving rain that rendered objects indistinguishable at any distance a figure, oilskinned and sou'westered, was beating its way like a schooner tacking against a strong gale. The figure carried something bulky under its arm, and it was coming up the sidewalk toward the house—yes! It was actually turning in at the gate. Who would come so early in the morning and in such weather? The figure vanished as it mounted the front steps, and an instant later the doorbell pealed. Marguerite, in her haste to see who it was, hurried to the door ahead of the maid, and in a moment was confronting a familiar figure who stood, grinning and dripping, on the porch.

"You're Crazy! You Can Stay, of Course."

"Why, Billy Watson!" she cried. "What on earth are you doing out in such weather? You must be soaked—your shoes! And what's that you have under your arm?"

Billy Watson grinned wider and shook himself. A process that caused Marguerite to retreat hurriedly out of range of the flying drops that shot from his oilskin. Then he spoke.

"Today's the day of the picnic, isn't it?" he demanded. "And it's too rainy to go to Bogg's Woods. So I thought I'd come up here and have a little picnic of my own—with you."

"Oh!" Surprise held Marguerite speechless. Billy went on.

"There's some junk to eat in that bundle, and it didn't get wet, either I brought sandwiches and cake, and there's coffee in a thermos bottle. I suppose you have something, too. We can have our own picnic right here in your house."

"You're crazy! You can stay, of course—but why did you bring the things to eat? We'll have a nice lunch with mother, and get some one over in the afternoon to play bridge, and—"

"We will not!" Billy's voice was very definite. "After I went to all this trouble to lug this food and such over here—and you offer me lunch! I'm going home." He turned toward the step, but she caught his arm and dragged him inside. "Come in, Billy, and don't be an idiot," she said. "We'll eat anywhere you want, only come in before you catch your death of cold."

Mrs. Stanley greeted Billy warmly, for she knew and liked him; but she, too, seemed unimpressed at the idea of a picnic lunch. "I'll tell Dinah to lay another cover for lunch," she said, and vanished on her mission, despite the protests of her guest.

Left to themselves, the two stared at one another for a moment, and then Marguerite burst into laughter. "Your picnic isn't going to work, Billy," she said. "Even mother won't let you behave like a heathen. You'll have to eat a respectable luncheon, and play bridge in the afternoon, like a good boy."

Billy struck an attitude. "Never!" he declaimed dramatically. "Never shall I be balked of me fell purpose!

Picnic Lunch for Two

Continued

I have decreed a picnic, and a picnic there shall be! In one second and a half, gentle maiden, you will find yourself transported into the midst of—that rug'll do," he suddenly added, dropping his pose. "It's green. Come here." He caught Marguerite by the arm and made her sit on the rug. "You are now seated in the midst of a bosky dell," he announced. "This"—dragging a fern from its place in the window—"represents the official boskiness. I now spread the cloth"—his handkerchief was laid flat on the floor—"and, dragging up the picnic basket, our hero and heroine fell to with a will!" He suited the action to the word, and opened his bundle, disclosing some discouraged-looking sandwiches and a huge slice of chocolate cake. "Hooked it from the kitchen when Sally wasn't looking," he announced proudly. "Eat, pretty creature, eat!" Offering her a sandwich.

"Ugh! They're all soggy!" Marguerite was too weak from laughter to resist.

"Sandwiches are always soggy at picnics—confound it! I knew I'd forgotten something!"

"What now?"

"I forgot to bring an ant. All picnics are attended by at least one ant. I could have got one as easily as not. The party is spoiled. Why was I so forgetful?"

"Billy—" Marguerite choked over her sandwich, "do you know you're an awful idiot?"

"I'm always idiotic at picnics—have another sandwich? No more? Then we must consider the eating part finished. We shall now recline on the rocks—those cushions will do nicely—and consider the universe in its more peripatetic attitudes—let me help you over the fallen log to your niche in the cool granite." Escorting Marguerite gravely to the pile of cushions he had thrown on the floor and sinking down beside her. "What a wonderful view from here! Your eye sweeps over the magnificent perspective and—"

"Billy! Did I say you could hold my hand?"

"Everybody holds hands at picnics, and, anyway, I intended, on this particular picnic, to—I say, Marge!"

She was looking away from him, apparently absorbed in contemplation of the hearthrug.

"Marge—dear!"

"Wh-what is it?" Her voice trembled.

"Could you—do you think—would you care a little bit for an awful idiot? I've waited so long to say this that I thought I'd die if I didn't get it out." He was still clinging to her hand and she did not take it from him. Slowly she turned her head, and in another moment she was looking into his eyes. Her voice was low, but it did not waver.

"Billy, I've cared for a long time. I do love you, Billy dear, and—oh!"

It was a long kiss, and neither of them heard the tinkle of the bell announcing lunch. But when Marguerite's mother came into the room they were decorously clearing up the litter they had made.

"For goodness' sake, what have you two children been doing?" exclaimed Mrs. Stanley.

Billy grinned happily.

"We've been picnicking," he announced. "And—I think we've something to tell you."

OLD WOMAN MAKES QUILT

Makes One for Her Grandson That Contains 5,760 Pieces of Calico.

Medford, Wis.—Mrs. Jackson Moon of Perkinstown has just completed a quilt consisting of 5,760 pieces for her grandson, William Woods of Wausau.

The pieces were collected from friends and neighbors. Work on the quilt began last April. Two weeks of continuous sewing made Mrs. Moon's fingers so sore that she was compelled to abandon the work for a time, resting her fingers by spinning for a neighbor.

Mrs. Moon, although seventy years old, does her own housework, entertains much company, helps with the milking, churns three times a week, markets her butter, and no sick relative or friend can find a better nurse than she.

In the past twelve years this industrious lady has pieced 18 quilts each made up of thousands of pieces, all sewed by hand, for Mrs. Moon does not like to sew on a machine.

Baby Ostrich Scrappy.

Vancouver, Canada.—Jonathan, the first ostrich chick hatched in Canada, is progressing under the care of Zoo Manager F. Green in Stanley park. It was at first believed that the rare and valuable bird would not live, and it was taken from its parents and placed in the Green home. Appearance of weakness proved deceptive, for Jonathan quickly whipped the house cat and won a decision over the family spaniel.

Uncover Huge Ruins at Garden of Gethsemane

London.—The Palestine department of antiquities, which had charge of the exploration work being carried out in the city of Ascalon, announces the discovery of some huge marble pillars and statues, says a dispatch from Jerusalem. The department has also unearthed some medieval and Fourth century churches and mosaic pavements at the foot of the Mount of Olives, leading into the Garden of Gethsemane.

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, January 20, 1921 No. 40

To the Worker

You produce things made of iron, steel, wool, wood, cotton or other raw materials, or you work in mines or on railroads.

Unless men and women in your trade or other trades are working, they cannot consume the things you produce; mines and railroads are slowed down and you are laid off.

They cannot work unless you buy. You cannot work unless they buy.

If you keep on buying what you need now—now that prices are down—you help keep yourself employed by employing others.

Each is dependent on the other—an endless circle in which all prosper or suffer together.

You do well if others do. You do badly if others do. We all do well if everyone buys for his reasonable needs—buys cautiously, not extravagantly.

Keep on buying—carefully—but now.

Mr. Dexter Lutz, Mrs. Lenora Harpster Lutz and Miss Anna Bergman were tendered a farewell reception on Saturday evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Harpster, Miss Marie Hopkins and Miss Hazel Brown acting as hostesses to the members of the Franklin County Christian Endeavor Union in their honor. A handkerchief shower came as a pleasant surprise. Miss Bergman and Mr. and Mrs. Lutz will start on February first for a Mission School in Korea, where all will engage in missionary work under the auspices of the Presbyterian Mission Board, inasmuch as the United Evangelical Church, of which all are members, does not have a station in this field. Realizing the many changes that may take place during the five to seven years that must elapse before their return for even a visit, the fond words, good wishes and pledged remembrance of their friends in Christian Endeavor meant much to these about to go out from the ranks to a life of service far from home, country and friends.

The Needle Art Club met January 12th at the home of Mrs. Dildine, 31 N. Warren Ave. All members present but four. A button contest was put on, Mrs. Allen securing first prize, a handsome hand embroidered bed spread. Mrs. Hamilton second prize, a huge bouquet of Black Eyed Susans. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess. Next meeting will be a goose roast with "proper trimmings," at the home of Mrs. McLaughlin, 123 N. Park Ave., on Wednesday, Jan. 26th. All members try to be present.

PREDESTINATION

It is with much concern that we have been reading the article appearing in this paper on the doctrine of predestination. There have always been some who believed and defended this belief and there have always been those who rejected and assailed it as an impediment to faith and a libel on the divine character. But in recent years not so much thought has been given to this doctrine because it emphasizes the will of God, while in this generation the church lays the emphasis on the love of God which caused Him to give His only begotten Son "that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have life everlasting."

"David," in his first article on this subject, quoted the scripture, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." You will remember the thought was expressed that God decreed the acceptance of the younger and the rejection of the elder, as individuals.

But we do not believe this to be the teaching of this scripture. In the Old Testament many of the stories point forward to the events of the New Testament. In other words, in the Old Testament are types, foreshadowing what took place in the New. Jacob and Esau are one of these allegorical illustrations, typical of the two covenants. The elder Esau, represents the Old Covenant of the Law; the younger, Jacob is figurative of the New Covenant of Grace. Read Gal. 4:21-31. God shows His love and preference for the younger, for in the second or New Covenant He gave His only Son, while in the first or Old Covenant He gave the Law. For that reason Jacob, typical of the New Testament is loved and Esau, allegorical of the Old Covenant is "hated," or, as the Bible dictionary tells us, "loved in a less degree."

It is also interesting to note in this connection that the last words of the Old Tesament or Covenant express a curse—"lest I come and smite you with a curse"—while the last words of the New Testament or Covenant express blessing—"Surely I come quickly. * * * The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

There are many other characters in the Old Testament illustrating this same teaching of types. But we desire to call your attention to only one more—another pair of twins, Zarah and Phares. (Gen. 38:27-31) Zarah, the younger of two, born with a scarlet thread upon his hand, is typical of the New Covenant and Atonement He is always named first. Phares, the elder, figurative, of the Old Covenant under the Law is spoken of last.

You will find another of these couplets, illustrating this teaching of types, in Galations 4:21-31.

Returning to the doctrine of predestination, let us consider some of the results of such a belief. Do believers find comfort and consolation in this teaching? Nay, rather it distresses the mind and gives occasion to despair. Sinners and impenitent ones find security in their wickedness in such a belief; for, if God decreed that some should be saved and others lost, does it make any difference how one believes or what manner of man he is?

The following illustration serves to show the effect of this doctrine. The father of Robert Ingersoll, the famous infidel, was a minister who believed and taught this pernicious doctrine. Bob Ingersoll, not able to accept the conception of God, a perfect Being, dealing with mankind in this unjust manner, became an infidel. One day on being asked what he did believe, Robert Ingersoll said: "I am like a vessel at sea without a rudder, without a chart. I do not know the Captain and I am not on speaking terms with the Pilot." The infidel died as he lived because of his unreasonable teaching.

In conclusion: Does God command us to occupy our imaginations with the mystery of His infinite knowledge and wisdom? Nay, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

MALAYS THE LAZIEST PEOPLE

Natives Characterized by a Marked Antipathy to Labor and Extremely Philosophical.

Their disregard of money makes all dealings with Malays extremely difficult, and their dislike for work has completely blocked more than one project, writes Charles Mayer in Asia Magazine. To my mind, the Malays are the laziest people in the world.

When work is an exciting or amusing game, such as the hunt, they will go on for days without signs of fatigue. They seem to keep alive by some fanatic energy. But when work is just plain labor they will say, "Wait" or "I must think." Or a Malay may say candidly: "Sir, I have had plenty to eat. I am content." Many times I have had a Malay tell me, when asked him to do some work, that he had enough rice and fish for the day and that he might die during the night. It is an unanswerable argument. Tomorrow's food can be found when tomorrow comes.

Why should a Malay gentleman who believes in Allah and whose stomach is full, do the labor that can be done by heathen, pig-eating Chinese?

"Will you row me across the river?" I asked a Malay one day.

"Tuan, I have eaten and I have plenty," he replied. "You may take my boat and row yourself across the river. Tomorrow, if Allah grants me life and if I need the boat, I will swim over for it."

That Malay trait of living for the moment has led many a European to murder, and more than once it made me feel like running amuck. It is maddening. Getting work out of Malays is a fine art, a science to be learned only after years of patient argument and cajoling. And yet, with all their laziness, they are lovable people. In most cases they are brave and willing to do anything for a person they like

Members of West High School's alumni association are making plans for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the association. At a meeting of representatives of each of the ten classes that have been graduated from that school which was held recently at the home of Miss Alma L. Wirth, 55 Hoffman Ave., it was decided to hold the affair at the school building, Saturday, February 12. Committees were appointed to arrange for speakers, refreshments, and the entertainment of the 500 graduates who, with their wives and husbands, are expected to be present.

Election of officers will be held at this meeting and plans for the annual publication of an alumni "news and gossip" paper will be considered. Stunts and dancing are also scheduled for that evening.

A faculty committee composed of Miss Augusta Connelly, vice-principal of West High, Miss Katherine Blair, Miss Marie Mulligan and Miss Alma Wirth, is aiding the general committee in its work.

A Woman's Privilege

By LILY WANDEL

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

"What you need is a permanent wave," exclaimed Melba, viewing her friend's long but somewhat stringy looking hair.

Ilsa put down her hairbrush and turned a thoroughly frightened face to the light. "Never! Don't even suggest such a thing to me. Didn't I go with Mrs. King when she got hers and didn't I see with my own eyes what the poor thing endured for five horrible hours? No, not I." And began to brush energetically.

"But think of the bliss afterward!" tempted Melba.

"But, Melba—why go through such torture? Mrs. King said she really thought the top of her head was coming off, as though they had built a fire on her scalp! Not for me. I'm not that ridiculous and vain!"

Melba raised her eyebrows disapprovingly. "I suppose you are getting dressed to get out with Larry tonight as usual."

"Yes, why do you ask?" dabbing her face with cold cream and then carefully massaging it in.

"Oh, nothing," answered Melba lightly, getting up from her chair and walking aimlessly about the room. She stopped before a picture of Ilsa taken some ten years ago. "You were going with Larry Philmore when this was taken, weren't you?"

"Oh, I suppose so," snapped Ilsa, visibly annoyed.

"It's a wonder you two wouldn't get married. My goodness, Ilsa, you are thirty or more!"

Ilsa began to rub off the cold cream vigorously so that her face was a bright red.

Melba sauntered back and dropped in her chair next to the dressing table. "Ilsa, are you letting that Larry

"But Think of the Bliss Afterwards!"

Philmore string you along? Don't be foolish, child, get him to propose; don't waste your best years on a man who may drop you!"

"Melba! How can you!" Tears shot into Ilsa's eyes and she fumbled helplessly for a handkerchief.

"Oh, I know it; no one needs to tell me," came the muffled reply.

With a quick rush of understanding Melba flung her arm around Ilsa's shoulder and pressed her cheek against the other's. "My dear, my dear," she whispered softly, and then straightened up, full of purpose and action. "Make him propose! Make yourself so charming, so pretty that he will be afraid of losing you!"

"Why, Melba, you talk as though I go around like a frump! Don't I spend really more than I can afford on clothes and cosmetics?" She made an including gesture toward the bulging wardrobe and the double line of bottles and jars on her dressing table. "My complexion is good, you'll admit, and I have kept that tendency to a double chin away, haven't I?"

"Yes," admitted Melba slowly, "that's true, and you do dress very smartly; your hats are peaches, but"

"But what?" demanded Ilsa, eyeing her suspiciously.

"Your hair—"

"I knew it! Your old permanent wave again! No, and a hundred times, no! I won't be tortured for Larry Philmore or the king of England!"

"My goodness! Don't fly in such a temper right away. Your hats would look better, believe me. Last time I saw you out with Larry it was pouring rain, and your hair—"

"Oh, be still. If you knew how sick I am of all this," she swept her hand over the top of the dressing table, "this continual battle to keep pretty and young! I'm sick of it, Melba, just tired of it," passion crept in her voice, "ready to quit! Throw it all to the wind—Larry and all!"

"Ilsa Steele! Are you silly? Now don't do anything rash. You and Larry are so suited to each other—"

"Yes, I will, too! I don't care a rap about looks or dress or anything! I'm just sick and tired of all this fussing! I had a letter last week from Aunt Abigail in Seven Points, she's terribly busy with jelly-making and she hinted wanting help. And, Melba, I'm going; yes, I am, too. Going out there and live in a gingham house dress and make jelly and feed the chickens. And see those bottles and jars? Not a one goes along, not one. Not even a curling iron, nor a hair net. Not a georgette dress with all the million snaps and beads! I don't care if I look forty either, or fifty! And if Larry wants a younger girl why—" but her voice shook a little, "let him go to it!"

Melba rose in great consternation. "For goodness sakes, be sensible. You won't do anything of the kind." And as Ilsa obstinately shook her head, "you'll regret it, I know you will. Why not try the permanent wave, you can't tell."

Ilsa gave her friend a little energetic shake. "Don't you dare say permanent wave to me again!"

"There's no harm in making one's self as pretty as one can. Don't very sedate people help nature along with, for an instance—false teeth?"

But Ilsa was dragging out a suitcase. "I'm going tonight."

Two weeks of jelly making and pickling had passed at Aunt Abigail's prim garden abloze with bright flowers. When the day's preserving was over, Ilsa, still in her housedress, would take a pad and pencil and go out under the trees and scribble a letter to Melba.

"It's beautiful here," she wrote "only I'm so tired from standing in the hot kitchen all day long. Somehow or other I keep glancing at the kitchen door every now and then as if I were expecting somebody. Now, if this were a story, some bright morning, when I stood over the stove with a face as red as a turkey, the door would open and in would step Larry! He would be quite overcome with joy and delight of seeing me in a stained housedress and my powderless nose would bring tears of happiness to his eyes! He would clasp me in his arms, jelly spoon and all and propose on the very spot! And then he would spring the astounding fact that he owned the next farm, a peach! Bought it five years ago and was afraid I wouldn't like to be a farmer's wife or something like that. Unfortunately this is not a story. No one comes to the kitchen door but an occasional tramp! Aunt Abigail makes very pointed remarks about old maids, and today she told me my hair looked a sight, no wonder I didn't get a husband! Nevertheless, she likes me and wants me to make my home with her and I really think I will."

In the morning came Melba's usual chatty letter. "And by the way, I saw your Larry last night on the Roof Garden. He certainly is a fine looking chap and the lady who was with him was really quite stunning and she had such pretty hair curling out from under her hat."

"Aunt Abigail" Ilsa came in the kitchen with pale cheeks. "I just had a letter—it's very urgent—I've got to catch the noon train—I may come back again, I'm not quite sure."

Two days later Ilsa with trembling fingers lifted the telephone receiver to her ear and gave the operator Larry's number. In reply to her invitation he promised to be there in an hour.

Ilsa met him in the hall.

Larry Philmore came in his usual brisk, matter-of-fact way, but he stopped and stared at Ilsa, then he drew her slowly toward him and kissed her very tenderly. "I really did not know how much I missed you, until now," he said softly. She led him gently to the library davenport.

"Ilsa," he confessed after a while, "I took Molly Davis out a few times when you were away. I thought she was so smart looking—I admired the way her hair looked, but dear, now that I see you I know what a fool I was! Why, your hair—Ilsa, queer I never noticed before, it waves so beautifully and shines—it's exquisite! Ilsa, I can't miss you again—couldn't we surprise our friends, dear? There's the Little Church Around the Corner."

And when he released her from his ardent embrace, "Dear, what makes you so attractive today, your pretty hair? Are you doing it a new way, what makes it ripple so?"

"I think," lied Ilsa softly, "it was the country air."

Those Unnecessary Warnings.

Excellent young women have chopped ice and frozen sherbet behind closed doors because they do not want to be told again to be sure not to get the ice all over the back piazza. Certain warnings go with certain projects as inevitably as rubbers with the rain. The practical mother has so often found the warnings necessary, that the mere sight of the act produces the formula by rote.

Model sons and daughters should accept these hints with gratitude, thus avoiding all friction, however minor. But rather than be advised to do that which they were planning to do already, the most loyal of daughters will resort to clandestine measures and go stealthily with the ice pick as with a poniard beneath a cloak.

This annoys an affectionate and capable mother very much. And she has a right to be annoyed, has she not? After all, it is her ice pick.—Frances Lester Warner in the Atlantic Monthly.

His One Chance.

"I believe," said the impatient man as he put aside the telephone, "that I'll go fishing."

"Didn't know you cared for fishing."

"I don't ordinarily. But it's the only chance I have of finding myself at the end of a line that isn't busy."—Boys' Life.

Squirrel Found in Stomach of Trout

Columbia, La.—Can fish climb a tree or do squirrels take a bath occasionally? This is the question being asked by G. J. McSween. While he and his daughter, Mrs. Annie Wear were fishing in Horseshoe lake they caught five unusually large trout, two of which appeared to be somewhat overfed. On opening them, a squirrel was found in one, and a two-pound gar fish in the other.

How that trout got that squirrel is the puzzling proposition.

When Will Building Costs be Lower?

There are three factors necessary to bring about a reduction in building costs:

1. A reduction in demand for buildings
2. A reduction in wages of labor.
3. A reduction in prices of building material

This country is short nearly three and one-half billion dollars worth of normal building construction Until this shortage is made up there will surely be a continual demand for buildings.

It does not seem probable that the laboring man will be content to accept any reduction in the size of his pay envelope.

It has been estimated that about 90 per cent of the cost of an average frame house goes back to the laborer who cut the timber, prepared the raw material for the market, transported it over the railroads and fimally built it into the structure.

There are other fundamental causes for the high prices of commodities in general. Considering the above factors, does it seem reasonable to expect any further reduction in building costs soon.

Let us talk the matter over with you.

Even the bow-wows are being fitted out with goggles for motoring, according to a report from Boston, which states that goggles for dogs have been placed on sale there. ## VOODOOISM IS FAITH OF HAITI

Admiral Knapp, Investigating Conditions, Tells Shocking Tales of Practices.

KILL HUMANS, DRINK BLOOD

Native Is Strongly Superstitious, Fears Evil Eye and Stands in Great Awe of Voodoo Priests and Priestesses.

Washington, D. C.—That 95 per cent of the natives of Haiti believe in the African jungle faith of voodooism which requires the sacrifice of human beings and the drinking of human blood is declared by Rear Admiral H. S. Knapp in his report to the secretary of the navy on investigation of Haitian conditions.

Admiral Knapp cites a shocking case of the trial of a voodoo priest, who is reported to have killed 13 children, whose blood was drunk and flesh eaten by persons present at the rites.

"Voodooism is prevalent," says the admiral's report, "and the further one goes from the coast into the interior the more openly is voodooism practiced. Voodooism is essentially snake worship, and in its extreme rites it requires the sacrifice of human beings and the drinking of their blood and the eating of their flesh.

Orgies at Sacrifices.

"The human sacrifice is called the 'horniess goat;' minor sacrifices of goats are made. These religious celebrations, if the word 'religious' can be applied to such affairs, end in disgraceful orgies of debauchery. It is very difficult, of course, to determine just how extensively the beliefs are held, but some Haitians themselves have asserted that probably 95 per cent of the total population believes in voodooism to a greater or less extent.

"Of course, the contrary is strongly held by apologists for the Haitian character. It seems certain, however, that whether it be the effect of voodooism or not, the average Haitian is strongly superstitious—superstitious with the superstitions of the jungle. He is afraid of the evil eye, or, as it is called here, the 'ouanga,' and stands in great awe of the voodoo priests and priestesses. It is also believed the educated classes are not free from much of this superstition, even where they deny belief in or the existence of voodooism.

Voodoo Followers Feared.

"Haitian officials high in place will not take action against persons accused of voodooism, whether because of their own belief in it or because of fear born of their own knowledge of the extent to which voodooism is prevalent among the population or of incurring enmities. A voodoo priest has been lately tried and sentenced, and the proceedings of the military commission are now in Washington awaiting action.

"This man is said to have killed, at one time or another, 13 children, whose blood was drunk and whose flesh was eaten by persons present at the rites. The practice of similar voodoo rites is confidently believed by those most familiar with the situation in Haiti to be not unusual in the remote places although it is very difficult to obtain any positive evidence in corroboration."

Two and a Bridge

By ANDERSON MILLER

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The primal command to Adam to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow was certainly being applied literally in his own case, thought Robert Owen gloomily, as he regarded the moist lump that represented what had been, a few hours ago, a fresh and spotless handkerchief. The train was moving leisurely through a district in western Pennsylvania where there was not a tree, as far as he could see through the grimy windows, that was more than ten feet high.

The sun beat down on the country, and from the gray-green earth reflected heat waves leaped back, quivering and distorting the view. Owen though clad as lightly as possible, was literally sweltering.

He thought regretfully of the cool quiet of the club lounge which he had left twenty hours before; the shaded veranda, the icy shower baths, the invigorating chill of the swimming pool.

And he had let the chief talk him into making this trip on the off chance of getting the contract for putting up a bridge over some forsaken river or other in the wilds of the state, off the main line!

He groaned as he thought that he would probably be marooned up there for the better part of a week, interviewing county commissioners and highway experts in little boxlike offices that smell of dust and were abominably hot.

He mopped his brow again, more from force of habit than with any expectation of mitigating his discomfort, and glanced out of the window at the station which the train was at that moment languidly leaving. "Phillipsville," said the gilt letters. Only two more stops to Spring Valley—that, at least, was a comfort.

He would see the head of the state highway department that afternoon and try to be comfortable during the night, at least. He wondered what Spring Valley was like. For the twentieth time that day he drew the letter from the highway department from his pocket and read it, from the courteous opening to the "Yours truly, J. Harbison, Com'r."

It was a nice letter and "J. Harbison" had a nice signature—that at least was something. Harbison wasn't a musky old fogy—he was sure of that. • • • "Spring Valley!" roared the conductor, and Owen leaped to his feet and hurried from the train, clutching his rolls of blueprints and his suitcase.

Spring Valley was not prepossessing to the eye. At the station were three dilapidated looking vehicles drawn by somnolent horses and manned by dusky Jehus who babbled unceasingly the merits of the hotels they represented.

Owen took the least objectionable of these and was transported in due time to the Mansion House. His first opinion of the Mansion House was that it wasn't. The usual languid bellboy; the usual crawling elevator; the usual room with the usual golden oak furniture, and the usual prospect of the usual travesty of a meal at 6 o'clock. He inquired the way to the state highway commissioner's offices and departed.

His inquiry for Mr. Harbison was greeted with a grin by the boy who took his card, and presently he was shown into a room that belied his preconceived ideas. It was spotlessly clean and had the air of having but recently been gone over—an air conspicuously lacking in most of the offices Owen had visited in his time. A girl was seated at a desk, writing busily. She glanced up as he entered.

"Mr. Owen?"

"Yes—to see Mr. Harbison about that bridge." Harbison had taste in secretaries, he thought. But her next words took him off his feet.

"I am Miss Harbison," the young lady replied calmly. "Won't you sit down?"

"The—the highway commissioner?" Owen could only stare.

"Of course!" With a little laugh "I was elected last fall. You want to see me about the Bell river bridge. What is it exactly you want?"

Owen recovered from his astonishment and told her. But there were many details to go into, and it was half-past five before he knew it.

"Look here," said Miss Harbison directly. "We have a lot to talk about. Suppose you come up to the house after dinner and we'll get on with the work. I live at 18 Cherry street—it's easy to find. About eight—good afternoon!"

Owen repaired to 18 Cherry street at the time suggested. It was a cool looking house with a cool-looking veranda and a lot of cool-looking chairs; and Miss Harbison was there to meet him in a cool-looking frock; and he met her mother, who was a nice old lady, evidently very proud of her daughter; and for many hours the two of them sat up and discussed estimates and time clauses and bonuses and politics and such things; and at 12 o'clock Owen went back to the hotel tired but at peace with the world. He was sure that he would be able to put the contract through in fine style; and he had lost his fear of the conferences in the hot, smoky offices. Spring Valley didn't seem such a bad place after all.

For the rest of the week he was very busy putting the final details into shape, and he left for New York on Saturday with the contract in his pocket, after a very pleasant evening spent in calling, unofficially, on J. Harbison, highway commissioner. His chief congratulated him.

"I suppose you're glad to be back from that hole in the ground," he said.

"Well—to tell you the truth, chief, I was hoping you'd let me go up there again. I'd like to see the work started, at least—and I know the ground, and—and—" he finished lamely.

The chief looked at him for a moment through half-shut eyes, then laughed. "All right, Bob," he chuckled. "You're the doctor. If you want to go back there and die of the heat, go ahead. No one else wants the job."

So it was that for the next three months Mr. Robert Owen, representative of the Perfection Bridge and Construction company, found himself situated at Spring Valley, Spring county, Pennsylvania, spending as much of his time possible in the company of Miss Joan Harbison, highway commissioner. And as the weeks slipped by and the construction got well under way, Mr. Owen found it more and more necessary to go to number 18 Cherry street for conferences.

That some of these conferences were not entirely official in character might have been shown by the fact that passersby heard, sometimes, the music of a guitar, very well played, coming from the veranda in the evenings; Mr. Owen had played on his college mandolin club, it appeared. But as the work progressed with great rapidity, there could be no possible ground for carping on the part of village critics.

One evening in early September Miss Joan Harbison and Mr. Robert Owen went out to Bell River bridge in Miss Harbison's little runabout to take a look at their completed work. Tomorrow the bridge would be opened with appropriate ceremonies; the town council and the mayor would make speeches, and there would be a band, and generally a good time would be had by all.

But in the twilight the bridge was peaceful and quiet as it gracefully spanned the stream; the two on the bank looked at it fondly and proudly. Miss Harbison with a sense of proprietorship, for the bridge would be a monument to her work as highway commissioner; Owen with an air of regarding a good piece of work. They were silent for a few moments; then Owen, stepping from the machine, invited his companion to sit beside him on a girder.

"Well, it's finished," he said after a pause.

"Yes." Miss Harbison sighed.

"What's the matter? Are you sorry it's over?"

"No—that is, yes. I mean I'm not sorry, and still—well, I am."

Thus the official, efficient highway commissioner. The highly impersonal and very businesslike Robert Owen could find nothing to say but "Are you?" which did not seem to have any direct bearing on the subject. More silence.

"I'm going away tomorrow," offered Robert after a time.

"Are you? I'm sorry!"

The words slipped out before Miss Harbison realized their import and a deep blush overspread her face. But Robert Owen, regardless of the scandalized faces of a couple of country people who happened to drive by that way at that time, impetuously caught the efficient Miss Harbison in his arms and said—a great many things with which we have no concern whatever. But they must have been satisfactory, for Miss Harbison seemed to agree with every one of them.

The country people drove on. The twilight deepened. The Bell River bridge stood contemplative, while the water beneath it flowed on, as water has been in the habit of doing the world over. But neither of the two on the girder minded the water, or the country people, or the bridge. The bridge was finished; they had just begun to live.

Vol. 4. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, January 27, 1921 No. 41

Social Stunts

Be sure to attend the meeting at West Broad Street School, Friday evening, when J. O. Collicott, Superintendent of Schools speaks. He will have a message for all. The school orchestra will furnish music. A very creditable display of manual training projects and sewing will be exhibited, also fine specimens of art work.

Arthur Dale, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Milliken, 55 S. Warren Avenue celebrated his third birthday Saturday afternoon, January 15th, with a Mother Goose party. Each little guest was appropriately costumed. The young host as "Bobby Shafto" was equal to the occasion, receiving his little friends most graciously.

He received many gifts. Among other amusements of the afternoon was a hunting game, where each one discovered a souvenir suited to character represented. After the grand march they were seated, happy and wide-eyed at the table. A birthday cake with three tiny candles was the centerpiece while at each plate a minature candle twinkled.

Those present were: Betty Lou Earle, as "Betty Blue"; Dean Strausbaugh, "Wee Willie Winkey"; David Douglas, "Little Boy Blue"; Billie Meese, "Peter Pumpkin Eater"; Anita Jones, "Little Miss Donnet"; Jane Allen, "Little Bo Peep"; Curtis Allen, "One Little Indian"; Chas W. Walton, "Darby"; Laura Evelyn Southworth, "Queen of Hearts"; Frieda Postal, "Polly"; Phylis Postal, "Baby Bunting"; Frank Millikin, "Old King Cole"; Mary Millikin, "Mother Hubbard"; Paul Millikin, "Taffy"; Martha Millikin, "Milkmaid."

At the close of the afternoon the Mother Goose children with their mothers who were also present as guests, said good-bye and "Little Bobby" was soon in the land of dream.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bostic, 140 N. Eureka Ave. entertained with a party on Saturday evening, January 22d, in honor of their daughter Mary's 20th birthday. The following persons were present: Misses Evelyn Knox, Emma Lenhoff, Marie Lange, Mildred Barnes, Hilda Messing and Mary Bostic Messrs. Carl Barnes, William Cady, Dudley Lange, George Lenhoff, Girden Mugrage and Harry Drake and Mr. and Mrs. Bostic and Mrs. W. P. Barnes. After a number of games were enjoyed by all ice cream and cake was served. All departed at a late hour wishing Miss Bostic many happy returns of the day. Miss Bostic was the recipent of many beautiful presents.

The regular meeting of the Elite Club was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Wilkins, January 13.

Those present were: Mesdames Elmer Haudashelt, Frank Wilkins, W. H. Spangler, Geo. W. Ryan, M. W. Bentz, J. D. Cox.

New officers were elected as follows: Mrs. Geo. W. Ryan, Pres.; Mrs. W. H. Spangler, Vice-Pres; Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt, Sec. and Treas.; Mrs. J. D. Cox, Reporter.

Report was read giving detailed statement of groceries donated and purchased by club funds, which totaled four bushel baskets full; these were given to two needy families at Christmas time. Those attending had a most delightful time.

Frank Hibbs, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbs, 91 N. Terrace street, was badly hurt near Broad and Terrace, last Thursday evening about 6 o'clock. He had been helping his brother deliver papers, and walked across the track back of a Broad street car, directly in front of a west bound automobile, driven by Mr. R. A. Williams. The machine knocked him down, and when he was picked up and taken to Mt. Carmel Hospital it was found his scalp had been about one-third torn loose and hung over his forehead, also a fracture of the skull, back of the right ear, his shoulder bruised and also a cut on the hip.

At the last report he is reported as getting along as well as can be expected and will probably recover.

Mr. William Link of 59 N. Park Ave., who is spending the winter in Crescent City, Fla., with mr. and Mrs. Arthur Letz, former residents of the Hilltop, writes he is enjoying life in the sunshine. Roses are in bloom and peaches in blossom. Mr. Link helped pick oranges last week, quite a treat for him. Any of his friends wishing to drop him a card would be appreciated by him. His address is: Crescent City, Fla., Box 413, c-o Mr. Arthur Letz.

Sunday night, February 6th, the pastor of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will deliver an illustrated lecture on the work of the Presbyterian Church Missionaries in the Near East —in Syria and surrounding countries This is of timely interest owing to the offerings being made to the starving children and peoples of the Near East No special collection. Free to all. New pictures direct from the mission field.

Rev. W. E. Seesholtz left Wednesday to attend the funeral of his father, at Lancaster.

Little Story That's True

Here is one we got from a Hilltop citizen, and it happened in an overtown store that employed a Santa Claus during the last Christmas shopping season.

It was the Monday after Christmas, not much doing in the business line. The door opened and a burly native of Italy entered and in an angry manner accosted a nearby clerk with this remark:

"Tella me where I getta de Santa Claus."

"He's not here any more," replied the clerk, wonderingly.

"He bigga de fool," said "Spaghetti" (or whatever his name was). "My keeda da koom in here, giva him de lot' tella him tings da want for Kreest-o-mas—toys, an de rock-a-chair, too, for de Muz. He maka hees hed go dees way (nodding) and say 'alla right.' De keeds da geeta up on Kreest-o-mas morn' da looka alla 'round, dees way an' dat way, and de Muz shee looka allo 'round, too; den I tella 'em, wait I finda de tings—I looka alla 'round out of de house an' on-a de roof where shimney kum oudt, but I no finda. He no bringa de ——— ting."

HIS LAST LOVE LETTER

A Missive that Breathes True Sentiment and a Tender Solicitude for the Heart's Choice

In Anchor and Shield appears a touching story of a woman, with three small children, sitting, on the day of her husband's funeral, trying to figure out what would become of her now that she was left alone in the world with no income, no home. While in this seemingly hopeless position, a bank messenger came to the door and handed her a package of papers, on which she noticed the following in her husband's handwriting: "To be delivered to my wife the day of my funeral." When she unwrapped the bundle she found a letter with the notation: "My last love-letter." Here it is:

"Dearest Sweetheart, Dearest Wife—When you receive this I shall be far away from you; so far that the only answer you can give me will be your unchanging love. I am writing alone in the office, I sit thinking how old and how large the lads will be when you get this letter. Very old, I hope. This is my last love-letter. Do you remember the first? How strange it seemed to be writing it, and how happy I was! I wanted you so! And do you remember the answer you wrote? I shall never forget it. You will find it with my valuables. Now I am writing my last and I am happy, for no shadow makes me think it will soon be read. With my first letter I sent flowers; with this I enclose a life insurance policy. You may be surprised how I managed with the expense of the family to keep the policy paid. But you will remember we often did without things we wanted and you will know why after your long illness, I borrowed money. I was tempted some times to let it drop, but I was afraid to. My love for you said 'No.' Now it is yours —yours and the children's—and you need not want for any necessary comforts if you manage well. This knowledge makes it worth ten times over what the policy has cost. That is all. It comes to you as an expression of my love. May God bless and keep you and the babies. H. E."

From the Virginian.

H. A. Slyh, 43 S. Warren. Hilltop 1986

Our Neighbors

In casting about in my mind, my dear editor, for a theme for a story of human interest and based on an actual occurrence, the thought came to me that I might write of the man who lives within a "stone's throw" of me, in fact next door perhaps. Nominally he is my neighbor. He rides the same car as I do. He walks the same streets. He enjoys the same surroundings as I do but so far as our feeling of neighborliness is concerned, so far as a feeling of fellowship is shown we might as well be separated as far as the East is from the West. I know him by sight and have passed a casual "Good Day" with him. I know that he is an honest worker for I see him almost daily, going to or from his work with his lunch box in his hand. I see evidences around his home of the laudable pride he has in beautifying his home and his surroundings. I applaud in him these things as they are indicative of his aspiration for higher and more beautiful things. I see in this a striving to the Godward. And yet knowing all this and many more of the subtle unexplicable things of life, about him, he is still the "Stranger Next Door." What do I know of his hopes and ambitions? What secret source of community wealth may be released in him, through personal contact? What misunderstandings and bitternesses might be dispelled, did I but know him and show him how highly I regard him?

What prevents me from knowing him? Is it because I am waiting for him to "make the first move?" Probably he is waiting, likewise, on me. Is it because I fear, I will be misunderstood? I am misunderstood anyhow. So it can be no worse and is apt to be much better when he understands how kindly I feel toward him. I know I shall like him for the children all love him.

I am going to surprise him some of these days when I wearily "drop down" on his front porch in the quiet of the evening for a "heart to heart" talk and at least get acquainted with the "Stranger Next Door."

NEIGHBOR.

George's Kiddie Corner

Why is a giraffe's neck so long? Because its head is so far from its body.

What is blacker than a crow? Its feathers.

Why do birds in their little nest agree? Because they'd fall out of they didn't.

What made the fly fly? Because the spider spied her.

Why are pianos noble characters? Because they are grand and upright and square.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Our buyers returning from the Grand Rapids and Chicago furniture markets, report that furniture prices at factories from whom we buy are down between 15 and 25 per cent, and that there will be no further decline in prices this year. If any thing, they may advance slightly by spring.

The decline is due to a slight drop in lumber prices, not by reducing working forces or layoffs; factories are being run full time and at salaries the same as a year ago.

Our Prices Down Also

We have gone over our entire stock and marked each piece of furniture and rugs to conform to present market prices.

WARNINGS FOR NIGHT TRAFFIC

Philadelphia to Install System of Flashlight Danger Signals at Street Intersections.

Philadelphia.—Flashlight danger signals are to be placed at street intersections in this city as additional safeguards against night accidents, it was announced by the electrical bureau.

Red and green lenses with powerful incandescent lamps inclosed in an iron case and suspended from poles or from extended arms are to be used. The system will be so arranged that the red and green will flash alternately at intervals of a few seconds. They will be placed so that they may be observed from all traffic directions and at considerable distances.

The signals are intended only as a warning to drivers that they are approaching a dangerous intersection.

Public Baths for Dogs in Germany.

Berlin.—Public baths for dogs are a feature of the municipal arrangements at Hamburg, Germany. There are heated cages for drying the dogs after bathing. Many dogs call unattended at regular hours every week, scratch at the door, and have their bath.

Follow the crowd to Seiller's, January Sale. It will pay you.

ORDER RESTORED IN U. S. SAMOA

Reporter and Naval Officer Try to Get Control of the Administration.

ODD MIXUP IS CLEARED UP

Governor, in Ill Health and Under Charges, Commits Suicide—Is Completely Absolved by Naval Court of Inquiry.

San Francisco.—American Samoa's beetle-inspecting chief of police is out of jail, and the judge, who has seven other jobs, is again holding court, according to advices from Tutuila. This change back to normal followed a naval inquiry which resulted in dissipating an attempt by a naval officer and a former newspaper reporter to control the naval administration of the American possession in the South Seas.

In furtherance of this attempt, the naval officer, Creed H. Boucher, lieutenant commander, and the ex-reporter, Arthur A. Greene, enlisted the support of Commander A. C. Kail, second in rank to Commander Warren J. Terhune, governor of the island. The three filed charges against Terhune and his administration, and finally Kail tried to send a wireless message to the navy department at Washington, branding his superior as insane.

Takes His Own Life.

With the message in front of him, Terhune, suffering from ill health, committed suicide. The pitiful part of this tragedy developed when the naval court of inquiry, already en route to Tutuila from Hawaii, absolved Terhune's administration of all charges, recommended the deportation of Greene, the court martial of Boucher and the removal of Kail from his post.

Among the charges filed against Terhune's administration was one that officials were drawing illegal salaries. J. Hurkin Mailo, native chief of police, and Judge A. N. Noble were especial targets of Boucher, Greene and Kail.

After Commander Terhune shot himself Kail became acting governor, and he jailed Mailo on charges that the chief of police had urged the natives to oppose the activities of Greene and Kail. Previously Boucher had alleged that irregularities of the Terhune administration included paying Mailo as "beetle inspector" as well as head of the police force, but that no beetles were inspected.

Judge Noble, who, besides being district judge, was secretary to the commandant, registrar of titles, secretary of native affairs, judge of the probate court, superintendent of education, associate member of the high court and vice president of the American Bank of Samoa, was charged by Boucher and Greene with being instrumental in alleged misuse of funds and authority. Kail closed Noble's court when the former became acting governor.

Board Sits Eight Days.

The board of inquiry sat for eight days. Testimony revealed that Boucher for 25 of his 85 days' service, was under suspension on three charges—carrying a pistol, attempting a mutiny and falsehood. Boucher's examination revealed that he posed as a secret service man without authority; publicly criticized the secretary of the navy and the President; insubordinately communicated with authorities in Washington in violation of regulations, and committed many other breaches of naval regulations.

Upon examination he declined to answer many questions on the ground that the answers would incriminate himself. He acknowledged that all charges he made were based upon hearsay and without investigation. It was revealed that documents were stolen from naval officers, but an attempt to introduce these by Greene, who acted as Boucher's counsel, was overruled by the board.

The testimony revealed also that Greene and Boucher created unrest among the natives in an effort to change the government and assume control for themselves. Their activities resulted in organization of natives into a "committee" which forwarded an appeal to President Wilson to remove Governor Terhune, and the native unrest was manifested by several fights with the American sailors.

Cutting a Watermelon in January.

Peru, Ind.—Mrs. George W. Clevenger of Logansport preserved a watermelon last August by covering the end of the stem with paraffin and on New Year's day she brought it to Peru for dinner at her sister's home. The melon had a good flavor and was solid and sound.

Wide Yawn Fractured Fireman's Rib.

Allentown, Pa.—A sharp pain in one side caught Mark Beitler, a member of Rittersville fire company, when he indulged in a wide yawn in the hosehouse. His suffering increased, so a physician was summoned and found one of Beitler's ribs fractured.

Unemployed Will Not Shovel Snow.

New York.—Notwithstanding reports of unemployment in New York city, a call for 3,000 snow shovelers, paid $5.20 for an eight-hour day, brought comparatively little response.

HUNT TREASURE SHIP

Another Search Started for Sunken Spanish Galleon.

Florida Adventurers Dig Ocean's Bottom for Pirate Ship and Stolen Doubloons.

Miami, Fla.—Another search for treasure-trove—a sunken Spanish galleon laden with stolen doubloons—has begun on the Atlantic coast of Florida, between Deerfield and Boca Ratone.

Romance has lured this time a group of adventurous men of Deerfield and thereabouts to dig in the ocean's bottom for the buccaneers' pirate ship, which tradition says had hauled too close to the treacherous shores when pursued. A syndicate formed for the search has begun operations where the galleon is supposed to have sunk in the sands.

This is only one of the many such adventures off the south Florida coast which in the old days, before the advent of lighthouses, was the scene of many wrecks. Treasure seekers have brought in a few ancient hulls which had been deeply buried in sand, some dating back five or six centuries. But so far no ship thus recovered has yielded anything except ancient wood. One prospector is said to have spent two fortunes near Stuart before quitting the romantic game.

Fulford, 11 miles north of Miami, has been the scene of many searches. Tradition has it that a pirate ship escaped pursuers by sailing up a creek near Fulford where the crew celebrated by getting drunk.

Seminole Indians boarded the vessel and massacred the crew, except one, the story runs, and the escaped pirate succeeded in rescuing the ship's treasure chest filled with gold which he buried near by, making a diagram of the spot. Unable to return, the pirate is said to have given the diagram to a friend.

This has been used by several searching parties, equipped with every kind of a gold finder, but they failed to locate the treasure.

A native, living near by, says the spot is haunted and that even now the ghosts of the pirates howl and groan when one nears it.

He says no one is ever going to get the treasure as the ghosts "carry on something terrible when you get close to it, and there is no telling what they would do if they got their hands on it. Anything might happen in that terrible place."

20 CENTS DAY HAITIAN WAGE

But Many of the Natives Live in Houses Built of Mahogany at That.

Port au Prince.—There is no high labor market in Haiti.

The man working by the day gets one gourde, which is 20 cents, and sometimes a gourde and a half. Cooks are to be had without advertising. Most of them earn $1.50 a week, and in addition get 6 cents a day on which to feed themselves and their flock. You do not have to include carfare in the weekly wage down here.

At some points in the interior wages for cooks are even lower. Many of them live in mahogany houses, at that.

Haiti's population is estimated around 2,500,000. Ninety-seven per cent of these people are classed as illiterate, which may account for the size of the pay envelope.

JUST COMMON BOY

A boy's a being of the rarest kind,
With soul and body and an active mind;
With cheery face and tousled hair,
And never a thought of worry or care.

He eats and sleeps and romps and plays,
And tumbles and talks in funny ways,
He whistles and sings—delights in noise,
He's one of those jolliest, rollicking boys.

He's sure a rustler, for sport and fun,
He'll play on the square—the average one;
But he needs the touch of a guiding hand,
If you'd build him up as God has planned.

He's the raw material for making men,
Shaped in the mould of what we've been;
Will he reach the goal and stand four square,
Then say we've helped to put him there?

If you'd build a boy to be a man,
Along the lines of the Creator's plan;
If you'd have him stand and face the wrong,
With head and shoulders above the throng.

Then give him a hand—forget what's bad,
T'will make the angels in heaven glad;
And the Lord himself, it's sure to please,
For the kingdom of Heaven is of such as these.

Mr. Friday

By KATE EDMONDS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"A squall!" cried Dorothy as the little launch headed for home.

Nan glanced over her shoulder at the yellow-brown clouds rapidly obscuring the sun. "We cannot reach the Point," she declared. "We must make for the nearest island."

"Is there any danger?" asked timid Dorothy, who had been insistent about remaining outside the breakwater.

"I think not," panted Nan, for her heart was throbbing fast. She was a little fearful of making the nearest island before the storm burst and Little Petrel island was a dangerous place to land. Many a small boat had gone down off the cruel rocks. When they were within a boat's length of the beach the wind broke loose with a scream of fury. A long wave rushed the boat upon the beach and left it there in the soft sand. The salt spray stung their lips and eyes.

Somehow they stumbled out of the boat and were thankful to feel solid ground under foot. Nancy tied the boat to a tree, for the tide was rushing in and they might lose it any moment.

"It is so exposed here on the windward side, let us walk around to the east beach; it will be warmer and drier there."

The wind snatched the words from her lips and tossed them away. The two girls screamed at each other and then laughed because not a word could be heard. At last they resorted to signs, and having found a substitute for speech, they started to walk around the shore, just above the high water mark. Here were long stretches of dried seaweed, tangled with tiny shells, and Nan scooped up several armfuls and bade Dorothy do the same.

Both Girls Turned Pale.

"If we have to stay here all night it will make a good bed," she informed her companion.

It was then that Dorothy found the footprint in the sand and pointed it out to Nan. Both girls turned pale, for the footprint was freshly made—a generous shoe had made it—there was the print of a heel and a rubber sole.

It was pointed in the direction they were going.

"Shall we keep on?" pantomimed Dorothy.

Nan shook her head and motioned back. They retreated and went back to the boat, and finding the tide was still rising they entered the grove of trees. "It is quiet here," shrieked Dorothy, sinking down on the dry sand.

Nan followed suit and then, impatient of inaction, she jumped up again and explored the grove. In five minutes she was standing on the east beach and the footprint in the sand was explained.

Nan glared resentfully at the young man in white duck who was broiling bacon over a small fire in a scooped out sand hole. He looked at her in mild surprise.

"We have with us today," he began, but Nan only smiled scornfully and turned away. "Ninny," she said impolitely, and one must admit that this was not quite the proper way for two strangers to open conversation.

"I was going to ask you why you intruded," he observed. "This is the island of Robinson Crusoe—and the island was nonsuffragist, you will remember!"

"Fancy!" drawled Nan, just because he hated the word. Ah, she knew this young man well. She had been engaged to marry him up to 2 o'clock this very afternoon. It was now 6 and the bacon smelt divinely. Dorothy had detected the odor of bacon and now came running into the scene.

For once she was stricken dumb before the vision of the island inhabitant. She looked from one to the other and her lips curved into a little smile. She was hungry. If Nan wanted to quarrel with the nicest man at Coral Point, very well! Dorothy Wellwood must eat, and to eat one must make friendly advances even to an enemy. The wretch had cornbread, too! And coffee—it was too much.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Crusoe—"she began.

"Name's Friday," protested the gentleman impaling strips of bacon on a neatly trimmed twig. "Starved?"

Dorothy nodded. "Please, Mr. Friday." Then, when he had made her a bacon sandwich, she took a huge bite and went over to the enemy, sitting down in the sand and conversing with him in the most friendly way imaginable.

"Shipwrecked?" he asked.

Dorothy told their story, calling upon Nan to verify the facts, but Nan sat at a distance her face turned stonily away, her heart sore and resentful. She was watching the waves as they pounded on the rocks below. she wondered if he would care if she was lying dead there among the seaweed.

She was feeling very sad—tomorrow they were leaving Coral Point and she might never see him again. He had a teasing way with him that irked her—now, only a few hours after the quarrel, she was missing him. What had they quarreled about? Such a trifle—she was shocked that she had almost forgotten the cause. He was coming now, with Dorothy, she could hear their voices in friendly argument.

"If I loved anyone—well enough to become engaged—well enough to plan to spend the rest of my life with him—or her," declared wise young Dorothy, "and remember it would have to be a great and glorious love (or I wouldn't love at all), then, it would have to be some huge difference that would separate us! If he wanted to wear red neckties, even—and I loathe them—I would say I love the man and I can learn to endure red neckties—because I loved him so much and he would feel the same way about trifles—and—I must see about the boat!" and Dorothy fled around the beach, leaving Nan and the Man Friday alone together.

She got up and stood uncertainly, tears were brimming her eyes, and she could hear his beloved footsteps coming nearer. She must be first to make amends. She was in the wrong.

"Mr. Friday," she called in a quavering voice. "I am sorry!"

What Mr. Friday said was intended for Nan's ear alone, but I am sure it had nothing to do with red neckties. Young Dorothy coming suddenly upon them, dashed back out of sight and when she had subdued her giggles, announced her coming by a brisk "Ship ahoy—hotel launch in the offing!" and scampered away.

Jim Treadwell smiled tenderly down at Nan. "The blessed angel," he muttered, unaware that the angel in question was eating up the bacon and cornbread.

One for Mother.

Bobbie's mother had not been well for some time and had, naturally, been a little more strict with the children than was usual. During this time Bobbie started kindergarten.

One day his grandmother asked him how he liked school and his teacher.

Bobbie replied: "O, fine, grandma, and I sure do like teachers. They aren't cross, like mothers."

MERRY SEX WAR ON

Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Throes of Controversy.

Plate Printers' Union Charges That There Are Too Many "Trifling Girls" in the Bureau.

Washington.—A merry sex war is in progress in Uncle Sam's money factory.

The war started when the Plate Printers' union in the bureau of engraving and printing made formal charges that there were too many "trifling girls" in the bureau and that they were retarding the efficiency and the amount of production of paper money. In their charges the plate printers intimated that too much time was spent by girls employed in the bureau in administering "little dabs of paint and powder." In fact it was intimated that the plate printers objected to "flappers" being employed in the bureau.

The plate printers let themselves in for trouble.

Federal Employees' Union No. 105, embracing the women employees of the bureau, at an indignation meeting, condemned the attitude of the plate printers, denied their charges and deplored their giving publicity to what they alleged to be a misstatement of facts.

Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary of the union, declared that the records of the examining division showed that the greatest percentage of spoilage of printers' work is for "slywipes," "lifts" and "breaks," which spoilage could in no way be attributed to the assistants.

"Plate printers are paid by the piece rate and in many instances the presses are speeded up for production at the expense of the quality of the work," Miss McNally stated.

It is predicted that the charges of the Plate Printers' union will result in considerable friction in the future between the printers and their assistants, since if inefficiency does exist the responsibility for the same has been placed by one side on the other.

Swiss Father Sues Detective Bureau for False Recommendation of Daughter's Suitor.

Geneva.—M. Wader, a wealthy resident of Bienne, Switzerland, has just sued a detective agency for wrongly recommending a man as husband for his daughter and has obtained a verdict of 140 pounds, with costs, against the agency.

The prospective father-in-law engaged the agency at a cost of 500 pounds to investigate the reputation and habits of the young man who had asked for the hand of his daughter. The detectives reported that the youth was worthy, reliable and sober.

After six months of wedded life, the bride returned to her father's home with the information that the bridegroom has dissipated her dowry in riotous living and gambling.

Of East Indian Origin.

The Hindustani word "pajama" means literally "leg clothing," and it applies to the thin loose trousers tied around the waist, which are worn by Mohammedan men and women. The English adaptation, spelled "pyjamas" abroad, but "pajamas" in the United States, is applied not only to the trousers, but to a suit made up of trousers and blouse, worn in the dressing room or as a sleeping garment.

ORPHAN FINDS HOME

Miss Clara Brown, Los Angeles, while visiting the Diamond Bar ranch, was moved with sympathy by an orphaned two-day-old pig. She took the little one, and now "Diamond" enjoys all the comforts of a pretty home. His happiest moments are at meal time, when Miss Brown feeds the "baby," as the picture shows.

Three Meals Means Wife Does 2-Mile Walk Daily

Montgomery, Ala.—Preparation of meals for an average family means a two-mile daily kitchen marathon for the housewife, according to statistics compiled for the conference of vocational workers of the south, in session here. A pedometer attached to students in the kitchen of the model home at Livingston school showed this measurement for the stove-sink-and-pantry route covered during the period from bacon and eggs to dinner and dessert.

German Residents in Paris.

Paris.—Germans to the number of 1,965 have succeeded in obtaining permission to reside here, according to the Prefecture of Police registration of foreigners in Paris. Italians lead the list with 41,350, while the United States is fifth with 23,630. Other nationals include 36,060 Belgians, 29,000 Swiss, 27,650 English, 23,000 Russians and 14,000 Poles. There are 88 Australians and 254 Bulgarians besides 7,892 South and Central Americans.

North Carolina Mule Routed Dairy Invader

A terrific racket in the barn of A. Johnson, a farmer, of near Raleigh, N. C., announced that a milk thief had met his Waterloo at the business end of a farm mule.

Johnson had planted the mule in the stall of a cow which the thief had been milking at night. When the farmer reached the barn, shotgun in hand, he found a battered milk pail, a wrecked milking stool, a hat, a self-satisfied mule, but no thief.

Social Stunts

A pleasant time was had by 20 little guests who gathered at the home of Wilma Elliott, 457 S. Hague Ave., Saturday afternoon, to help celebrate her 8th birthday. At 2:30 the little guests were ushered into the dining room by the grandmother, who had planned the happy event for the little ones. The dining room was beautifully decorated with pink and white, in potted plants. A beautiful march was played by the hostess.

Refreshments of ice cream, cake, candy and nuts. Those present were: Dorthy Bobst, Emma Koontz, Cathryn Kooch, Helen Jaynes, Helen McColl, Paulne Hatton, Mildred Clover, May Knisley, Ruth Muruth, Alice Dysart, Alice Crabb, Margaret Hawkins, Maud Mohford, Ruth Dolder, Dorthy Brown, Lucerian Saul, Clifford Saul, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Red, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bitzer, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Red and the hostess, Wilma Elliott. All went to their homes claiming they had a happy time and wishing the hostess many more returns of the day. Many beautiful and useful presents were received by the hostess.

The Jolly Jingles Weekly Club met in regular session at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Millers, 87 N. Ogden Ave., the 26th inst. The evening was spent in progressive sports; music was furnished by the Jingles Orchestra. Burt Leaming acted as Butler waited on the guests, with a "Beg yo padon; glad to see yo heah." Walter Miller acted as toastmaster and saw that all were abundantly supplied with keen appetizers. Dare Boyer ran the candy department. Everything seemed to stick close to him, and several times the guests had to keep him out of the mire. Charley Rhule was the mascot. He was into everything. Mr. Dewitt and Mrs. Florence Miller were the champion card players. Mr. Charles Rhule and Mrs. McCormick were the champion losers. The Club closed at 1:30 a. m., to hold its next meeting at Mr. and Mrs. Bert Leaming's, at 91 N. Wheatland Ave.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Dewitt, two daughters, Marie and Juanita; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rhule, Mr. and Mrs. John McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Boyer, Harry L., Forrest, Edmund and Herman Boyer, Misses Helen and Dorothy Boyer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Miller, Edwin and Eugene Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lenning, Miss Iva Roberts, Edna Baumeister, Harrol Lee, Bill Rogers.

Those present were Miss Emma Hire, Ethel Pontious, Marie Diebel, Kathern Swartz, Pearl King, Bert Jones, Virginia Allen, Florence Sohl, Norma Black, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Helen Leonard, Mrs. Brown and Miss Mulligan.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Nelson of 171 Midland Ave., entertained on Friday afternoon in honor of their little daughter, Emma Jeanette's, sixth birthday. The following guests were present: Mrs. E. E. Alford, children Louise, Sam and Charles Edward, Miss Marie Louks, Catherine McCall, Adele Bishop, Betty Cannon, Gertrude Alford, Nellie and Catherine Philips, Mrs. H. W. Buckley and Billy Nelson.

---

Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt and Mrs. O. B. Hills gave a birthday dinner in honor of their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ogg, Sunday, January 30th. The table was beautifully decorated with a color scheme of green, pink and white. Two cakes with birthday candles were used with a centerpiece of narcissus, pink sweet peas and smilax. The color scheme was carried out in favors and place cards, etc. Other members of the party were Mr. Ogg's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Ogg of Ironton, O., Mr. and Mrs. O. B Hills, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt and little son Kenneth and the honor guests, Mr and Mrs. A. L. Ogg.

---

The Midland Ave. Bible class was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Mary Ellen Welch, 293 Midland Ave., Wednesday, January 26th. Mrs. Welch was assisted in entertaining by her daughters, Mrs. Black wood, Mrs. Hoge and Mrs. Hegwood, and the lesson study conducted by Mrs. E. E. Gillilan.

---

Rev. and Mrs. J. N. Johnston, 90 Eldon Ave., were pleasantly surprised at their home by members and friends of the congregation of the Hilltop Church of Christ on Wednesday evening, Jan. 26.

Music was furnished by the Girls Glee Club, led by Miss Louise Haner, and by Mr. Arthur Douglas, violinist. Luncheon was served by the women of the church. Rev. and Mrs. Johnston were presented a box of gold coins. Seventy-six guests were present.

Little Story That's True

During the speech of Supt. Collicot at W. Broad St. School last Friday evening when an interrogation was suggested rather than implied in his statement, "I suppose some of you little fellows know what I mean when I speak of dad being a grouch," one urchin promptly answered, with more truth, perhaps, than tact, "Uh-Uh!"

There'll certainly nothing "get by" with that lad, and it requires no stretch of the imagination to trace a mental picture of dad, the paddle and the wood shed for the youngster.

George's Kiddie Corner

What letter would have made Noah's ark noisy?
B, for it would have made it bark.
What is a ground hog? Sausage.
Customer—Are you sure this is Ceylon tea? Yes, madam, Mr. Ceylon's name is on every package.
Can you give a word that spells backward and forward the same. Madam.
What state is high in the middle and round at both ends? OHIO.

At the Hilltop boys' meeting at Glenwood church last Thursday night 125 boys were present. An interesting program of song and fun was enjoyed by all. Rev. F. A. Doty, who has had experience with anti-cigarette work among boys in Chicago presented interesting facts concerning the results of cigarette smoking among boys, which was listened to with interest. 44 boys signed cigarette pledges, which, with 50 who had previously signed, makes a total of 94, besides pledges that are being presented to boys and signed in the various Sunday schools on the Hilltop. This is a work in which all Hilltop citizens should be interested. It is a well known fact that the use of cigarettes among boys is on the increase, even affecting boys as young as 6 and 7 years old. If we are citizens with the welfare of our boys, who are to be our future men, at heart, we should all be interested in this matter.

And right here, we wish to state that not a few of our younger school girls are reported as using the cigarette also.

While in the army I was accompanied by a sergeant that, to hear him talk, was one of the brainiest men Uncle Sam had hired. On pass one Sunday, a young woman we met on the street asked us if we cared to go to her house and have a cup of coffee. On arriving we were introduced to her mother who made excuses in regard to her appearance.

She remarked: "I'll go and put on the percolator."

The sergeant said "Oh, you look all right the way you are." IT I in the Chicago Tribune

GROUNDHOG DAY

The regular meetin' of the Steddy Club wuz called to order in the opery house, on the second of Febberary; an a kordin to the fillosefers of this club, an fer the inferm'shun of the citizens an members, we air informed that this here is Groundhog Day.

The President had jist finished these remarks, whin thar wuz a rappin at the outy room dore, an Bro Eb Snafer wuz appinted to find out who's a tryin to brake inter the sacred precintz of this club. When the dore wuz opened Hezzie Simson the financil secretary, rugh outer breth, an a swetin' like Ab Peters, when he's discoursin on the reasons why the Panerma Curnal can never be navergated; an why Columby oughter hav the controllin power of all ther forrin ships that sale thru the curnal.

Hezzie sed he'd ben workin nite an day for fore consecutive day's an nites to find out who wuz in good and reglar standin; an as his wife an dotter Virginy Maud, wuz takin ther fust lessons in Suffergets, he'd bin so hindered by takin' care of the childern an doin the house wurk, that he'd haf to ask 'nother week fur to complet his findins out.

Bill Wetherly ris an askt fer more inferm'shun, he sed he knowd a man what owned a full fledgd Ground Hog, an that it allus come out on the second of Febberary; an ever since he wuz nee hi to a duck he'd allus herd that the 2nd wuz the day.

Then the president called on the Prof. Willum Ashcraft Jenkuns, who wuz appinted fillosefer fer the Steddy Club, to give the club the inferm'shun. Willum Ashcraft Jenkuns, ris and sed, Mr. most noble and worthy president, an feller members of this honorable and respectd club; I perseve that there is some more or less lack of nollege amung the members of this honerable and respected club, concernin the origin, and othenticity of this celebratd and much misunderstood legel hollerday.

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

A special session of the Baraca Men's Bible Class at 9:15.

The subject of the sermon at the morning service is "Controlling the Resources."

The Leagues will meet in their usual times for the religious training of the young people.

A rare treat is in store for us at the evening preaching service when Mr. E. Dow Bancroft will make an address. Mr. Bancroft is a Christian layman who has given himself to the evangelistic work of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is working with the Centenary Board. You must not miss hearing him.

Our church is to do its part in the Gypsy Smith campaign, which is to begin February 13 and continue until March 3rd. Much prayer is necessary and renewed activities along all lines of church work.

The pastor will preach on two vital themes next Sunday Morning, "Present, But Passing, Opportunities." Evening, "Love."

bracing forms of such wide divergence as grasses, wild lilies and oak and walnut trees, as well as cacti and other unusual plants.

"While a plant may thrive well in its new situation," said Dr. MacDougal, "it will sometimes display a behavior quite at variance with that by which it is ordinarily known. Thus the common witchhazel, which is known to bloom in the vicinity of New York when the frosts come, when taken to the equitable climate of the Pacific coast reverts to the normal or summer-blooming habit. Other species show flower forms, fruits and leaves notably different from those previously displayed by them.

"Aquatic plants of the cress family were made to grow in soil on the mountain tops, where the roots formed small radishes, like their relatives. The radish is a cress. In other words, these plants came back to the ancestral habit of forming a radish.

Interest to Biologists.

"The manner in which plants travel about the world or are distributed is a problem of great interest to biologists, and in this experimental work particular attention was given to obtaining evidence on some of the problems of dissemination or movement of plants across the face of the country."

It was found that rabbits and rodents which inhabit the oak zone at the top of the mountain range acted very effectively as a barrier to prevent cacti and other plants from moving up or down the mountain slopes. To verify this a barrage zone was established and the plants protected in screened enclosures which kept off the little nibbling animals. The plants thrived and prospered and spread within the enclosed section. Out in the open, to either side of the barrage zone, they rapidly disappeared, being eaten by the rabbits. This explained the mysterious sudden stoppage of some of these plants—not altitude nor heat nor cold, but actual destruction through being eaten. The animals were like a fence.

The coastal laboratory at Carmel-by-the-Sea and the desert laboratory at Tucson, Ariz., are two of the experimental stations which were used in this work.

FIND WRIGGLING EEL MINE

Steam Shovel Lifts Them Out by Hundreds From Wharf Site at Plymouth, Mass.

Plymouth, Mass.—Digging out eels in hundreds of pounds with a steam shovel is a novelty introduced here.

The steam shovel used by the contractor for the removal of Pilgrim wharf in the changes being made along the waterfront where the Plymouth Rock reservation is being made did the trick. Digging is being made with a grab bucket near low water mark at the outer end of the pier.

The bucket arose once with a full cargo, nearly a cubic yard, of squirming eels, some of which weighed four pounds apiece. Fishermen say the eels had bedded in the mud beneath the wharf for the winter, and this accounted for the eel mine.

LIVE LIKE ANIMALS

Six Thousand Refugee Greeks Reported in Fearful Plight.

People at Batum Lack Clothing and Shelter and Are Dying at Rate of From 35 to 50 a Day.

New York.—Six thousand Greek refugees at Batum, Transcaucasia, their clothing worn to shreds, are "living like wild animals in dens" and dying at the rate of from thirty-five to fifty a day, writes Dr. W. E. Rambo, a Near East Relief worker of West Philadelphia, Pa., in a report from the Black sea port received here.

In what he calls "a tragic exodus that bids to become historic," Dr. Rambo says the Greek government already has repatriated 20,000 who emigrated from the Near East to colonize Thrace and that from 10,000 to 12,000 remain to be transported from Batum back to their homeland.

Most of these, he says, are physically strong, but the 6,000 refugess from other regions who flocked to Batum in the expectation of relief have been in that city five months, waiting in vain for help, their condition daily becoming more desperate on account of the rigors of the present Georgian winter.

The Greek government, Dr. Rambo explains, disclaiming responsibility for the plight of the people, has undertaken, through humane considerations only, to feed and doctor the refugees, but, so far, has declined to transport them to Greece, on the ground that there is insufficient housing there to shelter them.

"Meanwhile," the letter says, "the 6,000 are overcrowded in barracks unfit for human habitation. The families have no privacy. Some are lying in bed day and night because they have no clothing to protect them from the cold or cover their nakedness. Unless speedy relief comes to these people, most of them will die during the winter. Already the remnants of the original refugees are in despair. One of them said to me: 'We are no longer waiting for ships; we are waiting for death.' Of 5,767 in this party in the beginning, only about 2,400 remain 3,367 are dead. Another party of 6,800 has 2,800 survivors 4,000 are dead. Of the survivors 700 are ill."

Kissing Common With Ancients.

The ancients used kissing as a common form of salutation, as the modern world uses handshaking. Among the Greeks the most casual acquaintances, incidentally meeting in travel, kissed each other. The Romans went to even greater lengths, and, according to historians, the custom became "a veritable nuisance to the country." Each one ordained that everybody must do it and one old Roman poet has immortalized in verse his ruse to escape the [illegible]. ## 14-YEAR TESTS OF PLANT LIFE

Reveal That Wild Flora Do Not Always Grow in Most Congenial Habitat.

ENVIRONMENT IS CHANGED

Flowers Taken From Mountain Tops Grow Much More Luxuriantly and Produce More Leaves, Flowers and Fruit at Sea Level.

Chicago.—At a lecture given before an assemblage of geographers and biologists representing several societies, Dr. D. T. MacDougal, director of the Botanical research department of the Carnegie institution at Washington, described the results of a series of experiments extending over fourteen years and embracing 139 species of plants, the experiments tending to show that the wild plant is not always found in the environment most suited to it.

"A great many people think this," said Dr. MacDougal, "but it has been found to be absolutely false."

With stations established at four different altitudes, 8,000 feet, 5,200 feet, 2,300 feet and at sea level, plants have been transferred from one place to another, and the results of the cultural experiments of fourteen years have now been compiled.

Grow More Luxuriantly.

In these experiments plants from the mountain tops some from a height of close to one and one-half miles above sea level, were found to grow much more luxuriantly, producing more leaves, flowers and fruits at sea level than they [illegible] native habitat. These plants [illegible]

U. S. MAINTAINS AIR LEADERSHIP

Good Performances Offset Decreased Production and Contraction of Industry.

LONG FLIGHTS SUCCESSFUL

Clear Federal Policy to Aid Progress of Commercial Flying Is Still Lacking—Year's Feats Are Recorded.

New York.—America has successfully maintained her leadership in the navigation of the air, so far as heavier than air craft are concerned, despite the lack of aerial laws, landing fields and other such handicaps, according to a review of the year 1920, issued by the Manufacturers' Aircraft association. The review says:

"Decreased production and a general contraction in the aeronautical industry generally is offset by the more encouraging records of performance made in American aviation this year. While the last twelve months have not brought the carefully outlined policy of federal jurisdiction required to assure steady and economical progress in commercial aviation, they have witnessed many remarkable achievements by American pilots in American machines."

Year's Performances.

Then follows a long, detailed list of performances, among them the following:

"Commander A. C. Read, hero of the transatlantic flight in the NC-4, commanded the same flying boat on a noteworthy expedition from Rockaway, L. I., down the Atlantic coast, along the gulf coast and up the Mississippi river to Cairo, Ill. When the NC-4 returned to Rockaway January 27 last it had flown 7,740 nautical miles. Three of the four Packard Liberty engines had operated without trouble during the 118 hours in the air, the fourth more than eighty-two hours. Along the Mississippi the motors were run on commercial gasoline picked up from point to point en route. Read reported that the greatest difficulty encountered was lack of proper maps.

"Compared to long-flight attempts conducted by European governments the American ventures were particularly successful. No less than four expeditions attempted to fly the 5,206 miles from Cairo to Capetown, South Africa. Colonel P. Van Ryndveld and Major C. J. O. Braud finally completed their flight on March 20, 1920, in a DH-9 plane sent up by the government of the Union of South Africa after their Vickers-Vimy machine had crashed. They had set out from Cairo February 10. None of the machines that started reached Capetown.

"Different success attended the Alaskan flying expedition of the United States Army Air service. Four Gallaudet remodelled DH-4-B planes, each powered with a single Liberty motor, and each carrying two persons flew from Mitchel Field, L. I., to Nome, Alaska, and return in 112 hours flying time, a total distance of 9,000 miles, without a motor missing fire or other accident serious enough to delay the party. Rain and fog caused most of the difficulty in flying over country not even charted on the maps.

Operation of Air Mail Service.

"The Air Mail in 1920 operating between New York and Washington, New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, Salt Lake City and San Francisco, transported approximately one hundred million letters at ordinary postage rates. The system was extended in 1920 from Chicago to San Francisco, from Key West, Fla., to Havana, Cuba, and from Seattle, Wash., to Victoria, B. C. About thirty-five air mail planes are in the air each day flying a total, in round trips, of about 8,000 miles.

"During the year the navy has been making an aerial survey of the Panama Canal zone.

"The geological survey has cooperated with the marine corps in mapping the coastline of Hayti. American seaplanes, Curtiss, Aeromarine and Boeing types, have operated on passenger routes in China.

"Major R. W. Schroeder, flying an American designed and built Packard-Lepero biplane, went up from McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, on February 26, and reached the world's record altitude of 32,000 feet."

EXECUTE 4 FOR FLOUR THEFTS

Polish Soldiers Found Guilty of Stealing Nine Sacks From Army Are Shot.

Cracow, Poland. — Four soldiers found guilty of having stolen nine sacks of American flour from army supplies were shot recently.

The executions were carried out under a law passed by the diet last year making it a capital offense to steal from the army. A fifth soldier, also court-martialed, in connection with the flour theft, was sentenced to prison, as it was shown that he had taken a minor part in the affair.

Coal Mining Took Heavy Toll of Life.

Washington.—More than 1,500 men lost their lives in coal mine accidents in the first nine months of 1920, according to a report of the United States bureau of mines.

CORONATION DRESS FOR SALE

Gown Worn by Empress Marie Louise to Be Offered at Auction in Paris.

Paris.—The beautiful dress worn by Empress Marie Louise, second wife of Napoleon, on the day of her coronation as empress of the French will be sold at auction shortly.

The dress is made of exquisite lace made by the French lace workers of Calvados, to whom Napoleon himself sent the design.

It was stolen from the Tuileries during the riots of the revolution of 1848 and found its way to the Galliera museum. The empress was the daughter of Emperor Francis I, of Austria

DONALD'S DADDY

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(©) 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Edith—quick, who is that?" Marjorie pointed at the disappearing form of a man.

"Why—Donald's daddy. Oh, Richard, do come here!" Edith jumped up from the comfortable swinging hammock in which she and her friend, Marjorie, had been sitting. She ran out the front gate and after her own youngest son, who was fast gaining on her in the chase. "Richard! Richard!" she called.

Marjorie folded her hands complacently and, to herself remarked that at least there were some advantages in single blessedness.

"Donald's daddy! Well, that's definite, I'm sure. I suppose after one is married merely somebody's daddy or [illegible]'s mammy or somebody's wife," she soliloquized, while her friend still gave chase to the truant son.

Marjorie had been doing settlement and social work in various parts of the country and now was taking a vacation as the guest of her college roommate. More than once during the fortnight that she had spent at this home she had seen the tall form of the man across the street. Always he had been just disappearing behind the great trees that led into the woods to the station. Always there had flashed through Marjorie's mind a vague feeling that she had seen the man before.

Edith came up the garden path quite out of breath and leading young Richard none too gently by the hand. "Oh, Marj, my dear, stay single. Romance is all very well, but—well, there is more than romance with the big R to getting married."

"I'll say there is, Edith," Marjorie returned, laughingly.

Edith sent the young son into the house and sat down again beside Marjorie.

"Donald's daddy must have some other name, has he not?" Marjorie ventured after a moment.

"Oh—of course he has, but that's all we know—and the funny part of it is that he really isn't!"

"Isn't what?"

"Isn't Donald's daddy at all."

"Is there a Donald?" asked Marjorie, sitting up. "The plot thickens."

"Oh yes, there is a Donald, a duck of a Donald, five years old." Edith began. "You see, Donald's daddy had some kind of a romance in his young life once upon a time, dear, and one day, five years ago, when he was on a train going out West to direct some moving pictures in his great California studio, he met a young woman who was lugging an infant from a home where there was no room and no food for [illegible] to some place where it [illegible] are of. It's short of it is that the baby is Donald and the man is Donald's daddy. The young woman was a social worker and was taking the trip with the infant. Why—why—what's the matter, dear?"

"Matter enough—I'm the girl."

"Marjorie!"

"Oh—I'm not his romance—I'm just the social worker that was taking care of the baby and I thought the man looked familiar. Isn't it too weird for words, Edith?"

"Weird—it's queer."

The two girls talked the story over and finally decided to invite Donald's daddy over to dinner and let him tell the little social worker what progress he had made with his adopted son.

Edith, matronlike, was all a-quiver with the thought of the next chapter in the story. She had dinner prepared with especial care; she admonished her husband not to talk too much; she had all the candles lighted in the living room and a fire in the fireplace. "We'll have firelight and candlelight and—"

"And lovelight," laughed Ned, Edith's husband.

"Not so soon," protested Marjorie [illegible] wedded to you, work," Edith exclaimed as she took the girl into her arms.

"I—I was till I saw how madly Donald nee's a mother, Edith."

WHY THE EDITOR LEFT TOWN

Somebody sent the editor of the Piketon Gazette a few bottles of home brew. The same day he received for publication, a wedding announcement and a notice of an auction sale. Here are the results:

"Wm. Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction at my farm, one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves before a back ground of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy guests including two milk cows, six mules and one bobsled. Rev. Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay rope, and the bridal couple left on one good John Deere gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchasers."

"They will be at home to their friends with one good baby buggy and a few kitchen utensils after ten months from date of sale to responsible parties and some fifty chickens."—Exchange.

A judge asked the prisoner his name. He gave it but was not understood. Can you spell your name? Yes. O-double T-I-double U-E-double L—double-U-double-O-D. Not being able yet to understand the man's name, he asked him if he could write his name. He said: Yes I can. On being handed paper and pencil he wrote Ottiwell Wood.

Why are potatoes and corn like idols? Because, having eyes they see not and having ears they hear not.

APPALLING COST OF THE WAR

The world war reduced the population of the earth 40,000,000. This is the estimate of the Society for the Study of the Social Consequences of the war, a Copenhagen organization. Its figures include war casualties, rise in deaths and decline in births.

On this basis Russia was the heaviest sufferer, losing 13,000,000; Germany lost 6,300,000; Austria-Hungary, 5,800,000; France 3,340,000; Italy, 2,280,000; Great Britain, 1,850,000; Serbia, 1,660,000; Rumania, 670,000; Belgium 375,000; Bulgaria, 275,000; America, 300,000.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace places the direct cost of this slaughter at $186,000,000,000 and the indirect cost at $151,612,542,560.

All the wars between Napoleon's time and the world war showed a loss of life on the battlefield of only 4,450,000. The known dead of the world war battles total 9,998,771 and the missing 2,991,800.

Little Story That's True

"A SOFT ANSWER TURNETH AWAY WRATH"

An illuminating incident, illustrating the truth of the old saying "A Soft Answer Turneth Away Wrath" was witnessed by the writer some time ago on board a West Broad street car. It also illustrated how the use of tact will often help one over the "roughest spots."

The car was well loaded, as usual, during the busy hours between 4:30 and 6:00 o'clock P. M., however there still remained considerable standing room in the front portion of the car. The rear vestibule was jammed to overflowing. Men and boys filled the doorway and clung to every place possible to get a "hold" on step and the rear end of the car. After crossing Front Street, the car came to a stop and the conductor endeavored to close the door before crossing the river. The crowd in the doorway refused to forego the chance of getting home by waiting on the next car which, no doubt, would be just as heavily loaded. No policeman or "Hawkshaw" was upon the scene to exercise the authority of the law. The conductor, already at his "wits end" in trying to handle the crowd refused to further solicit the people to "step forward." The moment was tense with excitement and anxiety for every one was eager to get home and became restive and impatient under the delay. The car stood for minutes with the situation growing more tense and strained every minute. Criticisms and malediction were being heaped upon the car company and all concerned with it, for its failur to provide more and better facilities. Just when he had begun to think the situation was hopeless, a man in the doorway called out in a full, commanding but kindly tone, "Will that broad-shouldered gentleman in the aisle, step forward, the crowd surged forward in the car please?" Instantly as if by magic, and ample room was made for all. The crowd, quick to appreciatee the strategy of it and the spontaneous effect, became as light hearted as it had been serious. Meantime the car sped on its way to the Hilltop. Possibly there are some among the readers of the Record who will verify this tale.

FUNNY PARAGRAPHS

It was midnight on the ocean,
Not a street car was in sight;
The sun was shining brightly,
And it rained all day that night.

It was a summer's day in winter,
The sun was shining bright;
And everything that you could see
Was hidden out of sight.

It was a hot summer's day,
The snow was raining fast,
A barefoot boy with shoes on
Stood sitting on the grass.

It was evening and the rising sun
Was shining in the west,
And the little fishes in the trees
Were huddled in their nests.

While the organ peeled potatoes,
Lard was rendered by the choir;
While the sexton rang the dishrag
Someone set the church on fire.

"Holy Smoke!" the preacher shouted,
In the rain he lost his hair;
Now his head resembles heaven,
For there is no parting there.

Mrs. Louise Smeltzer, widow of Mr. John Smeltzer, died of complications Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Carter, 21 S. Wheatland Ave. She would have been 88 years old in April, and has been living with her daughter, Mrs. Carter, for several years. She was a member of the Methodist Church, also of the W. C. T. U. She is survived by two sons and one daughter. The funeral services were held Wednesday at the residence, with Rev. C. F. Bowman officiating. The body was sent to Gallipolis, O., Thursday, for burial, by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Funeral will be held at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday at the residence. The body was taken to Bloomingburg Thursday for burial.

DEER MADE INVITING MARK

Buck Apparently Too Preoccupied to Notice the Presence of Usually Dreaded Hunters.

It is not often that a deer is caught napping, but the writer can cite at least one instance of where this occurred. The scene was in the Adirondacks, Franklin county, not many miles from Loon Lake, the station on the New York Central and Delaware & Hudson. At his guide's suggestion, the hunter, who was on a camping trip in the mountains, had driven to a lonely mountain pond one afternoon. The guide knew that deer were in the habit of making the vicinity of the little lake their feeding ground, coming there for water. Frankly, he did not know whether they came in the morning or evening, but decided to try both periods. An old lumber camp was near the lake, having been operated in the winter when snow was on the ground, logs being floated downstream through the lake's outlet. This camp was made ready for occupancy during the night by cutting balsam boughs and spreading them on the floor. After supper the two visitors took their rifles and went to the head of the lake to find a deer, if possible.

Not a deer sign was found, and the guide guessed that perhaps hunters had been there and frightened the game away permanently. The group decided it would be better to seek other hunting quarters in the morning. But just after daybreak the guide rushed in, shouting that a deer was standing on the other side of the nearby pond. It was an easy shot.

Most remarkable was the fact, as stated by the guide, that he had made a lot of noise with the pots and pans he had been washing in the pond, and he had been in plain view of the deer. The conclusion reached was that the buck was so busily engaged in watching another deer, perhaps a rival buck, that it had failed to notice the presence of the humans.

Is your name on the Church Record? As the Recording Angel scans the roll and sees your name and then turns his eye upon the group of worshipers at 7:30, will he see you there? Or —

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran

Services at 10:30 and 7 o'clock, and on Wednesday evenings at 7:30.

Morning topic, "The Two Crosses."

Evening topic, "Jesus, True God and True Man."

Next Wednesday evening's topic, "Blind Bartemaeus."

THE HILLTOP EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Services at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m. Morning topic, "The Day of Salvation." Evening topic, "Gethsemane." Lenten services every Wednesday evening at 7:30. A ten-minute open forum after the sermon. May this season be one of true spiritual refreshing for one and all.

Come to all of our services. Help and receive help.

The Friendly Church on the Corner.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Dr. G R Robbins will preach on the following themes: Sunday morning, 10:30: "The First and Supreme Gift to Jesus." Evening, 7:30: "Christ's Boundless Compassion for Saints and Sinners." Baptism morning and night. This is the seventh Sunday in succession baptism has been administered, and 25 new members received since January 1st. Two hundred and twenty-eight in Sunday School last Sunday; offering $34. The Pastor and members never proselyte, but are prosperous financially and spiritually. It never pays to run after members of other churches who are easily influenced.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30—Morning Worship and sermon by the Pastor. Subject, "What Makes a City Great?" This is a message to prepare us for the Gypsy Smith meetings beginning on this Sunday afternoon. Special story sermon for the children.

7:30—Evening Service and message by the Pastor on "The Religion of Abraham Lincoln." This is in honor of Lincoln's birthday anniversary. What was his religion? Was he a skeptic, atheist or spiritualist, as some say? Why didn't he ever join the church? A sermon for thinking Americans. Baptism will be administered in the evening.

A full church heard the sermon last Sunday evening. Why not come and hear these messages which deal with the practical application of the Gospel of Christ to the needs of the modern world. You will be instructed and inspired, strengthened and cheered in life's tasks.

Prayer Meeting on Wednesday at 7:30. We are going through the New Testament and learning the synthetic method of Bible study. Subject, "How to Study Mark." Read that gospel and bring your Bible.

HILLTOP CHURCH OF CHRIST

Bible School, 9:30; Communion, 10:30. Morning sermon, "The Importance of Having Christ's Spirit." Evening sermon, "Jesus As a Preacher."

GLENWOOD METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Sunday School lesson is on "Christian Standards of Citizenship." Matt. 22 and Rom. 13. A good study in the light of the life of Lincoln.

Worshipful service, 10:30; subject, "Lincoln, a Prophet of God."

Epworth League meetings furnish services for all ages.

Evening Worship, 7 o'clock; subject "An Expression of Love."

The teacher training classes will meet this week on Friday evening at 7:30. The Sunday School lesson will be studied also. Last week the class study was very profitable. You are invited.

Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30.

The W. H. M. S. will hold its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at 2:00, February 17. At this meeting there will be a miscellaneous shower for one of the Home Missionary homes. There will also be a reception for new members.

The fourth division of the Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Miss Dora Major, 89 Clarendon Ave., Tuesday, February 15th, for an all-day meeting for the purpose of sewing. Bring your lunch.

Our church is to be back of the Gipsy Smith campaign heart and soul. To this end George Peters has been appointed chairman for the church program. Jasper Dean is the chairman of personal work. J. Q. Martsough is the usher. We desire to get all the help possible and to render all the service possible. There will be many calls for service through these chairmen appointed. Will you be a helper and receive a blessing thereby?

THE HOGE MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

9:15 A. M.—Bible School. Mr. Deems, Supt., is having a different platform each Sabbath.

10:30 A. M.—Morning Worship and Celebration of the Lord's Supper. Reception of new members. Anyone wishing to unite with this church is invited to come early before the service, meet the Elders and unite publicly Sabbath morning. We always welcome new members. Communion meditation, "If Ye Love Me." Music by male quartette.

6:30 P. M.—Senior Christian Endeavor. Topic, "Thy Kingdom Come—In My Home." Consecration meeting.

7:30 P. M.—Evening Song and Worship. Sermon postponed from two weeks ago on the subject, "Three R's of Religion." This sermon seeks to bring peace and calm to the fretful, nervous, rushing, commercial age in which we are living. Male quartette sings.

Gipsy Smith, the evangelist, asks that all Church people continue their good wook while he is in the city. We will therefore hold services as usual. We ask the Church people to hear him during the week.

We welcome you.

From The Columbus Citizen, Monday, February 7th:

"Woman, the silent sufferer and chief victim of all war, the one who has paid the most and has had the least to say, must have a more prominent voice in the discussion of future wars. Not by a strike in marriage and motherhood, but in a more noble and Godgiven way will she pave the way to universal peace." Thus declared Rev. Arthur E. Cowley, pastor of Hill Crest Baptist Church in his sermon Sunday on "What May We Expect of the Woman of the Future?" "Mothers of the world will accomplish the abolition of war through their teachings of the practical application of the ideals of Christ and the giving of life to service, thus humanizing humanity," said Dr. Cowley.

Made Pets of Baby Elephants.

We cut holes in the rattan webbing between the posts and enticed the small elephants to come out. There were several babies in the lot, and they soon became playful and affectionate. Baby elephants are just three feet high at birth and weigh about 300 pounds. They grow an inch each month. We made pets of them, and we did this by taking a pail of warm milk and dipping the babies' trunks into it, then doubling the trunks up and putting them into their owners' mouths, and finally squirting milk in with a squirt gun. The babies soon learned to imitate this procedure. They were mischievous little animals, full of fun and inquisitiveness. Hour after hour, I played with them and laughed until I ached.—Charles Mayer in Asia Magazine.

WASTING TIME

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Really Bert, it can't continue any longer. We're both wasting our time. Father has said so all along, and I've come to realise he's right. You've had your opportunity and you've proved yourself a failure. How can you expect me to marry you?"

Mildred Stewart spoke in a rather unfeeling manner. She sat in a rocking chair while Bert Townsend occupied a davenport nearby. About them were evidences of a hurricane having struck the interior of the house. The floors were bare of rugs and the wall of pictures. Little furniture could be seen.

"It seems to me," Mildred went on, "that our leaving Ohio—father and I—is the best thing. It's an opportunity for us to call it quits. I can't marry a failure. It isn't the financial angle of it so much; it's just the idea of having a failure for a husband."

She captured some stray yellow locks and tucked them beneath the dust cap she was wearing. Her face, with perfect complexion and features, bore an expression betokening resolute purpose.

Bert, his dark face grave, looked silently out the window for a moment, then turned and said quietly with a smile:

"Yes, Mildred, I'm a failure; at least in a business way."

"And that's what counts," Mildred said quickly. "You're a graduate of a medical school; you have a diploma and also an office with a sign in front. But you have no practice."

Motionless Beside the Bunk Sat Bert.

"True, true," he agreed sadly. "I have no practice, so I'm a failure. I might be ever so good a physician, but I haven't the trade. Still, all my patients are living except one, and he died of old age."

"That's it," Mildred said. "You haven't lost a patient because you haven't had many. And the only ones who came to you were those turned down by other physicians because they didn't have the money to pay their bills. You have a careless way about you that shows you lack a sense of responsibility. Bert, your way of speaking, your bearing, the manner in which you dress show lack of responsibility. I have asked you to give up the idea of being a doctor and really go to work, but you repeatedly refused. So I've decided to concur in father's wishes and give you up. I'll say good-by now and never see you again."

Far into the night a light burned in Dr. Townsend's office while he sat and smoked a pipe and thought, and thought, and thought.

Far into the night a light burned in Mildred Stewart's room. She sat on the edge of the bed and tore letters into fine shreds and threw them into a waste basket, and cried now and then, and occasionally looked at a picture standing on her dressing table. While she had been speaking in apparently an unfeeling manner to Bert her heart had been breaking.

It was homesickness as much as anything that took Wilbert Stewart and his daughter back to Tennessee. They longed for a sight of the Unaka mountains, in whose shadow the family had lived for generations. So Mr. Stewart sold out his hardware business in Newark and purchased a peanut plantation in Tennessee.

Before settling on the plantation Mr. Stewart and his daughter went on a camping trip in the mountains. The father needed a vacation from work and Mildred's mind needed a vacation from pondering over her unsuccessful love affair.

With them they took a mountaineer guide, and they selected a deserted hut as their temporary abode. The outing was enjoyable for every one concerned until Mr. Stewart contracted a severe cold, and was obliged to take to his bunk and remain there. Fever took hold and his condition rapidly became serious.

"We've got to have a doctor," Mildred decided one morning, as she sat at her father's bedside, listening to his incoherent chatter. "I've done all I can, Jim, and so have you. I can't diagnose the case."

"Me neither," said Jim, hovering helpless nearby. "It's got me. We sure need a doctor, but I never heard of one round here."

"Go to Slope Side and see if you can't find one," she pleaded. "There may be some one there who can help us."

It did not offer much encouragement, but Jim set out, astride a horse, at his best pace.

All day Mildred sat by her father, watching from the cabin window for Jim's returning. It was a long way to Slope Side.

"It's all over, I'm afraid," Mildred was whispering some time later, when the door opened and Jim stepped in, followed by a young man in mountaineer's garb.

"Bert!" Mildred ejaculated. "Why, how—"

"No mystery," said Bert concisely, taking her hand for an instant. "I just simply had to be in the same state as you, as I'm living in the mountains of Tennessee."

He unstrapped a medicine case from about his body and after a close examination of the patient mixed a portion in a glass and forced it between the sick man's lips.

"What is it? Is there any hope?" Mildred breathed anxiously.

"Pneumonia," Bert returned simply. "The crisis is due tonight. There's always hope. You go to bed; you need the rest. I'll never leave until your father's past the crisis."

At first Mildred refused to obey the order, but she had been without sleep for forty-eight hours, and before she realized it her eyes were closing in slumber, and presently she dropped back exhausted on the bunk on which she had been sitting. Old Jim covered her with a blanket, then retired to his own bunk, fagged from the long, hard ride.

About midnight Mildred awoke. A kerosene lamp on the table threw strange shadows, as the flame waxed and waned. An occasional moan from her father showed he was still alive. Motionless beside the bunk sat Bert.

Mildred slept again, and the faint light of dawn was creeping through the window when she opened her eyes. There was no sound from her father, but Bert remained on watch. He must have heard her, for he turned weary-looking, bloodshot eyes on her.

"Your father," he said, anticipating her question, "has passed the crisis. He will recover."

She hurried to the bunk and saw her father slumbering peacefully. Turning, she saw Bert opening the door. He carried his case, and had on his coat and hat.

"Your father will get well," he repeated, "if you follow the implicit directions I have written on that paper you will find on the table. There is not a great deal of danger now, else I would not leave."

He passed out the door, pausing only to say:

"Good-by and good luck."

He shut the door, just as Jim crept from his bunk, stretching.

"Doc gone?" he inquired, looking about in an owlish manner. "Guess he was pretty well fagged, too. He's been settin' up with a sick mountaineer for about three nights straight."

Mildred went to the window. A short distance from the shanty she saw Bert moving slowly away, his shoulders bent forward. She hurried to the door, threw it open, and called:

"Oh, Bert, come back. Please, Bert, dear, come back."

CHANGES IN NEW ZEALAND

Native Races, Animals and Forests Being Displaced by Importations From Other Lands.

More rapid changes in animal and vegetable life are taking place in New Zealand than almost anywhere in the world. The native Polynesian race is disappearing before the European; the native wild animals amount to little in contests with the imported species, many of which now run wild; the streams are full of American and European trout, which attain an enormous size, and even the forests are being replaced by the planting of foreign trees as the native ones disappear.

Eleven million [illegible], oaks, spruces, Douglas firs and eucalyptus have already been planted and vast numbers of seedlings are coming in all the time. The reason for replacing the native trees with species from the United States, Europe and Australia is that those of New Zealand are too slow of growth, although some of them produce excellent timber. The implantations thrive everywhere.

FACTS DISPROVE OLD LEGEND

Seems a Pity to Spoil Good Witchcraft Story Long Believed by Mexican Peasants.

One of the strange legends of the City of Mexico is that of the Mulata de Cordoba. It is told, and believed among the lower classes, that a beautiful mulata who lived at Cordoba came to have the reputation of a witch, and by the sale of love charms and forecasts she amassed so much money that the Holy Inquisition seized her and charged her with witchcraft, with an idea of thus seizing her fortune. She was locked in a cell and sentenced to be burned, but on the morning of her doom a priest reported that he went to her prison to give her a last chance to confess, and that he found her putting the finishing touches to a chalk ship drawn on the walls.

He afterward swore that the woman laughed at him and jumped on the chalk lines, as if it were a real ship, and then, before his eyes, the ship sailed along the wall and through the end of the cell and disappeared, with the beautiful woman laughing mockingly back at him. The facts in the matter are that a beautiful young woman was held and about to be burned, and was freed before the execution, but investigators declare her escape was not via chalk-drawn ship but via the aid of a priest who proved more susceptible than his office warranted.

All for the Best.

Abe Carter was a pious, hard-working old darky, but evil days fell upon him. The boll weevil destroyed his cotton; his adopted baby died of fever, his horse was killed by lightning and a cyclone demolished his cabin.

The Episcopalian minister, hearing of Abe's extraordinary misfortunes, called to see him. "Abe," said the minister, "you have been sorely afflicted, but you must trust in the

NELLA RESOLVES

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As she brushed her short, curly hair Nella read the resolutions that she had tacked with three thumb-tacks at the side of the dressing table, where she would see them often:

1. Don't use rouge this year.
2. Rise every morning at 7:30.
3. Begin a savings account.
4. Don't quarrel with Paul.

It was at the last that she stopped and reread, and a frown showed between her brows.

"And yet he had said that she was a flirt, and it was altogether uncalled for." . . . Her thoughts halted and her eyes took in the last line.

"Absolutely the last quarrel," she told her mirror, and gave herself a critical glance.

In her golden brown dress with the glisten of myriads of tiny bronze beads, with the slippers that matched it so perfectly, and the amber-colored eyes that were even a more perfect match, Nella Waring was delightful.

Tonight the Warings always held open house, a charming occasion when young people and those still young at heart drifted in and talked and played and danced, when the wide old buffet in the dining room was loaded with sandwiches and cakes and coffee, and a tiny blue flame was under the brass chafing dish that lent an aromatic odor to the air.

No wonder that it had become a custom for people to drift in of a New Year's night—no wonder that Nella had dressed with such care—for Paul would be there.

Her brother John was playing his violin when she came down the stairs, and Nella stood listening a moment and hesitating.

How "homey" it looked! Her father over by the mantel talking to old Mr. Long and her mother in gray smiling faintly as the music drifted to her. Pauline and William already turning up the rugs in the west parlor and Kitty in her white dress and ribbons, in ecstasy over being allowed to remain up after bedtime.

Some one at the bottom of the stairs was watching her, and now he called "A bit slow, eh, Juliet?" as she turned her head toward him.

Nella smiled—sweetly—and nodded.

Any other night she would have refuted the charge with more than a little heat. Paul was surprised. He asked, as she reached the last step, and he still looked at her: "Nella, anything the matter?"

The ordinary Nella would have replied: "The matter! And you called me a flirt last night. . . . And the quarrel would be on. But Nella shook her head dreamily.

Across Paul's fair, boyish face a look of surprise, of half-alarm, shot; but he still smiled as he said: "Shall we dance?"

Nella slipped into his arms, and they floated out through the hall and into the west parlor, Nella with her eyes shut, half-dreamily; Paul with his arm about her tightening just a trifle.

"I say, Nella, you're lovely tonight! You're the prettiest girl I know," Paul said as they stopped for a moment in the deep embrasure of the window.

Nella only smiled and turned away, but he saw that the tip of her ear was scarlet.

Something was the matter. The ordinary Nella would have cried: "Don't be silly! I know you say that to every girl you meet!"

Paul was distinctly worried. He returned to the charge with a last shot:

"You remember what I said last night? I hate to tell you that it's true—"

But she was not listening; or else . . . Paul followed the direction of her eyes and saw another man entering the room—"that beastly Crawford fellow," he called him to himself.

Mr. Crawford having spoken to his hostess, made hastily for Nella, and Paul, watching him, dressed so well in his English clothes, with his light spats and the glasses with the heavy black ribbon, fumed inwardly.

"If you want to make your get away," he whispered.

But Nella had not heard. At least she was going forward with an outstretched hand; her face lighted at Mr. Crawford's words.

"I've been looking forward to this, you know," he said, with more than a hint of English accent. Paul stood a moment glaring at him, and then, rather than play the part of the outsider, he went over to the piano and pretended to be interested in the swirling black notes that danced before his eyes over the music.

So that was it! That interloper, that cad, was going to walk in and walk off with Nella right from under his nose! Why, he had been playing with Nella from the moment they sat side by side in kindergarten, and he had carried her books home from school to this very evening when they quarreled!

That was the whole trouble—they hadn't quarreled. Nella hadn't answered him back once; she hadn't even disagreed with him! The game was up. He groaned.

"Anything the matter, old chap?" the musician asked, looking up. "Those cream cheese sandwiches are a bit indigestible, but if—"

Paul could stand no more of this. He went back to the west parlor to see Nella dancing with that miserable elderly imitation of an Englishman, who must be thirty if he was a day.

But suddenly he cut in, and Nella was dancing with him. He whirled her out to the hall, and there at the end, where he could just see a sprig of dried green that hung below the lamp, he kissed her.

She pulled herself out of his arms. Her eyes were blazing and she confronted him with a chin thrown back.

"You—Paul! It's utterly unforgivable!" she said, her voice shaking with anger. "And after what you said last night you can do this. It's the last time I'll see you, the very last."

But she did not turn to walk away. Paul's backbone stiffened.

"Oh, Nella!" he breathed, and his voice even to her drumming ears was tipped with joy. "I was—I was afraid something was the matter. You hadn't quarreled with me tonight—" He hurried on, "and I knew if you said that it wasn't like me, that I didn't have a show—but now, Nella, it's announced tonight? Shall we, Nella, dear?" he caught her hand.

"Mr. Crawford's waiting for me," Nella dimpled, but Paul in the dimness could not see.

"That cad—that interloper—" he began hotly.

"You shouldn't call my friends names!" Nella said with her eyes sparkling.

"Oh, Nella, you tease, you wretch!" he said, and caught her hands.

That was how Nella's engagement was announced that night to the assembled company.

And that was why Nella, as she went up to her room very much later, scrawled out with her blackest pencil—resolution number four.

SING SING BARS SILK SHIRTS

Jazz Hose and Linen Collars Are Also Banned by Warden of New York Prison.

New York.—Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing issued an order forbidding the convicts to wear silk shirts, fancy neckties, silk socks and linen collars.

Henceforth they will have to confine their sartorial embellishments to the prison uniform supplied by the state, which is compact and comfortable but not beautiful.

The warden found the order necessary because of the increasing number of convicts who get money from home and who have been expending it on clothing, so the yard of the prison began to resemble a rainbow drunk on home-made hootch.

The guards, even with their brass buttons, have been quite eclipsed by the jazz shirts and neckties.

DROP IN CROP VALUES

Decline of More Than Five Billion Shown in 1920.

Corn Leads the List With $1,662,000,000—Ten Crops Show Gain in Value, Oranges Leading.

Washington.—The value of farm crops of 1920 and of the farm animal products and animals sold and slaughtered, as finally determined by the bureau of crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, is $19,856,000,000 or $5,105,000,000 below the total of 1919. The drop is almost entirely confined to crops, among which the chief declines in value are: Corn, $1,662,000,000; cotton lint and seed, $1,300,000,000; wheat, $854,000,000; hay, tame and wild, $325,000,000; tobacco, $248,000,000; and oats, $161,000,000.

On the other hand, as many as ten crops gained in value, chief of which are oranges, with a gain of $32,000,000, and sugar beets, $24,000,000. Other items of gain are cabbage, $11,000,000; cowpeas, $10,000,000; sorghum cane sold and sirup made, $7,000,000. Small gains were made by soy beans, sugar-beet seed, maple sugar and sirup, and onions. Apparently, the products of the farm wood lot have gained $223,000,000 in value in the comparison with 1919.

After offsetting gains against losses, the net crop-value reduction in 1920 below 1919 is $4,888,000,000, while only $237,000,000 is found in the total of farm animal products and farm animals sold and slaughtered. The wool decline is as yet unrealized, but it is reckoned at $37,000,000. Of the animals sold and slaughtered, the decline for cattle and calves is $223,000,000, and for swine, $427,000,000. But on the other side of the account, dairy products gained $311,000,000, and poultry raised and eggs produced, $160,000,000.

It is the rule that, in the upward and downward movements of prices, farm animals and animal products lag behind crops. So extreme was the lag in the price of animals and animal products in 1920, on account of the extraordinary fall in the prices of crops with a short period of time, that the total crop value of 1920 is reckoned to be only 56 per cent of the total value of all farm products. In the estimates for a long series of years, this is the first crop value estimate that has fallen below 60 per cent of the total of all products.

LINCOLN

Mr. Lincoln's clear sense of justice has been recognized by the world. He is said to have often preached this sermon to his own boys: "Don't drink, don't smoke, don't chew, don't swear, don't gamble, don't lie, don't cheat. Love your fellow men, and love God. Love truth, love virtue and be happy."

The purity of the personal habits of the boy, enabled the man to utter one of the most beautiful testimonials in any language. It was this. "I have never knowingly planted a thorn in any human breast, but I have always endeavored to pluck a thorn and plant a rose wherever a rose would grow."

The boy who gained self-mastery over his personal habits also gained the mastery over poverty, by making the best of his limited opportunities. He used his muscle to turn up the soil for the seed; he used his brains to turn up the riches of true advancement.—F. W. Adams.

LINCOLN'S HEART OF LOVE

One day, when the President was with the troops who were fighting at the front, the wounded, both Union and Confederate, began to pour in.

As one stretcher was passing Lincoln, he heard the voice of a lad calling to his mother in agonizing tones. Lincoln's great heart filled. He forgot the great crisis of the moment. He ordered the carriers to stop. Kneeling and bending over the wounded soldier, he asked, "What can I do for you, my boy?" "Oh, you will do nothing for me," he replied, "You are a Yankee. I can't hope that any message will ever reach my mother."

Lincoln, in tears, his voice full of tenderest love, convinced the lad of his sincerity, and he gave his good-by words without reserve. The President ordered them copied, and ordered that they be sent that night, with a flag of truce, into the enemy's lines.—Selected.

LINCOLN THE CHRISTIAN

In 1860 in a conversation with Mr. Bates, State Superintendent of Public Schools, Lincoln said: "I am not a Christian. God knows I would be one." Then taking a New Testament from his pocket he began to protest against the opposition of certain clergymen to his candidacy. Mark his language. "These men well know that I am for freedom in the territories, freedom everywhere so far as the Constitution and the laws will permit, and my opponents are for slavery.

"They know this and yet with this book in their hands, in the light of which human bondage cannot live a moment, they are going to vote against me,—I am nothing, but the truth is every thing. I know I am right, for I know liberty is right, for Christ teaches it and Christ is God." This conviction, like leaven wrought slowly its own blessed effect in his soul.

His confession is noteworthy. "When I was first inaugurated I did not love my Savior, but when God took my son I was greatly impressed; but still I did not love him; but when I stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg I gave my heart to Christ, and I can now say I do love the Savior."—Selected.

Social Stunts

Mrs. Melvin Bents entertained the Elite Club and their husbands, Thursday evening, February 10th, in honor of her husband's birthday. Those enjoying the occasion were: Mrs. J. O. Jenkins and son John, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Spangler, Mr. and Mrs. E. Houdashelt and son Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Bigler, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cox. All had the best time possible.

Despite the inclement weather on Thursday evening, Feb. 10, friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. West, 505 S. Warren to remind Mr. West and his mother, Mrs. Josephine West they had reached another milestone on life's journey.

The evening was spent with recitations and music; lunch was served which was enjoyed by all. The honorees were the recipients of many useful and beautiful presents, with the sincere wishes of many happy returns of the day.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Calendine, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. D. Catanese, Mrs. John Cartwell, Mrs. Ruth Carter, Mrs. Pearl Lord, Mrs. Frank Roth and son, Raymond, Mrs. Leola Barlow and son, John, Mrs. Lewis Stierberger and son, Philip, Miss Cressie Pittinger, Masters Frank Holycross Jr., John Spellman, Russel and Albert Holten.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Strader, Gilbert St., Mrs. Orra Morris, Brown Rd. and Mrs. C. F. Ditrick, N. Warren Ave., were informally entertained at the home of Mrs. Catherine Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Mason in Powell, Ohio, on Sunday.

The occasion was made replete with mirth and happiness by the added presence of the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of the family, making the day one of lifelong remembrance.

Miss Helen McColly entertained with a Valentine and birthday party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McColly, 455 S. Warren Ave., on Monday evening. Refreshments were served to 3 little friends who assembled to help celebrate, with games and music, the 8th anniversary of her natal d... Those present besides the little h...tess were: Misses Flora Kuch, Florine Hughes, Gazelle Conners, Ruth Scott, Josephine Davis, Marie Dixon, Wilma Elliott and Marcella Dahline.

All former residents of Gallia County, Ohio, take notice. You are most cordially invited to attend the next meeting of the Gallia County Friendship organization, which will be held at Washington Park Shelter House, Tuesday, February 22nd, 7 P. M. Why not come and meet old and make new friends? An interesting program is planned.

Mrs. Samuel Stephenson of 39 N. Harris Ave. entertained a crowd of young people with a Heart's party on Saturday evening. Hearts formed the pretty and seasonable decoration.

Victrola music, various games and piano selections by Mrs. Stephenson contributed to the merriment of all at the end of which refreshments were served. A most delightful evening will long linger in the memory of the guests present who were: Miss May George, Miss May Thompson, Miss Edna Kuch, Miss Winifred Bishop, Miss Olive Conners and Miss Cressy Pittenger and Mr. William Hill, Mr. Bernard Anthony, Mr. Fred Williams, Mr. Herbert Swain and Mr. Victor McArthur.

The Needle Art Club met at the home of Mrs. Clevenger, Feb. 9th. Mrs. Nader of Lancaster and Mrs. Scholls were guests of the day.

The question for debate: Resolved, That Vinton County has fewer "huts" than Gallia county. The affirmative of three won with flying colors over the negative of six. The piano selections were very much enjoyed by all. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess. Next meeting at the home of Mrs. A. V. Allen, 128 N. Ogden Ave., Wednesday, Feb. 23rd.

The Owaissa Class of Glenwood M. E. Church met at the home of their president, Frances Fairchild, 62 S. Eureka, February 11th. After a long business meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present were Mrs. Kennedy, the Misses Lucille Glick, Delsie Fisher, Irene Snyder, Lucille Kellar, Frances Fairchild, Pauline Chatfield, Ruth Holder, Ruth Roller, Dorothy Strong, Alice Mitchell, Ruth Negus and Vella Peters.

The Federation of Churches will hold a prayer service for Missions at 2:30 Friday, February 18, at the Central M. E. church. Gipsy Smith will be the speaker. This is under the auspices of Federation of Women's Societies. All ladies are urged to attend.

Seiller Bros. who have one of the most enterprising stores on the Hilltop, are again backing a basketball team under the name of Seillers. The team is going much stronger this year than last, when they won the championship of Columbus. By signing Dick Baker, of Circleville fame, and Dooley Schenck, former Captain of Bates Pirates, they have made a remarkable road record, winning 10 out of 11 games. Some of the teams defeated by Seillers are, Circleville A. C., Shawnee Indians, Junction City, Plain City, Hemlock, and Lancaster who were trounced by a 34 to 20 score last Thursday night.

Seillers, who are trying to book a game with the Pure Oil Company to be played at Glenwood Shelter House, expect big support from Hilltop rooters, as several of Seiller players are from this section of the city and are advertising a Hilltop business house. As all previous games have been played on foreign floors, Seillers expect to make a big showing at Glenwood, should this game be arranged. The lineup and score for the Lancaster game:

| Seillers 34 | | Lancaster 20 |
|---|---|---|
| Schenck | L. F. | McClure |
| Baker | R. F. | Leiverman |
| Graves | C. | E. Petty |
| Corder | L. G. | C. Petty |
| Welch | R. G. | Plinke |

Field goals—Seillers: Schenck 2, Baker 3, Graves 11. Lancaster: McClure 4, Leiverman 1, E. Petty 3, Plinke 1. Foul Goals—Seillers: Baker 2—2. Lancaster: E. Petty 2—4.

Hilltop Deaths

Dorothy, the 13 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Gillen, died at her home, 52 S. Oakley, Friday, February 11th, of leakage of the heart. She had been ailing for about two years, and though confined to her home for the past three months she was a patient sufferer, and heroically endured her afflictions to the last, expressing her faith in a loving Savior and a readiness to be with him. She leaves, beside her parents, one sister and one brother. The funeral was conducted at the residence on Monday with burial at Alton, Ohio.

Winfield S. Rhoads, 68, retired, died of paralysis Monday night at the home of his son, Herbert Rhoads, 366 Whitethorne-av. He leaves two sons and two sisters. Funeral at 10:30 a. m. Thursday at the Reynoldsburg M. E. Church. Burial in silent Home Cemetery, Reynoldsburg.

David M. Rings, 64, retired farmer, died of complications Monday at the home of his son, John Rings, engineer in the police department, 67 S. Terrace-av. He leaves two sons, John and George Rings, and one daughter, Mrs. Clara Binckley. Funeral from the residence at 1 p. m. Thursday. Services at 1:30 p. m. at St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, Martin-av. Burial in Dublin cemetery.

Marion J. Welch, 47, stock broker, member of the firm of Kobmann & Welch, Comstock Building, died of pneumonia Saturday night at his home, 165 Midland-av. He was a member of the Elks. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Theresa Welch, mother and three brothers. Funeral services were at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the residence. Burial in Green Lawn Cemetery by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Mrs. Mary Glean, 85, widow, died of infirmities of age Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Rader, 248 S. Ogden-av. She leaves one son and one daughter. The body was sent to Bowling Green, O., for funeral and burial by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Mrs. Louisa Smeltzer, widow of John Smeltzer, born April 28th, 1833, at rest February 7th, 1921, age 87 years, 10 months and 21 days. Died at the home of her daughter, 21 S. Wheatland Ave., Columbus, Ohio. Mrs. Smeltzer was a consistent christian and a member of the M. E. Church for forty-three years, and dearly loved by all that knew her. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. J. H. Carter of Columbus, Ohio, and two sons, A. E. of Newark, Ohio, and H. W. of Thurman, Ohio; also 11 grandchildren, and 9 great-grandchildren. Mrs. Smeltzer was also a member of the W. C. T. U.

Did you hear the fine program the B. Y. P. U. of Hill Crest had last Sunday evening on the Life of Abraham Lincoln? Well if you didn't you missed something, but just you come out next Sunday evening, and every Sunday evening; we have something worth while every Sunday evening. COME OUT AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.

The Hilltop Branch of the Citizens' Trust and Saving Co. was in operation two months on the 11th of February, and reports having done a fine business during this period of time. Hilltop people are daily realizing what a great advantage it is to have a bank in our midst, and it has already made the impression that we could not get along without it. It behooves all Hilltop people to patronize this new enterprise, as it is backed by some of Columbus' best citizens, and gives the Hilltop a standing that is worth having.
